We have never seen so many beautiful flowers and so much good dinner. We wish to meet you all with us at Cane Creek in September. There will be an all day singing at the almshouse on the third Sunday in July. Let's all begin to prepare to make the old folks happy by singing God's praises to them on that day.—Secretary, Mrs. Ruth Henley.

W. G. SHAW WRITES

I wish to thank the voters of Chilton County for their vote and especially the voters of the first district. However I was defeated but I was the highest man in the first district. I carried my home beat 13 votes more than all my opponents. I received 22 more votes in Beat 2 than my next highest opponent.

I feel grateful to the people of the first district, for if I had been elected they are the ones I would have to work with. I hear there are some reports on me. Will say my race was clean, and my past life is open to the wide, wide world. I never was arrested nor indicted for any crime. Never in the insane asylum. I am thankful my health has always been good and never affected my mind. I am married and living with my wife; have never married any other woman and separated. Have been in several kinds of business. Have never made my wife a free dealer.

Voters, when you hear of men riding over the county lecturing for a candidate, find out whether he is a relative, employer or working for the good of the county.—Respectfully, W. G. Shaw.

Far ahead OF LAST YEAR'S GREAT SALES RECORD —and here's what's doing it . . .

THIS FAMOUS WINNING COMBINATION OF FEATURES

not found in any other low-priced car

KNEE-ACTION WHEELS FULLY ENCLOSED AND WEATHERPROOF

80 HORSEPOWER—80 MILES AN HOUR valve-in-head six of matchless economy

CABLE-CONTROLLED BRAKES smooth and safe in any weather

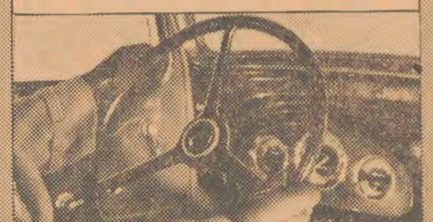
BODIES BY FISHER
the biggest and finest among low-priced cars

SHOCK-PROOF STEERING
not found on any other low-priced car



It was a great record of leadership that Chevrolet made in 1933! It's an even greater, more impressive record that Chevrolet is making for 1934! Already, sales are tens of thousands of cars ahead of last year. Production is running higher than that of any other automobile company in the world. And every day, from state after state, comes the same report on registrations: Chevrolet is leading all other cars!

The big reason for such preference is plainly shown at the right. Chevrolet has so many vital features that others in the low-price field have left out: Knee-Action wheels that are fully enclosed for complete safety and absolute dependability. A six-cylinder valve-in-head engine with an exclusive "Blue-Flame" head. Big, "cable-controlled" brakes, the best in the low-price field. Large, spacious bodies by Fisher, with Fisher No Draft Ventilation. And real "shock-proof" steering that brings new ease and comfort to driving. No other low-priced automobile has a single one of these five leading 1934 features. That's why no other can be backed by such a confident statement as this:

Drive it only 5 miles and you'll never be satisfied with any other low-priced car

VERMONT SCHOOL

Commencement exercises were held on last Friday night, marking the close of the 1933-34 school term. This was the initial graduating program, dedicated to the new school building. The auditorium was filled with admiring parents and friends.

The four students who completed the ninth grade work were as follows: Mary Jo Chandler, class president; Edna Sims, class valedictorian; Mary Owen, class historian; T. J. Ratliff, class prophet.

The seven students completing the sixth grade are as follows: Audra Ratliff, Willie Hayes, Nell Chandler, Zannie Hayes, Josie Mae Deason, John Robert Klinner, Earl Clenner.

Dr. S. J. Ezell and superintendent Luther E. Little were the speakers for the occasion. Dr. Ezell presented a twenty-five minute address to the class, centering his talk around the subject of "Go On!" Into this highly inspirational talk he wove many illustrations as to the ultimate consequences coming to those who do not move forward in their educational attainments, also pointing out that in this specialized age that one untrained cannot hope and expect to compete with those boys and girls who in some way have managed to "Go On" and qualify themselves for the richer, fuller and brighter life.

Superintendent Little then rounded out the evening program with a ten minute address on the social and moral value of an education. The talks were simplified to the extent that any normal elementary pupil could understand its purpose and with a keener vision look into the uncertainties of the future with brighter hope and a greater confidence.

On Saturday morning following the Friday night's graduating exercises, one hundred and seven pupils, parents and friends of the Vermont school gathered at the school buliding and took leave for the picnic grounds at Log Cabin beach, where a real day of joy and gladness was spent. Everyone attending this merry event came away feeling much better and happier for having attended. We regret that quite a number of the school pupils were withheld from the day's pleasures on account of being confined with the measles. We trust however that next year will find all the student body present.

Our P.-T. A. meets next Saturday night at 7:30. All members and friends are especially urged and invited to attend. Our P.-T. A. has accomplished a number of worthwhile purposes this year, such as purchasing a piano, song books, class room material, construction of stage and stage euipment, etc. We aim, however, to more worthwhile accomplishments next year such as fitting out the building with shades, installing lights, and beautifying the campus.

The faculty wishes to extend to those loyal parents and friends of Vermont school their heartfelt appreciation for the splendid cooperation received from each.

Miss Ruth Mize has resigned as teacher in the public schools and has accepted a position as saleslady in the Yellow Front Store at Maplesville. Miss Mize will be pleased to have her friends call on her at her new place of business.

T. L. McKEE THANKS VOTERS

To the Voters of Chilton County:

It was with a great deal of pride and appreciation that I noted the very flattering vote I received in my race for the Democratic nomination as Tax Collector of Chilton County in the May 1st primary. I appreciated beyond expression this indication of confidence in me and my ability to serve the people in this capacity.

And I want to assure, not only those who cast their votes for me, but every citizen in the county, that if I am successful in the coming elections I shall bend every effort toward rendering a service commensurate with the high standards of the people to be served.

To those who rendered such worthy assistance in behalf of my candidacy, I want to express my utmost appreciation and solicit your further assistance in the run-off, June 12; and to those many friends who cast their votes for either of my opponents in the recent election, I solicit your vote and assistance in the coming election, to be held June 12, assuring you that it shall be gratefully appreciated, and in the event of my nomination, I shall endeavor to render my best efforts for our party in the November election.

Because of the brief period between now and the coming primary, it will be impossible for me to again see all the voters in the county, so I urge my friends in the several communities to consider my interests in this campaign and solicit as many of our friends to join with us in assuring my nomination in the coming election.

If I am nominated, I sincerely hope that my life will always be such that it will never be possible for anyone who participated in my nomination to regret that participation. — Sincerely, T. L. McKee.

STAPP NOW AT COMPRESS HELM

Former Chilton County Farm Agent Manager of Dallas Compress

Cohen Stapp, new contact man for the Dallas Compress Company, and whose constructive work as a farm agent in several Alabama counties in recent years has been commended throughout the state, has assumed active charge of his new duties, and is being welcomed to Selma by a host of friends who are delighted that he has become a citizen of this city. Mr. and Mrs. Stapp have taken possession of the home of Mrs. John E. Tate, of 31 Edgewood.

Mr. Stapp came to Selma from Dothan, where he had been stationed as county agent for some months, going there from Clanton, where he had made his home while farm agent of Chilton County for six years. Letters and other messages from business leaders of Dothan have attested to the regret felt over Mr. Stapp's departure from Dothan, where his work resulted in great benefit to the farmers of Houston County.

While making his home in Clanton, Mr. Stapp was active in Kiwanis affairs of this division, serving as a Lieutenant Governor and in other important capacities. He was responsible mainly for the organization of the Clanton Kiwanis Club six years ago, and Selma Kiwanians who know of his untiring and enthusiastic work for the organization are hailing his affiliation with the Selma club. Resolutions passed by the Kiwanis Club of Clanton upon his removal from Chilton County to Houston deplored his departure from that section, where his work as a farm leader put Chilton County among the leading units of the state; where he worked to keep the high standards and purposes of the Kiwanis Club before the public; and where he was every inch a citizen worthy of respect, love and confidence, and one who expanded his activities not only in Kiwanis work but also among the Boy Scouts, 4-H Club work, and in other civic, religious, social and recreational movements.

Mr. Stapp, who is looking forward with pleasure to his contacts in the Selma trade territory, Saturday stated: "My recent connection with the Dallas Compress Company has brought me into the midst of Selma citizens, and I wish very much to be considered as one. It is my desire to be a worthwhile citizen and to prove worthy of the confidence and friendship I have been given.

"For six and a half years I had the pleasure of serving in Chilton County, which I consider a part of the Selma trade territory, and during that time I made many pleasant acquaintances not only in Chilton but also Dallas, Autauga, Shelby, Bibb and Perry Counties, and it is my hope to reach soon Lowndes, Wilcox, Marengo and other counties in the Selma trade territory. I am more than willing and glad to take any part that I can in the general progress and development of this wonderful section of Alabama."—Selma Times-Journal.

Burglars Entered Taylor's Store

Burglars entered the store of the Taylor Dry Goods Company in Clanton Tuesday night, and carried away a large quantity of merchandise. After the first check-up Wednesday morning the management said they had missed forty to fifty pairs of shoes and a number of other items. They expect the loss finally to check up as a very considerable amount. It is thought that the stolen goods were carried away in a truck. Entry to the store was gained by breaking through a sky light. No clue was available as to the identity of the robbers.

DIXON CLUB ORGANIZED

On Tuesday afternoon at four p.m. in the home of Mrs. J. P. Hayes, former members of the Leon McCord-for Governor Club met and became organized into a Dixon-for-Governor Club.

By motion it was agreed that officers of the McCord Club serve identically in the Dixon-for-Governor Club. It was further agreed that it might be more practical to meet in a more centrally located place. Arrangements were, therefore, accordingly made, whereby the meetings scheduled for each Tuesday afternoon at five o'clock, be held in the courthouse.

Mr. C. Fenn Jones, county campaign manager for Dixon, was present at Tuesday afternoon's meeting and graciously discussed the various planks that characterize the Dixon platform.

Dixon followers are very cordially invited to meet with and participate in the Dixon club affairs on these and all occasions. There are absolutely no membership nor other fees. However, any free will donation will be acceptable, for naturally, there is always expense attached to anything that has a "feather's weight of worth."

UNION-BANNER WILL PRINT BIBLE STORIES IN PICTURES

The Union-Banner has arranged to print a series of Bible pictures, or rather picture stories, the first of which appears on another page of this issue. There are forty-eight of these pictures, and every one of them very interestingly depict a Bible story that you have read about in your family Bible or have heard your preacher tell about. Look up these pictures in this paper. We do not promise to run one every week, but they will be used as space will permit until all forty-eight have been printed.

These pictures and the right to run them cost The Union-Banner real hard money, and we want our readers to get the benefit of it. They are no kind of advertising or free stuff that some propagandist furnishes to put a biased idea over, but are real reproductions from artists of world-wide fame. It will be worth your while to read and study these pictures.

First-Aid Stations Will Be Installed

Under Direction of Chilton County Chapter of the Red Cross

Plans have been made by the Chilton County Chapter of the American Red Cross for the establishment and maintenance of two officially designated Red Cross first aid stations on the Birmingham-Montgomery highway in Chilton County. One station will be opened at the New Deal Inn at Jemison right away. Another is being arranged to open at Hardy's Service Station at Verbena.

Samuel Martin is chairman of the first aid committee of the County Chapter, and will direct the establishment and operation of the stations. Equipment constituting a full first-aid kit for the two stations has already been bought by the Chapter.

Some weeks ago a class of about thirty persons in the county took the first aid course through cooperation of the Red Cross and the C. W. A. Certificates were awarded to them. Some of this class will be designated to administer first aid at the highway stations. Mr. Martin says it will be necessary to train some others in the vicinity of the proposed stations, and another class is being contemplated.

Red Cross First Aid stations are being established at fourteen points on the Bee Line Highway between Florida and Tennessee, according to C. H. McFarland, Alabama Director. These stations with trained first-aid men at hand all the time, will be a fine thing for the traveling public. Thereby it will be possible for any who may be injured in the vicinity of the stations to secure first- aid treatment immediately before being carried to a hospital.

SINGING AT SAGINAW, SHELBY CO.

There will be an all day singing at Saginaw in Shelby County next Sunday, at the Saginaw school building. Everything looks good for a fine singing, and the people of Chilton County are invited to attend.—Sincerely, P. B. Shaw.

CARS IN COLLISION

A head-on collision between Melvin Easterling's stovewood truck and Ed Miner's Ford Monday resulted in serious damage to the latter machine. None of the occupants were injured. The accident happened near the County High School.

L. C. ROSS MOVING TO DECATUR

Mr. L. C. Ross left this week for Decatur, where he will take charge of the commission agency of Sinclair Refining Company for the distribution of Sinclair products in Morgan and Limestone Counties.

The family of Mr. Ross will go to Decatur to live as soon as he gets his business interests straightened out and in working order.

For several years past Mr. Ross has been traveling for the Brown Shoe Company, the while living in Clanton. The many friends of the Ross family here will regret that they are to leave Clanton.

Johnnie Miner was severely cut and bruised by a truck accident last Saturday. As he was returning from Montgomery where he had carried a load of produce, his truck ran off the road near the county line and struck a post.

It required considerable patching and plastering to fix Mr. Miner up so he can continue to navigate.

REGULAR SERVICES AT SAMARIA NEXT SUUNDAY

The pastor, Rev. J. W. Jones, will preach at Samaria church next Sunday at the regular hours. All members are urged to attend, and visitors will receive a cordial welcome.

52 Families Now On Rural Rehabilitation

New Relief Program Is Being Applied in Chilton County

Montgomery, Ala., May 15.—In Chilton County 52 families had been enrolled in the Rural Rehabilitation program of the Alabama Relief Administration through the week ending May 12, R. K. Green, State Rehabilitation Director, announced today.

Budgets for these families call for a total expenditure of $4,955.21, most of which will be released immediately into local channels for the purchase of supplies, implements and other necessities.

Throughout the state 2,141 families have been enrolled and their budgets approved. The total cash outlay as represented by these budgets is $193,857.30. The budgets cover periods of approximately eight months and the cost of helping these destitute families regain an economic footing is often and rarely more than would be required to provide them with food and other necessities under the old "direct" relief system for the same period.

Landowners, upon whom much of the success of the program depends, have been glad to cooperate, once the aim of the program has been explained, according to Director Greene. Through their cooperation much land, which otherwise would have remained idle, is being cultivated to grow produce crops.

The destitute family, in return for the use of the land, agrees to repair the farm buildings and fences and the administration, through local, practical and experienced farm foremen are responsible for fulillment of this agreement. The foreman also supervises the planting, plowing, and harvesting of the crops and a large part of the produce will be preserved by canning or drying.

All that has been advanced the family by the administration must be repaid in produce, or in work on public projects. Produce thus received will be used by the administration to feed destitute families in the urban areas.

NRA MAY ABANDON SERVICE CODES IN NEAR FUTURE

Washington, May 11.—The most far-reaching change in National Recovery Administration policy since its inauguration was under consideration today with recovery officials admitting codes for service trades and small businesses might be abandoned.

Two factors prompted the possible change. First, was the desire of NRA to be free of the endless complications which have arisen in administration of code for dyers and cleaners, laundries, barber and beauty shops, hotels, restaurants and similar businesses. Second, the administration's wish to free its staff from the mass of complaints, correspondence and legal proceedings.

Such action, it was pointed out, would permit NRA to concentrate on administering major codes. Most officials agree that in steel, coal, automobile, graphic arts, lumber and other manufacturing industries the greatest work of national recovery lies.

Price fixing applied in the service codes has provided a large majority of the complaints received by the compliance division. Dyers and cleaners established a national code with a minimum price scale which it has been almost impossible to enforce and which NRA officials now admit the administration had no right to set up.—The Birmingham Post.

NATIONAL SOCIAL WORKERS MEET IN KANSAS CITY, 20-26

New York.—William Hodson, president of the 1934 National Conference of Social work and commissioner of public welfare of New York City, has issued a call to the citizens of the United States interested in improving social conditions of the country, to attend the 61st annual meeting of the national conference of social work in Kansas City, Missouri, May 20-26.

Prior to his appointment by Mayor LaGuardia to the post of commissioner of public welfare, Mr. Hodson was executive secretary of the welfare council of New York City.

A review of the early beginners of the national conference of social work makes it seem rather fitting that this year's conference should be presided over by the welfare commissioner of America's largest city. The first social work conference in the United States was held in New York City in May, 1874. The conference, originally called the conference of charities, was sponsored by the American social science association for the purpose of bringing together the various state board officials administering public charity in the United States. Today it has grown until it has become one of the largest discussion conferences in the United States, with a membership of over 4,000 including social workers in governmental and private supported welfare services in every state and city in the union.

Emphasizing the importance of the conference, Mr. Hodson states that the year 1934 present to the United States unusual problems connected with social readjustment in the economic change. "The problems," declares Mr. Hodson, "are a challenge to us as citizens. If we have worked in the past for better social planing and greater security for mankind, the last five years have taught us that these efforts are not enough. We must take the fact that we have in hand and work unitedly and with greater force to make life in our country more worthwhile for all people. The speakers of the national conference of social work are men and women who have had long years of experience in dealing with social problems. Because of their wealth of practical experience, what they say is of extreme value in intelligent planning for the future.

"Private citizens as taxpayers and contributors to welfare projects should know what is going on in the country and share in its plans of rebuilding. I therefore, issue an invitation not only to all who are in social work, but to the legions of others outside its ranks to attend one of the most important conferences of the year—the annual meeting of the National Conference of Social Work."

WHY do you suppose Chevrolet keeps repeating, in all of its advertising, "Drive it only 5 miles"? Here's the reason: Chevrolet engineers have tried out all the various makes of cars in today's low-price field. And they have proved to their complete satisfaction, the same things that hundreds of thousands of Chevrolet owners are proving in their daily driving: How much more smoothly a car travels with genuine, fully-enclosed Knee-Action. How much more comfortably it handles, with shock-proof steering. How much more restfully you ride, in a Fisher Body car. How much more safely you drive, with cable-controlled brakes. And how much finer performance and better economy are secured from an overhead-valve Six! In other words, Chevrolet engineers know for sure that the Chevrolet ride simply can't be matched by any other in the low-price field. They know it—thousands of owners know it—and now we want you to know it too, before you make your final choice of a low-priced car.

INK DROPS
COUNTY HIGH SCHOOL
By Dan Smith

"Farewell"

If this were a book that I was writing, I would give it the title of "Farewell." Only four days after today and Chilton County High School will close its twentieth scholastic year. This week's column is the last of a two-year effort to keep the public informed as to the activities of Chilton County High school. The writer, with apologies, wishes to be personal in saying that a touch of sentiment is attached to the writing of Ink Drops this week. But I must save my personal remarks until the last for there is still some news from C. C. H. S.

Dont' forget the presentation of Jr. High School diplomas at the high school auditorium tonight at eight o'clock. See the names of both the Junior High candidates for graduation and the Senior High candidates for graduation on the front page.

An Announcement

The Senior III Class wishes to announce that seats for the fathers and mothers of the graduating seniors will be reserved at the presentation of diplomas Monday night. These seats will be in the center section and will be tied off with ribbons. All parents are requested to tell the ushers.

With the humble courtesy of reserving seats for their parents, the seniors wish to express their appreciation of their parents' loyal patronage.

At the commencement program Monday night the Senior Class will formally present the school with a beautiful oil treated print of the famous Whistler of his mother. This picture will be approximately 22 x 40, and will have a gold finished frame. This highly commended and reverenced picture will be the third gift from the Senior Class to the school. The first was an entrance gate for the southern end of the driveway and the second was the attractive sun dial with benches, now seen on the campus.

The school is rightfully proud of the Senior Class of 1934, who with the splendid leadership of its president, John Ezell, and the never waning cooperation and spirit of their sponsor, Miss Frances Gulledge, has left a record to be sought after by other classes. In a financial viewpoint the class has handled in a most wise manner several hundred dollars. The class has shown and proven to possess true school spirit. The scholastic achievements of many of its members justifies its claim to be an intelligent class.

It is interesting to know that the Senior Class that will graduate next Monday night was the Junior I Class when Professor L. C. Warr, our present and re-elected principal, first assumed his duties at C. C. H. S.

Numbers of people have received their invitation to the graduating exercises by now as the invitations were mailed out Monday.

the formal change of seats between the Juniors and the Seniors. Every year at the last chapel period the Seniors move to the rear of the auditorium and allow the Juniors to occupy the front seats where the Seniors always sit. This tradition is always carried out with an appropriate program including speeches by the presidents of the two classes. It's somewhat sad in a way.

Whom will the Honor Key be presented to?

The setting itself for the class

Last Tuesday the Chilton County High School baseball team played the last game of their season. This game was with Marbury at Marbury. Friday of last week saw our boys in Montevallo playing the school there. The score was in favor of Montevallo, 6 to 0. C. C. H. S. looks up with pride to the splendid record made by Coach Searcy and the boys.

The chapel period yesterday, being the last one of the year, witnessed night tomorrow night at eight o'clock is worth coming to see. The stage of the auditorium will be decorated as a flower garden. It is most beautiful, something entirely new to C. C. H. S. The program will be suited to the setting for instance; the Seniors will be speoken of as the flowers in the garden and the teachers will be called the gardeners. One just cannot stay away from the Senior Class night. On this night the Seniors will have their fun with the many humorous stunts. The time is eight o'clock.

Remember, Dr. Zebulon Judd, dean of education, at Auburn, will be the baccalaureate speaker at the graduation exercises Monday night at eight o'clock.

Beginning yesterday, Wednesday afternoon and continuing tomorrow Friday at noon final examinations are in progress.

Thirty candidates for graduation. The graduating class this year is one of the largest C. C. H. S. has ever had.

Mention must be given to the flower books that were made by the members of Mr. Varnell's biology class. Since there is not enough room to mention all the students, it would be unfair to comment on just one because everyone is a masterpiece within itself. It can be said truthfully that they all are "A-1."

Who Am I? * * * Yes, you guessed correctly. Last week it was Sara Lawrence. And since there will be no edition of Ink Drops next week, Who Am I will not be published this week. If in any way the writer caused any inconvenience whatsoever to any person mentioned in this section, the writer apologizes.

The writer wishes to use the remaining space for several personal articles. May I?

First, I wish to extend thanks from the bottom of my heart to my readers. Though they may be small in number, I wish to thank them for spending their time to read this column. I sincerely hope that my efforts have not been wasted. My readers, I pray, received real information from my column. This was entirely a personal column, and if there is any compaints, make them to me alone, for as the sole writer, it is my duty to receive them. Again, thank you dear readers.

Secondly, my deepest appreciation and best of feelings to the teachers of C. C. H. S. is expressed most heartily. I want to thank Mr. Warr for the encouragement and cooperation he has given to me not only pertaining to Ink Drops but also as a student. Words cannot be found in which to express my opinion to you, Mr. Warr. All I can find words to say is that I do not regret being a student under you.

Those teachers by whom I was fortunate to be taught have my most sincere wishes and thanks. Misses Frances Gulledge and Clyde Smilie, and Mr. J. B. Varnell, I assure you that I feel much richer in knowledge after being a student under you. And to you teachers who were not my class teachers, I have the deepest reverence for the inspiration and standards that you set before me. I wish to thank Miss Frances Gulledge for the assistance she gave me as a critic for Ink Drops. Again my humble but truest thanks to the members of the faculty of Chilton County High School.

Not to mention my fellow students would be wrong. Although I have only a few lines left I will speak of them, not individually, but as a body of students with whom I have enjoyed every moment and realized many benefits. My fellow classmates deserve honorable mention, but space permits me to only say, "I'll always remember you."

The members of the faculty and the members of the student body of Chilton County High school deserve the richest of praises—those bestowed only on an institution which has rendered a true service to its community.

Personally I would like to see someone continue to write a school column and I hope that they will do a lots better job than I did with Ink Drops.

So long, Mack. You are a real good janitor.

CONCERT AT FRIENDSHIP ON FRIDAY NIGHT, MAY 25

On Friday night, May 25, at 8:00 p.m., the students of the singing school at Friendship, one mile out on the Lay Dam road, will entertain at a concert.

This will be the closing exercise of a 20-day singing school, taught by Prof. Emmett M. Wilson. Good music, singing, and special out-of-the-ordinary acts are promised on the program. The school has about 30 students, and all of these, together with other local performers, will appear on the program. A small admission charge will be made.

Prof. Wilson also calls attention to the fact that Thursday night of this week (tonight) is "visitors night" at which time everyone is invited.

SUNSHINE NEWS

Our Sunday school is growing rapidly, but Sunday school was omitted at Sunshine and at Refuge last Sunday on account of Miss Gertia Mae Easterling being seriously sick, but she seems to be better and improving a little.

Rev. E. J. Orange will preach at Sunshine Saturday night and Sunday, and we are looking for Sister Pearl Ballen to be there and start a meeting for a week or two. Everybody is invited to come and be with us.

The fourth Sunday in May will be union day at Sunshine, all day meeting and dinner. Everybody is invited to come and bring a full basket, and have a good time and rejoice in the Lord. There will be preaching and singing all day. All preachers are invited and everybody has a welcome.

MARTIN THANKS VOTERS

To the Republican Voters of Chilton County:

I hardly know how to express my thanks to you all who helped to elect me as one of your board members in the first primary of May the first. I feel assured that I can get a much higher vote in November than I received this time, for lots of voters have told me that they would help to pull me over in the fall. So let's get together and elect our ticket by the biggest majority there has ever been in this county.

I want to thank the people for the help they gave me and will say that I will do everything I can to be elected in the fall, and to help elect the whole ticket. I was the third man from the top on the Republican ballot. I received 1377 votes that counted, and I heard of lots who only voted for me and the votes were lost, but you will have a chance to vote again for me in November.

Those of you who voted against me, I want you to feel free to bring every matter before the board that you have and I will help to give it the best of consideration to the best interest of he county and the children. Well, I will say again that I want your vote and influence in the general election this fall. I only lacked 19 votes taking my box solid. I got 71 votes at my box.—Respectfully yours, P. M. Martin, Jemison, Ala., Route 1.

POPLAR SPRINGS

We are glad to have such a large crowd to attend church last Sunday night. Folks, let's keep it up. The program was rendered well.

Everybody come to B. Y. P. U. next Sunday night at 7 o'clock. We are expecting to have something special. There will be a B. Y. P. U. convention at Maplesville next Sunday evening, May 20. Everybody go that can. We don't want Poplar Springs to not be well represented.

On account of strawberries being in the field, we will not have any preaching the fourth Saturday, but the fourth Sunday and Sunday night. We will have a mothers day program rendered the fourth Sunday in May. Everybody come. If you are not attending church at any place, why not come and join us? You will always find a welcome at Poplar Springs.

NEWS FROM CCC CAMP BOYS

Editor Union-Banner:

We are still alive and having a big time. We are now in regular camp and have been for some time. We only stayed at Ft. McClellan for two weeks and then were lucky enough to be sent to one of the best camps in Alabama. Most of the boys from Chilton are still together. There are six of us here in this camp, and all of us like it well enough to be glad that we are in it, and send our sincere thanks to Miss Austin, Miss Ellis, and all others that helped us to get into this work.

Many people have the wrong idea about this work. They think that we have to live and act as soldiers. There is absolutely no military training in it. There is a captain and a lieutenant in charge of the camp but they have nothing whatever to do with our work in the woods. They only receive orders from headquarters as to what we are to do. While at work we are under the charge of civilians who have had training in the forests and are paid by the state or government. The work is not too hard and we have good men in charge. We are well cared for, well fed and have nice quarters to sleep in. We think it is good healthy training for any normal, healthy boy, besides helping the condition of the nation.

This camp is being moved this week to Livingston, Ala. We are going to build a new camp there. We all like this place and hate to leave it, but hope to make another one there just as good as this one is.

When we wrote from Ft. McClellan we were expecting to receive letters from someone in Chilton, but so far haven't received a one. We wrote that if anyone was interested in knowing about how we liked in camp we would write and let them know about it, but seemingly no one was interested. However, we are still waiting to hear from someone. We will be glad to hear from anyone in Chilton County and will answer all letters we receive. Send our mail to Co. 467 CCC, Livingston, Ala.—The boys from Chilton, Houston Little, Howard Bowles, John Freeman, William Hucks, Charlie Miskelley, Bill Hays.

Why the Sudden Change to Liquid Laxatives?

Doctors have always recognized the value of the laxative whose dose can be measured, and whose action can be thus regulated to suit individual need.

The public, too, is fast returning to the use of liquid laxatives. People have learned that a properly prepared liquid laxative brings a perfect movement without any discomfort at the time, or after.

The dose of a liquid laxative can be varied to suit the needs of the individual. The action can thus be regulated. It forms no habit; you need not take a "double dose" a day or two later. Nor will a mild liquid laxative irritate the kidneys.

The wrong cathartic may often do more harm than good.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a prescription, and is perfectly safe. Its laxative action is based on senna —a natural laxative. The bowels will not become dependent on this form of help. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is at all druggists. Member N. R. A.

Work Out Safe Plan for Drying Off Cows

The best method of drying off a cow is a question that's been argued ever since cows gave enough milk to have to be dried off. Now Purina Mills, makers of Checkerboard feeds, confirms a plan of drying off cows worked out by state dairy experiment men which proves unusually satisfactory, according to E. B. Powell, Manager of the Purina Experimental Farm at Gray Summit, Mo.

"About 60 days before the cow is due to freshen, we change her abruptly from the milking feed to a ration that builds up and strengthens her body rather than stimulates the production of milk," Mr. Powell explains. "At the Purina Farm a ration of half bulky-las and half heifer growing chow is used. These feeds are particularly good because they are cooling, easy to digest, and strengthening, and get the cow in such excellent condition for calving. Oats may be substituted for heifer chow if the farmer has a surplus of it on the farm," Mr. Powell says.

After the ration is changed, the cow is not milked at all unless she is producing over 25 pounds per day, or unless she has quarters that have given trouble before. Where weak quarters begin to show signs of congestion, the whole udder is milked out completely. This is repeated a few times with longer intervals between each milking until the cow is completely dry.

Cows which are giving over 25 pounds of milk when turning dry are completely milked out whenever the udder becomes too feverish and painfully distended. This procedure is continued until the amount milked out falls below twenty-five pounds, after which they are handled as above.

"Since putting this plan into operation in our experimental dairy, we have practically cut out cases of seriously caked udders at freshening time," Mr. Powell says. "We have cows coming in almost every week but have very little trouble during the critical freshening period. Drying the cows in this way leaves the udder in fine condition, and feeding a conditioning non-heating ration builds up and strengthens the cow's system so that she can resist the fever and congestion caused by freshening.

The Story of the Bible Told in Pictures

Creation of the World.—This is one of a series of Bible pictures made by Matthew Merian, Seventeenth century engraver. It depicts the creation of the world as told in the first chapter of Genesis: "In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth. And the earth was without form, and void; and darkness was upon the face of the deep. And the spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters. And God said, Let there be light: and there was light." The whole story of creation is told in less than 600 words. "Dehidah," the Hebrew word in the accompanying print, takes the literal meaning of "separation" or "setting apart." According to Hebrew scholars the word is not found in the Bible, but occurs in the post-Biblical Hebrew writing, such as the Talmud and the Cabala. In the scene reproduced it doubtless has a mystic significance.

CEDAR GROVE

There will be an ice cream supper at Cedar Grove church, two miles south of Thorsby, Ala., on Saturday night, May 26th, 1934. We will also give a quilt away during the time we are at the church. This will be a fine opportunity for the candidates to help us and meet the people. The money raised will be used to reduce the debt on the seats and buy lights for the church. Everybody come.—Miss Louise Collins.

J. D. COLLINS THANKS VOTERS

I wish to thank the voters of Chilton County who supported me in my race for Sheriff. I never insisted on anybody to vote for me. I knew the people knew me and if they wanted me they would support me. I told all I spoke to about my race to do the thing they thought best. So I feel sure they tried to do that. So I am satisfied. I feel sure I would have gotten more votes if I had told everyone just who I would work and just who I would not. This I did not do, so I fell better out and loose than to be in and tied. If I could not go in and run the office as I wanted to I would not have it.—J. Dudley Collins.

AKINS COLLINS THANKS VOTERS

Please accept my gratitude for your vote and support in the May 1st primary.

I assure you that if I am successful in the general election it will be an honor that I will cherish with much pride, and my service will be rendered with the same spirit as heretofore. Thanking you again for your support, I am,—yours very truly, Akins I. Collins.

County Farm Agent's Notes

EXPIRED COTTON OPTIONS MAY BE REINSTATED NOW

Holders of cotton options which expired May 1 will be given an opportunity to have these options reinstated if application is made within the next 60 days, it was announced today by Oscar Johnston, manager of the cotton producers pool.

Mr. Johnston stated that only 820 option contracts covering 3,506 bales of cotton had not been heard from and, under the terms of the option, these contracts expired May 1. Holders who desire to have them reinstated should make application to the cotton producers pool within the next 60 days, Mr. Johnston stated.

In announcing that reinstatement would be granted on application, Mr. Johnston made public the present status of the cotton options which were offered producers as a part of the compensation in the 1933 emergency cotton campaign.

Of a total of 571,434 options issued covering 2,428,679 bales, 567,198 options covering 2,403,174 bales have been exercised either by sale or delivery to the cotton producers pool. Of this amount, producers holding options covering 457,180 bales have called their options and the cotton sold; and the remainder has been delivered to the cotton producers pool.

Mr. Johnston stated that options outstanding toaled 6,543 conracts covering 42,025 bales. These cases are divided as follows: 3,207 contracts for 21,449 bales have been extended, the holders paying the sum of forty cents per bale per month carrying charge; 209 contracts covering 568 bales have called and fixed the date for future sale; 2,307 contracts covering 16,502 bales are in suspense and will be issued when adjusted by correspondence or settlement (these option holders will then have 30 days after date of issue in which to call for sale or assign to the cotton producers pool); 820 contracts covering 3,506 bales have not been heard from since date of issue and these producers are given the privilege of 60 days from May 1 to apply for reinstatement.

FOREST FIRE HAZARD IS REDUCED BY SUN SPOTS

Montgomery, Ala., May 15.—It is possible to predict conditions contributing to the forest fire hazard by reference to preiodic meteorological conditions, according to Col. Page S. Bunker, State Forester, of Alabama, In its simplest form this prediction, of course, is based upon the annual recurrence of the seasons, both dry and wet and warm and cold. In addition to what may be expected annually in these respects, however, there must be reckoned the effect of the periodic changes in the number of sun spots. These occur in cycles of approximately eleven years.

A parallel exists between the number of sun spots and the earth temperature at any time, fewer sun spots resulting in higher temperature. An increase in atmospheric temperature usually means a corresponding increase in dryness and this, of course, means a much higher forest fire hazard. A new circle of sun spots began last fall, the number then being at the minimum. It is common knowledge that the forest fire hazard in many sections was particularly acute at that time.

While a reduced number of sun spots contributes to the fire hazard, there are a great many other factors that may enter into the situation, states Col. Bunker. The result of all of these acting together may be quite different from what would be expected from any of them. One thing seems certain, however, and that is that at the close of one cycle of sun spots and at the beginning of another almost anything can happen in the way of weather conditions affecting the forest fire hazard. At this time extremes are common. Alertness and preparedness on the part of landowners, forester and protection engineers are the first measures of safety.

LONGER STAPLE WORTH MORE

Auburn, Ala., May 15.—The actual market value of cotton having staple of 15-16 inch and also one inch is substantially above the value of cotton having a staple of 7-8 inch, according to reports received by J. C. Lowery at Auburn from the Division of Cotton Marketing Bureau of Agricultural Economics, Atlanta, Ga. The premium of the 15-16 inch staple above 7-8 inch staple was $1.06 per bale and that of one inch was $2.95 per bale.

These premiums, explained Mr. Lowery, should have been received by Alabama producers of cotton at their local points because they were paid by mills, in accordance with these official reports.

During recent years Alabama cotton growers have improved the staple and quality of their cotton by planting better varities, under the direction of he county agents, Lowery added. These improvements are revealed by official statistics on Alabama cotton from the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, April 14, as follows:

Shorter than 7-8 inch, 1932, 14.8 per cent; 1933, 8.7 percent; 7-8 and 29-32, 1932, 70.3 per cent; 1933, 72.8 per cent; 15-16 and 31-32, 1932, 11.7 per cent; 1933, 14 per cent; 1-inch and 1—1-32, 1932, 2.8 per cent; 1933, 3.8 per cent; 1 1-16 and 1 3-32, 1932, .3 per cent; 1933, .5 per cent; 1 1-8 and 1 5-32 ,1932, .1 per cent; 1933, .2 per cent.

GAME AND FISH NEWS

Montgomery, Ala., May 15.—I. T. Quinn, State Commissioner of game and fisheries has announced that Alabama's sixth annual deep sea fishing rodeo will be held in the gulf waters off Dauphin Island, near Mobile, August 27, 28 and 29.

The dates have been set back almost three weeks this year by the rodeo officials who believe that late August will find the tarpon migration into Mobile Bay at its height. Each year during August large schools of tarpon concentrate in Mobile Bay and around their feeding grounds rodeo anglers generally find their greatest sport.

The tarpon is known as the "silver king" of the briny deep because of his famed fighting ability and the biggest prize of the rodeo annually goes to the fisherman landing the largest tarpon. The 1934 rodeo anglers will have a new record to shoot at since the 126½ pound tarpon taken by W. N. Fry of Memphis last summer was the largest ever caught during a rodeo.

Other fish for which handsome prizes are offered annually are king backerel, red fish, cavalla, black fish, dolphin, Spanish mackerel, bonita, blue fish, speckled trout, flounder and devil fish. Prizes in these various events are contributed by sporting goods houses and other concerns and constitute an excellent inducement to the fisherman to test his skill in competition.

Last year approximately 300 fishermen from 35 cities in a dozen states chartered 75 boats for the three-day fishing contest and another hundred persons who had registered were forced to cancel their reservations due to the launching of the NRA on the day the rodeo started.

This year the rodeo officials anticipate a record attendance since several large parties already have made inquiry about boats. Memphis, Mobile and Shreveport produced the largest number of prize winners in 1933 and a Shreveport party several weeks ago chartered three boats for the rodeo.

L. G. Adams, of Mobile, is president of the rodeo association and Sam H. Lackland, also of Mobile, is secretary. Commissioner Quinn organized the rodeo in 1929 and it has been held each summer since.

MORE HAY IS NEEDED FOR ALA. LIVESTOCK

Auburn, Ala., May 15.—An abundance of hay on Alabama farms will mean better-fed livestock and the selling of fewer animals at low prices because of a shortage of feed, says J. C. Lowery, extension agronomist at Auburn.

Mr. Lowery added that the planting of greater areas to hay for home use was entirely within the regulations of acreage reduction contracts.

"For those farmers who, for various reasons, have failed to plant soybeans for hay this year there is yet sufficient time to plant cowpeas, sorghum, or a mixture of sorghum and cowpeas," said Mr. Lowery.

"Broadcast 90 to 120 pounds of cowpeas per acre. The Whippoorwill variety is popular in most sections of the state. In sections where cotton wilt is present the Brabham variety should be used.

"A mixture of 20 pounds or more or sorghum and 60 to 90 pounds of cowpeas an acre will give good yields of satisfactory hay. This mixture is well known in most communities and should be used more generally this year.

"The average yield of hay in Alabama is only about three-quarters of a ton per acre, whereas approximately two tons per mule or cow are needed. Therefore, hay crops should be planted on good land rather than on thin lands which are considered too poor for other crops.

"Legume hay crops, such as cowpeas, should receive 300 to 600 pounds of basic slag when planted. Top-dress sorghum with 100 to 200 pounds per acre of nitrate as soon as the plants are up."

PREACHING AT POOR HOUSE

Mrs. Wade has as her guest Miss Agnes Averette, of Columbiana, Ala.

LIVESTOCK REMINDERS

Sows should be bred to purebred boars in May for September litters.

Spring litters of pigs should be weaned at 8 weeks of age. Keep them growing rapidly so they will be ready for the high market in September.

Use surplus milk to good advantage by feeding it to the heifers you are keeping to replace your old cows. By feeding the milk until the heifers are 8 months of age, you will soon have larger, better developed cows in your herd.

Milk can be produced most economically by using a maximum of roughage. Arrange now to have at least one ton of legume hay and 2 to 3 tons of silage for every cow you are going to keep on the farm next winter.

Thistle's Fairy Boy, Auburn's Jersey herd bull, has 20 daughters that averaged 467 pounds of butterfat and 10,064 pounds of milk per year in the college herd. We need more Jersey bulls of this kind in Alabama.

The average production of all cows on test in the Black Belt Dairy Herd Improvement Association last year was 4,596 pounds of milk and 225 pounds of butterfat. If you do not know what your herd is producing, you should join a dairy herd improvement association and find out, for low-producing cows need to be culled.

You should produce 75 bushels of corn for every mule on your farm, 20 bushels for every milk cow, and 15 bushels for every meat hog. This is an excellent way to utilize some of your rented cotton acreage.

Why not start a permanent pasture on some of your corn land that you are now renting the government on your corn-hog contract? This is one of the best ways to utilize some of your good bottom land.

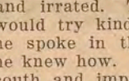
BOB JONES



COMMENTS ON HERE AND HEREAFTER.

"The Jesus philosophy will not work in the modern world, is what a man said to me some time ago. "How do you know?" I asked. "Have you ever tried it?" He looked impressed and said, "I don't believe I have."

Jesus said that if someone smites you on one cheek to turn the other one. Personally, I have never tried that but believe it would work. In the first place, I do not believe that if we turned the other cheek we would often find the man mean enough to strike the other blow. If a man smites us on one cheek and we do not turn the other, but smite him back we may get killed. There are many men sleeping in the cemeteries of the world who would have lived if they had turned the other cheek. It would not hurt us to try what Jesus said. I'm sure it would work. We have tried all kinds of theories of government. The world is in a turmoil. Everything is unsettled and uncertain. Why don't we try out the theories of Jesus—"Put God First." "If thine enemy hunger feed him," "If a man asks for your cloak give him your coat also." "If a man smites you on one cheek, turn the other one."

Jesus knew life. He was the author of life. He came not only to give men life,, but to give them abundant life. He knew men. It is a pity the world will not heed what Jesus says about how men ought to live.

One time the writer dropped into an office and asked a man a very civil question. The man was abrupt and irrated. The writer decided he would try kindness and courtesy, so he spoke in the most gracious way he knew how. The man who was uncouth and impolite softened and became most courteous himself. "A soft answer turneth away wrath, but grievous words stir up anger."

How much will "TAX EXEMPTIONS" Cost You?

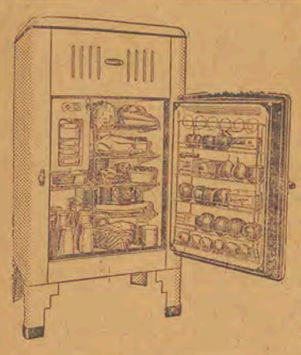
THE 1933 tax bill of Alabama Power Company was over $2,000,000, or 75% of the $2,755,000 interest on state bonds which Alabama taxpayers pay each year. In addition, taxpayers owning property in incorporated towns and cities pay in the aggregate a much larger interest bill on existing municipal debts.

Recently a few communities have elected to increase their indebtedness to engage in the business of distributing electricity. The state and these municipalities will thereby lose considerable tax revenue at a time when funds are needed to operate schools, pay bond interest on debts already incurred, and otherwise maintain local and state governmental agencies.

Furnishing electric service is a commercial business. Whenever commercial business escapes the payment of its fair share of taxes by resort to public ownership it simply works a hardship on the remaining taxpayers, both city and rural, because their property and their business must make up the loss in order to maintain schools, roads, and other necessary governmental functions.

ALABAMA POWER COMPANY

SHELVADOR
Equals ECONOMY



Crosley offers a wholly new concept of what modern electric refrigeration ought to be. Streamline beauty characterizes all models. The Shelvador provides about 50 per cent more usable storage space. In the tri-Shelvador series there have been added three new and exclusive features (1) the Shelvatray (2) the Shelvabasket (3) the Storabin.

ECONOMY NO. 1

Economy in motor operation does not mean the smallness of the motor. It means the ability of the motor to perform its work properly and easily. The motor in Shelvador is large enough to do its work efficiently without strain. Yet it is small enough to do its work more efficiently, and remain idle a greater part of the time.

ECONOMY NO. 2

All the models of Crosley Shelvador have the ventilated front. This allows the fan to pull a continuous stream of cool air over the condenser and force the warm air out, thereby preventing a constant churning of warm air over the condenser, which would lessen the efficiency of the motor.

ECONOMY NO. 3

Shelvador, which means shelves in the door, provides a handy and easily accessible place for those small items so annoyingly lost in the average refrigerator. This gives at least 50 per cent more shelving space than is found in other boxes with the same cubic feet rating.

ECONOMY NO. 4

You do not have to buy the costliest Shelvador to get the best. Because the very same fine features of quality materials, efficiency, and economy of operation are built into the smaller models as are found in the larger and more expensive ones.

We Can Also Supply Your Needs in Ice Refrigerators in Models from 25 to 100 Pounds Capacity. Prices as Low as $3.50

A Mediocre Navy?

The president's intentions toward the United States Navy are becoming obvious; he is a big navy man. He will ask for the best navy possible under existing treaties with other powers. This implies the construction of scores of ships at an indeterminate cost to be met by public works allotments. A treaty-limit navy, however, still will be imposible before 1940, and as early as 1937 it is possible that existing information will be discarded.

Japan already has announced a determination to have a navy equal to our own. Britain, of course will accept nothing less. If the administration refuses to accede to the Japanese demand, then it may be that navy construction will have to go away beyond the limitations of today.

There is this to be said for the president's program, however. Japan probably would be more rational toward American superiority on the seas if that superiority already were more apparent. Our failure to build up to treaty strength seems to have inculcated a cynical belief, in other countries, that we put more value on economy than on defense. The president's program of building up to treaty strength may convince other countries that the United States is determined to have a navy second to none. In view of our immense national resources—immeasurably great than the resources of Japan—an American more obviosuly determined to maintain a navy larger than that of Japan might deter Japan from any effort to enter a competition in armaments. Japan could enter no such race with the least prospect of winning.

Now that they have enacted an eight hour day law in the United States of Columbia. We always thought that the only thing they did down there was to sit under the trees and wait for the cocoanuts to drop.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

(By Frank P. Litschert

One of the favorite arguments of the free traders and those who desire to promote foreign trade by reciprocal agreements with foreign nations is that our tariff and the tariff barriers of other countries, have strangled our foreign trade and resulted in the depression. The fact is that they have got the cart before the horse. In the United States our tariff has been based on the cost of production at home and abroad. In Europe tariff barriers were raised as a result and not as a cause of the depression.

It is generally known, although, the free traders like to minimize the fact, that our foreign trade comprises less than ten per cent of our total trade. In other words, we sell more than ten times as much to ourselves as we ship abroad, even in normal times. Now if the tariff has destroyed our foreign trade, then why is it that our domestic trade has declined in proportion as much, if not more, than our foreign trade?

The fact is that our present tariff law has had nothing to do with the decline in our foreign trade. The decline resulted from the general depression, as did the decline in our domestic trade. Even the party now in power recognizes this. Although the Smoot-Howley tariff was denounced by the now-majority party in the last campaign, it has not been repealed.

And, significant enough, our foreign trade was decreasing. The reason it is growing now is that business is picking up all over the world. According to a report recently issued by the United States Chamber of Commerce, our domestic exports last year were greater than those of any other nation and our imports were greater than those of any other nation except Great Britain. The majority of our import and export domestic lines showed a great imporvement over the record of the year previous. The year 1933, according to the report, marked the turning point in world trade, just as it marked the turning point in our domestic trade and the domestic trade of other nations. The report continues:

"One of the encouraging features in our 1933 export trade was the increased sales abroad of American machinery and of iron, steel, copper and other metal products. During 1933 we exported more than 1,500,000 tons of heavy iron and steel products, or more than double the quantity exported in 1932; much less, however, than the 5-year average exports.

"Exports of foodstuffs, especially manufactured foodstuffs, were maintained in a number of cases above the 1932 figures. Despite restrictions of one kind or another in some of our best markets, exports of lard were 6 per cent above 1932 but 14 per cent less than the 5-year average.

"Meat exports were 21 per cent larger than in 1932, though below the 1928-1932 average quantities."

The gain in our trade cannot be laid to the decline of the dollar, due to our going off the gold standard. The theory of the cheap money advocates is that a declining dollar increases exports but diminishes imports. The reason, of course, offered is that other nations with their dearer money can buy more of our goods, but that our importers must pay more for what they buy abroad since they must buy with cheaper money.

But our increased trade cannot be accounted for by the arguments of the money theorists for the simple reason that our imports have increased even more than our exports. The Chamber of Commerce report shows that while 67 per cent of our export lines showed gains in 1933, 70 per cent of our import lines did likewise. It seems, therefore, that our world trade is increasing for reasons other than tariff reduction or cheap money. What is the answer? It is simple. Our world trade declined for four years because business was bad all over the world. It is increasing now because business is getting better all over the world. You don't have to be a tariff authority or a money expert to figure that out.

Disarmament's Outlook

Upon emerging from a White House conference with President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull on Saturday, Norman H. Davis, America's special disarmament ambassador, expressed doubt whether it would be deemed worth while for him to return to Geneva for the revived conference on May 23. Hitherto consistently optimistic as to the prospect of disarmament results, Mr. Davis admits that "it does not look terribly encouraging now." He points out that it is the European political controversies that are inextricably entangled with the disarmament problem, and until these are cleared up hope of progress is dim in the extreme.

Mr. Davis intimates that is is intended that he shall resume his two year role as a ringside observer at the Geneva shadow-boxing only if the United States is convinced that Europe means business and is prepared to eschew its political bickerings in favor of disarmament fundamentals.

Meantime there are no signs that Mr. Roosevelt is minded to yield to suggestions which have recently reached him from American groups that the United States make an eleventh-hour effort to salvage the Geneva conference before it totters to its final doom. Apparently, the president agrees with Mr. Davis' view that the next move is up to Europe. With her purely political differences America has no concern, and we are determined to remain aloof from them.

The crux of the disarmament situation is the Franco-German quarrel over the Reich's demand for "arms equality." France firmly resists the German claim, and, moreover, will in fact of the German rearmament menace, agree to no disarmament without security guarantees. To date these have not been forthcoming, from either Great Britain or any other quarter. The result is deadlock.

If, under these unpromising circumstances, President Roosevelt decides that the United States has gone as far as it can to promote inernational disarmament, the country will approve his course as wise and sound. Intervention at this late stage to bring order out of the disarmament chaos would inveitably involve us in Europe's domestic disputes, for which the American people have no fancy. Mr. Roosevelt during the past year has more than once sought to lead the way to peace and disarmament. Results have not ensued, for causes entirely beyond his control, and he would be fully justified in leaving the initiative for further effort in the hands of those whose conlicting interests are chiefly to blame for the deplorable impasse that has been reached.

The Real Issue

One of the questions which is bound to be discussed in the campaign this fall is just how far we have traveled toward prosperity under the New Deal, and just how much the New Deal has helped us along the road to recovery. Members of the Brain Trust and other supporters of the administration are already taking the position and basing that such recovery as we have enjoyed has been due entirely to our abandoning the old policy of individualism and starting along the path of the New Deal. On the other hand, opponents of the Brain Trust theories are declaring that we would have been much further along the road to recovery had the policies of the New Deal, with its regimentation of industry, never been adopted.

If the depression had been confined to the United States alone the Brain Trusters would have much the better of the argument. They could show that Uncle Sam is better off than he was a year ago, if we measure by business indices and not the condition of his budget, and that therefore the New Deal must have the credit. Unfortunately for this strategy, however, the depression was not a purely American affair. It was world wide, and there has been recovery in Asia, Europe and South America, without the creation of a Brain Trust, without huge expenditures and without the adoption of New Deal policies. The opponents to the Brain Trust are quick to point out these facts, as is evidenced by the following extract from an editorial attack on Professor Tugwell in a recent issue of the Washington, D. C., Herald.

"Professor Tugwell will find no lack of that 'wide view of national and international conditions' which he says no single farmer nor any regional group is capable of taking.

"The figures we give were prepared by the League of Nations' economists and are predicated upon a world survey.

"The League of Nations' statistics show that the peak of the boom was attained in the summer of 1929, and that the low point of the depression was reached in the summer of 1932. Since then almost every country has been pulling out of the depression.

"Taking the 1928 averages as 100, the economists of the League of Nations have worked out a comparative index of the industrial production for the end of 1933.

"Japan led the list. It was much higher than in 1928. Its index was 139.

"Great Britain was nearly back to the 1928 level. Its index was 92.

"Other countries were less than half way back. Belgium stood at 42, France at 40 and Germany at 35.

"And the United States at 32. * * *

"The most winsome and gallant smile in the world cannot laugh this off. Here is the New Deal's test—it is not promoting recovery but standing in its way!"

Of course the issues for the fall campaign are not yet to be formed but after all the test of the Brain Trust's New Deal must be the chief issue. A great deal will depend on the economic econdition of the United States this fall. If recovery should boom, the administration will be greatly benefitted. But if we lag behind the other important nations of the globe—well that will be a different story.

The communists were so quiet in the United States on May Day that we have a suspicion they are beginning to believe that they are the conservative party in America.

Jack's Record

Through Sunday, May 13: Batting — 17 games; 60 times at bat; 12 singles, 3 doubles, 1 home run, total 16 hits; average, .267; 3 sacrifices; 7 runs scored; 10 runs batted in. Fielding—33 put-outs, 55 assists, total 88 chances; no errors; average, 1.000; 7 double plays. Jack has been out of the line-up for the last three games, including Sunday. He underwent an operation last Sunday, when a small piece of bone was removed from his right arm. It is expected that he will be out of the game for several days, perhaps a month. When he comes back in again, the record will be resumed.

Here's Your Chance

Are you a musician, a comedian, or have you any kind of short sketch which you think would be interesting on a radio program? If so, and if you would like to "go on the air", let it be known, and we will see that you get a chance. If you have been listening in on the "Sunrise Hour" from 6:00 to 7:00 a.m., every morning over WBRC, at Birmingham, you will know just about what will be expected of you. Guitars, banjos, mandolins, violins or "fiddles", are the instruments usually featured. However, if you have an ensemble, that much the better. Also, if you can solo a trombone, cornet, sax, or any other instrument, let it be known and you will get your chance. Good quartets, too, are welcomed. Only last Monday morning, Orville Wright, a local performer, took part on the program, and his act was good. There will be no test, no pre-performance audition, to see if you are good enough—your audience in radio-land will decide that for you. If you are good, or think you are, let us know it, and arrangements will be made for you to "strut your stuff". Try your hand. You can never tell what it might lead to.

Something New

When Judge Carr called the Circuit Court together last Monday, people around here had a few surprises. The new Judge pulled one surprise after another, opening up with one of the biggest of them all. After he had everyone quiet, he bowed his head in prayer, asking the Almighty for divine guidance in his judicial acts, and for blessing of the deliberations of his court. That is something which some of the older people of the county could not remember having ever been done in the Circuit Court, and it compelled admiration and respect for Judge Carr from the start. Next, by his active handling of the docket, he impressed attendants in court with the idea that this was to be a work period, and not a sleeping siesta, as has been the case here too long. Judge Carr gets things done. Useless delays are cut out, and his court runs swiftly and smoothly. Numbers of people have told me they wished he could be with us all the time, and then maybe we could kep our court dockets clear—our people like Judge Carr.

Another Dog Tale

A few weeks ago, when I told you the story of the bird dog which stood at point until he starved to death, I thought I had reached the ultimate in dog tales. But not so. Now, Mr. Ad Lightsey, the game warden, comes through with a new one. The story goes this way: One day last winter, Mr. Lightsey was out hunting quail, when his dog pointed near the bank of a creek. When the birds rose, one was shot down and fell into the creek. Thinking the bird was forever gone, Mr. Lightsey went on his way, noting, however, that the dog was sniffing around the edge of the water. He had not gone far, when the dog caught up, and holding in his mouth a big trout. That was astounding, and Mr. Lightsey could not understand how his bird dog had suddenly turned into a fish hound. When he got home, he cut the fish open, and found the partridge in the fish's stomach. Now, I've always had lots of respect for Mr. Lightsey's veracity, but, honestly, I can't see how the man can expect anyone to believe him after this. When I see him I'm going to present him with the cut glass sledge hammer for being the biggest liar in these parts. He deserves it.

A Sign of What?

The Jasper Mountain Eagle stated last week that around Jasper a number of $50 bills had been showing up of late, and the editor has an idea that this is some kind of a sign that good times are on the way, if not already back again. He says: "When people get to handing $50 bills around, it is a sign that prosperity is coming back." Now, let's reason a bit. If you had several bills, including a 50, would you spend that first? I don't think so. I believe you would spend all the smaller ones first, and then break the 50 when you had no other to spend. Human nature is about the same, anywhere you go. We like to keep our best things as long as we can. And so, the spending of $50 bills one would think, is more a sign that all the smaller ones are gone, already. The Mountain Eagle editor must have had his think-tank running in reverse.

Built On Sand

When the feverish NRA blue eagle program was put into effect last summer, almost everyone was in favor of it—for a short while. Why? We were ready to try anything once. President Roosevelt had promised that as often as governmental experiments were proved unsound they would be discarded. Gen. Hugh Johnson and his NRA board, therefore, took advantage of the popular sentiment to cooperate with the "new deal" to the last notch and placed upon the shoulders of the nation a load to which it was not accustomed—something that had not been tried since King George III of England, in 1775. The NRA program was a haphazard affair, drawn up and put into effect without due thought and consideration for the rights and liberties of the people. It was, and is, autocratic and dictatorial, two qualities which the American people have fought since the foundation of the nation, and which they will not tolerate. So, the NRA program was doomed before its conception. Our people placed the blue eagle in their windows, trying to cooperate. They were willing to be led. But when the codes came, with annulment of the sacred liberties to which we have been accustomed, the people balked. Yes, they were quite willing to be led, but they would not be driven—like oxen. As often as the codes went into effect, and their real meaning was fully understood public sentiment exactly reversed itself. Larger industries put up a fight, while the smaller ones merely ignored their codes altogether. The issue was drawn—if the NRA stood, it meant the failure of thousands of small businesses; and if the industries were to survive, it meant that the NRA must go. The industries won—the NRA is going, fast. Like the house built on sand, the NRA, built on an unsound foundation, or with no foundation at all, is crumbling. Every day sees more and more people join in the fight. Observers around Washington have been predicting the failure of the program for months, to which our Southern Democratic editors answered with a sneer, and a charge that an effort was being put forth to block efforts of the administration in its fight for recovery. Of late, however, these Southern editors, too, are joining in the chant, with others from the east, west and the north, against the NRA and its methods, which, they now admit, they felt were shaky from the start. For instance, The Birmingham Age-Herald says, editorially: "The NRA officials wish to junk the results of the blue eagle campaign. This is called a 'retreat', and the only regret is that this 'retreat' was not sounded months ago. There never was much doubt of the unworkableness of the blanket code business . . . It will not be easy for the NRA to wash its hands of its handiwork, but somehow it must be done, in the end. . . . There is such a thing, even for the federal government, as biting off more than it can chew. It is just that which has taken place." To all of which we say: "Amen!"—Man in the Moon.

There Goes the Man Again

Henry Louis Mencken is loose again. No matter whether you agree with him or not you will have to admit that he is usually interesting and packs a verbal punch. His latest attack, delivered on the radio recently, was directed against the college professors of the so-called Brain Trust. Mr. Mencken gave them some "friendly advice" the gist of which was that they leave official duties at Washington and return to their class rooms to continue "teaching the sophomores to be ashamed of their parents."

Mr. Mencken gave his diagnosis of Uncle Sam's present ills by telling the story of a man whose physician advised him to "cut out your boozing and your 36-hole golf, eat lightly and go to bed early." Instead of following this sensible advice the man resorted to so-called wizards who had a "sure fire" cure for what ailed him. Finally he had to take the advice of his original physician and he was soon well again. Mr. Mencken continued:

"This little story has a moral. We are all acquainted with a fine old fellow who greatly resembles the man I have been telling you about. He lives at Washington and we call him Uncle Sam.

"A year or two ago he began to feel very wobbly. He had horribe dreams at night, and a dark brown taste in the morning. The regular doctors down at Washington told him that he was living too fast, and advised him to slow down a bit. But he didn't like the prescription and refused to follow it.

"Instead he began to send for all sorts of amateur healers, each of whom allowed that he alone could cure him. No two of them ageed—save on one thing only; they all send in tremendous bills. The poor old man, poisoned by their doses, is not only making heavy weather of it, with many setbacks; he is also going broke.

"And when I say that Uncle Sam is going broke, it is the same as saying, of course, the American tapayer is going broke. Every nickle that the professors at Washington are throwing away will have to come out of his pocket.

"Has all this waste of money done us any good? I doubt it. We have moved toward recovery, not because of it, but in spite of it. The English, who were much worse off than we were two years ago, have gone much further along the road than we have.

"They have a surplus in their treasury, and are even reducing taxes. Yet they have done this without putting a single bright young professor on their payroll, or laying out a cent for economic madstones and bile-beans."

If the government really wants to do something for the farmers they might make some arrangements whereby it is as easy to get out of debt as it is to get out of the penitentiary.

A Barnes farmer says, the lambs on his farm are showing up in pairs this spring, and he wants to know what Franklin Roosevelt and Secretary Wallace are going to do about that.

Professor Tugwell says that under the Old Deal very few workers were employed after forty. That was because they were too busy on the golf links to bother about working.

Over 300 persons were arrested recently for spitting in the New York subways. Thus one by one our personal rights are taken from us.

The Man on the Corner

Some Sights He Saw— and Some He Saw Not

"Where was the Man on the Corner last week?" a reader of the column asks me. Answer: Gone a fishing. Now, do you wonder that I forgot to write my stuff. A fishing trip to me is a fishing trip, and all the rest of the world passes out of the picture "for the duration of the war."

Furthermore, fishing to me is something to do and not to talk about. I am a fisherman and not a liar, therefore I refuse to talk about my fishing, lest I be accused of the common prevarications that are universally and automatically charged to fishermen who talk.

So much for the fishing subject, my good friends. I will try to greet you again each week until I get off on another fishing trip to the Gulf of Mexico. If I miss a week, you may know what is the reason.

Frank Culpepper stopped me at his store the other day and gave me a stalk of oats which he garnered from a patch belonging to Burns Goodgame, near the gin. He said "I want the people to know that Uncle Tom Littlefield's method of growing corn (without any fertilizer or work) can be applied to oats with equally satisfactory results as shown by this one stalk which has 92 mature grains on it." I think Frank must be in cahoots with Burns in the oat business.

Undertaker J. Mell Martin is in Montgomery this week attending the annual meeting of the Alabama Funeral Directors Association. Mell has been Secretary and Treasurer of this organization for several years.

C. H. McFarland, director of the Red Cross in Alabama, was here on a business visit last Friday. The many friends of Mr. McFarland will regret to know that he is soon to be transferred to the State of West Virginia; he will continue in Red Cross work.

Mr. Harry Cooke, the well-known and popular show man, was a visitor to Clanton Monday. For many years Mr. Cooke traveled the country with his vaudeville show, and made a fine rep and, I guess, a plenty of money. He now has the air of a retired capitalist who has quit worrying about whether the show draws a good crowd or not.

Members of the family of Uncle Bill Mullins gahtered at the old home in Clanton last Sunday to spend the day with their mother. It was the first time they had ever gotten together when Pa Billie could not be with them. Next to the living presence of a loved one is a wealth of pleasant memories.

Uncle Henry Robinson can take two rows at a time. This week he has been both County Commissioner and Circuit Court juryman. Another mark of distinction falls upon his shoulders. He is the first Democrat to be a member of the Chilton County Court of Commissioners since the day of R. Y. Atchison back about 1910.

Dr. and Mrs. Sam Johnson, of Pensacola, spent a few days in Clanton during the past week.

I am informed that the McCord for Governor Club (ladies) of Clanton has automatically turned into a Dixon for Governor Club, and continues to hold their regular weekly meetings at the home of Mrs. J. P. Hayes. Since they lost their first choice, they say they have a full measure of enthusiasm for Frank Dixon.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Bentley (Mary Upchurch) left Tuesday for their new home in Springfield, Tennessee, where Mr. Bentley will open a new Five and Ten Cent variety store.

Emmett Sizemore, district agent of the Alabama Extension Service, at Auburn, was a visitor to Clanton Tuesday. "Well, I lost Stapp after all," he said. "I tried to keep him in the County Agency work, but he had such a fine offer from the Dallas Compress Company I could not blame him for taking it."

Last Sunday I went with Mr. and Mrs. Page to see the Stapps in their new home at Selma. They are delightfully situated in a big palatial home of the old Colonial type. Apparently they have in front of them a season of perfect delight, and their many friends in Chilton County hold out wishes for the best things to come to them.

I understand that Mr. and Mrs. Grady Broadhead plan to move to Montgomery, and that their home in Clanton will be occupied by Dr. Lawrence and family. This report has not been verified, but I think it is true.

Joe Ben Downs has gone away for a month to visit his wife's relatives. Departing he said: "If anybody wants to send me any duns, tell them my address is somewhere in Floriday."

Here is a mark for any ambitious youth to shoot at. Aubrey Taylor, age 19 years, graduates at Auburn this week, with an average above 95 in his course in electrical engineering. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Taylor of Clanton, who are and have every right to be proud of him.

Real summer showers a plenty this week. Uncle Bill Davis, sitting on the courthouse steps watching the water fall said every shower makes the grass grow another inch. According to that calculation, it must have grown mighty tall Tuesday with as much as a dozen showers in half the number of hours.

Robert Jones must have perceived the growth of the grass. He was in town Tuesday afternoon to buy a mowing machine to use in cultivating his cotton patch.

An increase in marriages is reported from Crown Point, Indiana's Gretna Green, which is hailed as a sign of growing economic recovery. But one of our married friends says it is a sign of growing economic insanity.

SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

Lesson for May 20

THE FUTURE OF THE KINGDOM

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 25:1-13.

GOLDEN TEXT—And the seventh angel sounded; and there were great voices in heaven, saying, The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ; and he shall reign for ever and ever. Rev. 11:15.

PRIMARY TOPIC—A Story About a Wedding.

JUNIOR TOPIC—When Jesus Comes.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Always Ready.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Christian Preparedness.

This lesson is part of the well-known Olivet discourses giving a prophetic view of the course of time from the crucifixion to the second coming of Christ. Two great facts are before us in this prophetic utterance, the destruction of Jerusalem and the second coming of Christ. The one was near, having taken place within forty years from Christ's crucifixion; the other is still future.

The parable of the ten virgins is one of the two parables designed for the instruction of the saints in view of the coming of Christ. It has a continuous application in the present time (I Thess. 4:16-18; Titus 2:11-13).

I. The Equipment of the Virgins (vv. 1-5).

1. The foolish virgins (v. 3.) They took lamps but had no oil with them. Lamps signify Christian profession (Matt. 5:16) and oil the Holy Spirit (Zech. 4). Having lamps but no oil shows that they were professors of religion without possessing its reality. The Christian life is sustained by the Holy Spirit. As soon as one is regenerated the Holy Spirit takes up his abode within him. The proof that one is a child of God is that he has the Holy Spirit dwelling within him (Rom. 8:9).

2. The wise virgins (v. 4). They possessed both lamps and oil. They made a profession and backed it with a life of real righteousness. These are the true believers. Both the wise and the foolish virgins slumbered and slept. The common lot falls to both professing Christians and real Christians. They fell under the spell of sleep (v. 5). This shows that as this age lengthens the real and professing church will cease looking for the coming of the Lord. It is unspeakably sad that so many, even of God's saints—wise virgins—should give up the expectancy of the return of the Lord.

II. The Coming of the Bridegroom (vv. 6-12).

1. The midnight cry (v. 6). In the midst of the night when all the virgins were asleep the cry was made, "Behold the bridegroom cometh, go ye out to meet him." Who knows but that the time of this cry is close at hand?

2. The activity of the virgins (v. 7). They all arose and trimmed their lamps. There will be great activity when the Lord comes, those who only make a profession then realizing that they lack what is essential to entrance to the marriage feast.

3. The foolish request the wise to share their oil (vv. 8, 9). The revelation of Christ will make manifest the genuineness of our religion and expose the folly of mere profession. When the Lord comes it will be too late to mend one's ways.

4. The wise enter to the marriage (v. 10). It will matter little what else one has at that time if he has oil in his lamp.

5. The pitiful petition of the foolish (v. 11). They begged the Lord to open the door that they might enter to the marriage feast.

6. The awful judgment (v. 12). The Lord declared, "I know you not." Those who put off personal contact with Christ until that day shall be shut out from his presence.

III. The Solemn Obligation (v. 13).

"Watch, for ye know not the day nor the hour wherein the Son of man cometh."

1. Entering with Christ to the marriage depends not upon having professed to enter the Christian race but continuing therein. It is not enough that we can refer to the lighting of our lamps. If oil and light be wanting when Christ comes there will be no admittance to the heavenly banquet.

2. Borrowed religion will not avail at that day. Association with the most eminent of God's saints will not secure for us acceptance at that day. The essential thing is personal union with the Lord Jesus Christ through faith in his shed blood.

Bible Reading

Bible reading is undispensable to the nurture and cultivation of the spiritual life. Bible knowledge furnishes the mind with food for the noblest meditation.

Not Dead, but Living

If the city of our heart is holy with the presence of a living Christ then the dear dead will come to us, and we shall know they are not dead but living, and bless him who has been their Redeemer.

Just Moral Nature

Human nature is said by many to be good: if so, where have social evils come from? For human nature is the only moral nature in that corrupting thing called "society."

NRA OIL CODE COSTS PUBLIC

Washington, May 11.—The National Recovery Administration oil code cost the nation's motorists $160,550,000 between July 1, 1933, and January 31, 1934, the Federal Trade Commission reported to the senate yesterday.

The report showed gasoline prices averaged a net increase of 1.04 cents per gallon during the period. The survey was made in response to a resolution by Senator William E. Borah, (R. Idaho), on February 2, demanding a report on the NRA code for the steel industry and the effect of increased gasoline prices on consumers in the preceding six months.

In a pervious report, the trade commission branded the steel code as "monopolistic."

Principal findings in the gasoline investigation were.

1.—Gasoline prices increased two cents per gallon after approval of the petroleum code August 19, 1933, but subsequent declines reduced the average to 1.04 cents.

2.—Combined state and federal sales taxes averaged 5.14 cents per gallon, costing the public about $700,000,000 annually.

3.—The public paid $160,550,000 as a result of the increased gasoline prices.—The Birmingham Post.

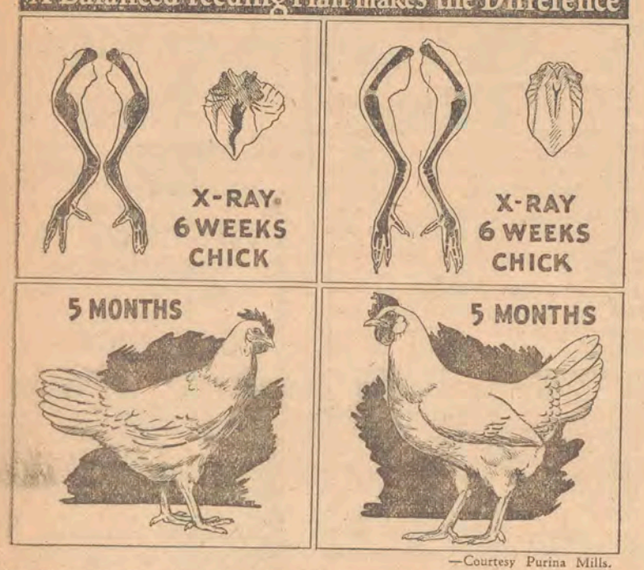
A Balanced Feeding Plan makes the Difference



—Courtesy Purina Mills.

The X-ray in the research laboratory has revealed many facts about the value of individual ingredients. In the accompanying illustration are shown the differences in bone development of a chick that was fed a ration lacking in the sunshine vitamin D, as compared with a ration rich in this vitamin. A curved underdeveloped breast bone and poor leg bone development is plainly evident in the one to the left. Equally plain is the straight, fully developed breast bone and leg development of the one to the right.

Building chicks is a big job for feed, especially in this day of all-mash when all the feeding requirements for those first 6 weeks must come from one ration—and only 2 pounds at that! What a careful selection, proportioning, and blending of ingredients is necessary to produce an all-mash formula which will feed the whole chick and give the utmost possible growth and weight at 6 weeks.

Naturally such a feed cannot just happen over night. Nor can looks tell anything. For some feeds may look alike, analyze alike, and even contain the same ingredients, yet show a vast difference in what they'll do for the growth and development of chicks. But chicks themselves have an honest way of showing what's best for them in starting feeds. According to the best practical knowledge and experience, the only way a properly balanced and blended all-mash starting feed can be built is by actual feeding tests with chicks themselves in which the chicks show by the way they live and grow just what should go into the feed to do the best feeding job.

In using this method of finding out what's best for chicks the Purina Experimental Farm and Research Laboratory has raised more than a quarter of a million chicks, letting the birds do the testing and checking upon every practical combination of all-mash starting feed ingredients and giving the carefully recorded facts of life, growth, development, and weight.

MT. CARMEL NEWS

Our Sunday school met Sunday with a small attendance owing to many measles. We hope for a speedy recovery of them, and we think they have all about run out now. A good many of our folks went to the home coming day at different places Sunday.

Next Saturday at 2:30 p.m. is our regular preaching time. We are looking for a good crowd to be present. Sunday school will meet at 1:30 Sunday, and preaching will follow.

The home coming days are a great thing, the writer thinks, and we believe that all churches ought to have a home coming day once a year. The writer has held membership with four churches, and has never know the members very well, and if the church had had home coming days to get all the members together, they would get better acquainted. It seems that the people are leading off too far from the church, and following too many codes and other things that I am afraid God will not be pleased with. The harvest is now white and the laborers are few. So I feel that it is high time for us to do something. So come and be with us next Saturday and Sunday. You are welcome.—A Reader.

NOTICE TO BUILDERS

All persons engaged in carpenter work, brick masons, plumbers, electrical workers, or any form of building, are requested to meet at the courthouse in Clanton Thursday night at eight o'clock for the purpose of organizing for the adoption of a builder's code.—Mason F. Jones.

Dr. C. A. Basore, research chemist of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute at Auburn, told engineers that Birmingham could easily become an important center in the manufacture of glass.

The first shipment of equipment for the floating concrete mixing plant, which will be used for the preparing and mixing of concrete for the General Joe Wheeler dam, have arrived at Wilson dam.

Sam Brown was placed in Southside Jail in Birmingham under a murder warrant in connection with the death of Denis S. Ledyard, who is alleged to have suffered blows on the head in the "drunk cell" at the city jail.

A delegation representing the Technical and Clerical White Collar Workers of the ex-CWA made a trip to Washington to confer with government officials regarding the revival of CWA or a substitute plan to provide work in Jefferson County.

"Governments have always been and always will be shaped by lawyers," said Judge Hugh A. Locke, Birmingham, in an address to the law school of the University of Alabama. Judge Locke was the speaker on the senior class day program which was held there at that time.

ADMIRAL BYRD BANKS ON DOGS

Watches Their Ration Closely

In the news columns and over the radio the eyes and ears of the world have been following Admiral Byrd and his hardy crew of explorers as they battled their way southward to the bottom of the world and landed there for another two years stay in the South Polar Regions. Now that they've reached their base of operations in Little America, the months of painstaking preparation involved in getting ready for the expedition are but a dim memory compared to the immediate glamor of romance and adventure which is now absorbing popular attention.

Yet an occasional flash from the expedition's radio brings news of happenings, which show the vital importance of attention to every detail in arranging for such a momentus venture. The accompanying radiogram sent by Innes Taylor who is in charge of the dogs for the expedition has reference to one of the most vital factors contributing to its success.

Dogs are a necessary help in any polar undertaking. Men's lives depend to a great extent upon the strength and endurance of these huskies. That's why Admiral Byrd took along 153 dogs for the great adventure. From the moment of their landing on the desolate shores of Antartica these dogs worked night and day transporting tons of freight to the winter base, with every animal pushed to the limit to get the supplies all transported before the Antartic sun disappears, plunging the expedition into months of blizzard swept darkness.

When so much depends upon the dogs, there was naturally the question of what to do to keep them healthy all this time. The food to take along for those huskies was especially important. Before choosing their ration, Admiral Byrd made inquiries at the Massachusetts General Hospital for advice. (It was at the Massachusetts General Hospital that the first public demonstration of surgical anesthesia was conducted October 16, 1846.) They suggested that he send one of his staff officers to the Purina Experimental Kennels at Gray Summit, Mo., to study the work being done there on dog feeds.

At the Experimental Kennels Admiral Byrd's representative examined the records of seven years dog feeding with hundreds of dogs of many breeds. His final recommendation for the expedition was a ration developed at the Kennels which combines in one ration: beef, dried milk and cod liver oil, with a variety of processed cereals and vitamin foods added. As many as six generations of dogs at the Experimental Kennels have been raised on this food as the sole ration.

Acting on the staff officer's recommendation, Admiral Byrd ordered one hundred thousand pounds of this feed for the expedition. Except for a small amount of seal blubber for added warmth, this combination will be the dogs' sole ration during the two years stay in Antartica.

CONVENTION OF REPUBLICANS

Chilton County Party Leaders In Conclave Here Last Wednesday

At 2:00 o'clock last Wednesday, May 16th, the County Republican delegated convention was called to order by the chairman of the Executive Committee, J. N. Dennis. Mr. Dennis was elected permanent chairman of the convention, and T. E. Wylatt was elected secretary. A roll was called of the delegates who were elected at the Beat meetings in each Beat of the county on the day of the first primary on May 1st. There were delegates present in person or by proxy from nearly every voting place in the county.

W. H. Gillespie stated that the purpose of the meeting was to provide delegates from Chilton County to the District and State conventions, the latter to meet in Birmingham on June 27th; the District convention to meet at Calera probably the day before the State convention. It was moved, seconded and carried that a nominating committee of five be appointed by the chairman to recommend delegates to the two conventions. This committee consisted of W. H. Gillespie, C. C. Conway, Rube Bearden, L. C. Keen and Z. J. Jones.

The recommendations of this committee were read and dapoted by the convention, which were as follows. Delegates—J. O. Middleton, J. Z. Mims, Woodfin Littleton, W. H. Gillespie, Joe Calloway, L. H. Reynolds, T. E. Wyatt, Akins Collins, J. C. Atchison, C. D. Duke, and W. H. Conway. Alternates—Grover Bice, H. A. Harris, J. A. Raines, J. N. Scott, B. Lawrence, W. M. Bean, Paul Chester Mims, O. L. Devaughn, S. M. Pate, J. Wiley Littlejohn and J. E. Harrell.

A short speech was made before the convention by Mr. D. O. Manning, commending the Republican candidates for the peaceable and harmonious campaign leading up to the first primary and pleading for a continuation of harmony in the ranks of the party during the second primary and up to and through the general election.

A vote of the assembly was taken on the Literary Digest's questionnaire regarding the Roosevelt policies of the first year, which is worded as follows: "Do you approve on the whole the acts and policies of Roosevelt's first year? To this question the convention unanimously voted "No."

A motion to adjourn prevailed, which brought to a close one of the most harmonious conventions ever held in the county. Everybody was very enthusiastic over the prospects of the party in the county at this time.

BASEBALL GAME THURSDAY FATS VS. LEANS

Baseball! It's here, today, Thursday. The fats and the leans of the town will tie up this afternoon at 3 o'clock at the High School grounds. And what a game that should be. Imagine Earl Parrish and O'Dell Headley working the double steal, or Sam Martin bunting on a squeeze play, or Maurice Lande sliding in to steal second, or Frank Callen going after a hot grounder, or J. Renfroe Mullins selling out after a hot liner. That game si going to be funny.

So, if you want a barrel of laughs, have the doctor tape up your ribs, so you won't crack them, and come to this game of games.

Some of the fats will be Chester G. Mims, Earl Parrish, "Catfish" Eubanks, "Red" Wagoner, Maurice Lande, George McCain, "Doodle" Gore, O'Dell Headley, Sam Martin, Dewey Rockett, and others.

We have been unable to get a list of the leans, but we understand that plenty of them will be on hand.

Remember the place and date—the high school ground, at 3:00 p.m., today, Thursday.

Admission will be 10c and 15c, and the proceeds will go for equipment for the regular team to represent Clanton this summer. Be there!

Response to the welcome, on behalf of the club members, was made by Clifford Manniug, of Isabella.

An address by C. E. Stapp of Selma, former County Agent of Chilton County, was a most interesting feature of the morning session. Mr. Stapp was of course, thoroughly at home with "his boys", whom he organized and started out in club work. And the boys were delighted to have their former leader with them again.

Miss Corinne Polk (Miss Chilton County) delighted the audience with a reading. Following this number the boys and girls united in reciting the 4-H Club pledge.

Mr. J. C. Lowery, extension agronomist, of Auburn, was a guest of the occasion, and made a most inspiring address to the boys and girls.

County Agent J. W. Fant, and Home Agent, Miss Ruth Pardue, had charge of arrangements for the program and entertainment for the club members and visitors.

Over 21,000 Crates Shipped By Railroad and Truck Together

Several truck loads have gone to points in Ohio and other places equally distant.

Seventy-one car loads was the total output of berries through the Clanton Association last year.

NEW POLITICAL PARTY FORMED

La Folletts In Wisconsin Head Effort for New Progressive Party

Milwaukee, Wis., May 20.—With the same speed with which their party was formed at a state-wide convention at Fond Du Lac Saturday, leaders of Wiscinson's new Progressive Party Sunday were planning for the Autum congressional and state campaigns..

Only a few hours after the convention voted overwhelmingly to break from the ranks of the Republicans and name the naw party "Progressive," a state central committee was appointed and Former Governor Phillip F. La Follette, son of "Fighting Bob," and brother of the senior Wisconsin senator, was named its head.

The new party is the second to be born in Wisconsin. Eighty years ago, at Ripon, only a few miles from Fond Du Lac, members of an anti-slavery movement gathered at a school house to form a political party and name it "Republican."

Six years later the Republican party which had developed from that nucleus elected Abraham Lincoln. Wisconsin's Progressives hope they can do as well.

With an immediate goal of putting members of their party in congressional seats and in state offices, the Progressive committee is mustering forces to collect 50,000 signatures to place its name on the ballot. Ten thousand bland petitions were handed convention delegates.

Moving fast the leaders planned a "Young Progressives" organization to carry on its work as the "Young Democrats" are doing in that party's movements.

Later a second convention will meet to develop a platform.

Average Salary Paid Teachers

Dropped 46 Per Cent Compared With Peak Salaries of 1928-1929

Salaries paid the rural white teachers of Alabama for 1932-1933 dropped 46 per cent as compared with the "peak" salaries paid this same group in 1928-1929, according to figures compiled last week by Dr. E. L. Morphet of the State Department of Education.

In 1928-1929 the average salary paid rural white teachers was $619, which represents the highest sum ever paid rural teachers in Alabama. This amount was paid for a term of 7.4 months.

In 1932-1933 the yearly salary had dropped to $336, a loss of $283, or 46 per cent.

For the rural high school teacher the loss was even greater, his average salary dropping from $1,071 in 1928-1929 to $565 in 1932-1933, a loss of $525 or 49 per cent.

For the past year the median salary paid rural teachers was $68 for the entire state, but the median salary was less than $60 in the counties of Autauga, Bibb, Blount, Butler, Cherokee, Clarke, Cleburne, Dale, Houston, Lee, Macon, Pickens, Tallapoosa and Washington. The lowest salary in the state was paid in Butler County, where the rural teachers received only $49 per month. Clarke and Washington were only slightly better, with a monthly average of $50 and $51 respectively. The highest average salary paid rural teachers was $91, which was paid in Jefferson County. Montgomery County led in the payment of the highest salary to high school teacher, which was $110.

Minister—And what does your mother do for you when you've been a good girl?

Mary—She lets me stay home from church.

Mary — If you please, ma'am, the cat's had chickens.

Mistress — Nonsense, Mary; you mean kittens.

Mary—Was them chickens or kittens you brought home this morning?

Mistress—Chickens, of course.

Mary—Well, mum, them's what the cat's had.

"Beg your pardon, but what is your name, sir? the hotel clerk asked.

"Name!" echoed the indignant guest, who had just signed the register, "don't you see my signature there?"

"Of course," answered the clerk. "That's what aroused my curiosity."

Daughter—But I only stayed for a second.

Father — Nonsense! I distinctly heard the third, fourth and fifth.

FOR BICE FOR CLERK

To the Voters of Chilton County:

Here are some things I want the voters of Chilton County to consider when you go to the polls to nominate a man for Circuit Clerk June 12.

Mr. Bice is young and alert and about the age man we need for the Circuit Clerk's office. He has been highly recommended by the business men of Thorsby, a fact I hope you will give deep consideration. We need to nominate men for office who brings the right recommendation to the voters. When you select men to run your personal affairs, you select a man who can and will furnish a good recommendation by people whom he has served, and found competent for the job. Such a one he has furnished you with. Also I want to call attention to the fact he received 275 votes in his home Beat, 9. When a man's home beat stays by him 275 strong that man is worthy of your consideration.

Now, a word to the ex-service men. Now, boys, come one and pull for your buddy. He is in every way worthy of your help to put him over the top. Don't stop with your personal vote but show his recommendation to your neighbors who do not take the Union-Banner. And ask their support of him on June 12th.

Readers, when you read this letter, note the contents carefully and I believe you will agree that Bice is the man to nominate for Circuit Clerk.—Yours truly, J. W. Sorrells.

MEN, WOMEN AND THINGS

By Frank Willis Barnett

The last government figures we have seen puts Louisiana in the lead among the southern states in lumber production with an annual cut of more than three billion feet; then Mississippi as second; Alabama as third; Arkansas fourth; Texas fifth and Georgia sixth.

For many years the Silkies were not bred by American poultrymen. The first we ever saw was about 30 years ago. Their feathers are not webbed and are fluffy, standing out from the body in all directions. The ones we saw were used for hatching eggs of other breeds, being good mothers.

That Tallapoosa County still carries the memory of the red man may be found in the names of some of its streams like the Elkahatchie, the Hillabee, the Kowaligas and the Chattasaueika. Some of them we cannot pronounce but they sound musical.

If you have ever been to Birmingport or any of the other terminals on the Warrior system, you know that a towboat represents the detachable power of a tow. It can deliver a string of barges at a wharf and half an hour later be on its way with an entirely new set of barges. The crew does not do the loading and unloading which is done by the terminal operatives, saving valuable time. The towboat is going to play a big part in Birmingham's future.

Oysters require much less time to mature in the waters around Mobile than the ones in colder climates. We hope that the 35,000 barrels of seed planted in Baldwin County a while back by Commissioner I. T. Quinn is but the beginning of a great industry.

We believe in caring for the child, but we fear sometimes we forget about the old people who are forever wondering if their money will hold out until they die. The greatest tragedy of life is not death, but old age without money. You who are in the prime of life had better make some provision for living when you can no longer work.

The last report we had showed that out of the 67 counties in Alabama, some 54 of them had health units—a larger percentage of rural population protected by full time health servive of any of the other states.

A while back we read with interest about "Bee Tourists" in Alabama. It seems that there was a large barge tied up at Columbia loaded with beehives. The raiser takes his bees in the fall down the Chattahoochee River to Florida and brings them back in the Spring, stopping on the way whenever there is a chance for the bees to collect the nectar from the blooming plants of the fields and forests.

Of Anniston's more than 5,000 dwellings, more than 85 per cent of them are owned by residents. Here's hoping that few of them will have to give them up on account of foreclosures.

The peeling comes off of the satsuma like a kid glove from one's hand. It is easy to eat and good to the taste. This hardy little Chinese orange was introduced into Mobile County in 1910. It was the beginning of a great industry in Mobile and Baldwin Counties.

Back as far as 1839 Demopolis had a Masonic Lodge, and ever since then Masonry has flourished in the charming little city on the banks of the Tombigee.

MT. CARMEL NEWS

The health of this community seems to be some improved. We still have the measles though.

We were very much disappointed Saturday and Sunday as our pastor was gone to the Convention at Ft. Worth, Texas, and did not have any preaching service. Our Sunday school met with a good attendance and we had a good many visitors and were glad to have them, and hope they will come back next regular preaching day, if not before.

We wil meet next Sunday at 10:00 o'clock for Sunday school. We invite everyone that can to come and be with us.

We have a good many in our community we would like to have in Sunday school. Remember that visitors are always welcome.

County Farm Agent's Notes

Compiled by J. W. Fant, County Farm Demonstration Agent for Chilton County

CROTALARIA TRIED .... AS SUMMER LEGUME

Auburn, Ala., May 22.—Crotalaria, a new summer-growing annual legume, is being tried out in a small way by farmers in several Alabama counties, according to reports of county agents. "This legume is not relished by livestock and, therefore, it may be especially valuable in those sections where stray stock destroy soybeans, cowpeas, and velvet beans," said J. C. Lowery, extension agronomist of the Alabama Polytechnic Instite. "It is a heavy seeder. Consequently it is an easy matter for farmers to save seed for all their needs. It may have a possibility in sections where corn is planted continuously on bottom lands in that it may reseed itself from year to year."

Most farmers beginning with this crop have planted it in alternate rows with the corn, expecting to let it mature seed this season, and depending on volunteer stands next year. The farmers plan to stop cultivation early to allow the crotalaria to come where volunteer stands are depended on.

Crotalaria spectabilis, early strain, is being used in the trial deminstrations. Mr. Lowery emphasized the point that scarified seed must be used. He advises planting in rows 3 to 4 feet wide and using 5 to 10 pounds of seed per acre. He said that inoculation is not necessary.

No extensive plantings are being made. Practically all farmers growing this crop are planting only a small area for observation and to save seed if it proves to be worthwhile for their farms. If it is a worth while crop for the state, farmers will be able to produce their own seed within a short time.

RURAL REMINDERS

Don't overlook a patch of Otootan soybeans for green grazing for the poultry.

Keep weeds in pastures clipped with mowing machines in order that the good grasses may have a chance to grow.

Farmers having genuine tall-growing Texas Seeded ribbon cane should make sure that other varieties are not planted near it in order that it may be kept pure. It is difficult to get pure seed of the various varities of sorghums.

Several thousand stalks of C. P. 807 sugar cane were distributed over southeast Alabama in March for trial by the farmers.

Cotton of 15/16 inch staple sold on central markets for 21 points or $1.05 per bale, and one-inch staple sold for 59 points, or $2.25 per bale, premium, over 7/8-inch cotton, according to report of May 12 of division of cotton marketing, bureau of agricultural economics, Atlanta, Ga.

The price ratio of Italian cotton on May 11 was 71.5 per cent of American middling compared with 70.4 per cent a month ago and 81.3 per cent a year ago.

The cotton adjustment program should enable many Alabama farmers to improve their pastures and to increase their pasture acreage. The Alabama extension service for a long time has been conducting many pasture improvement demonstrations at various points in the state.

ADJUSTMENT PROGRAM ENTERS SECOND YEAR

Auburn, Ala., May 22.—Farmers of Alabama are receiving a three-fold benefit from the Agricultural Adjustment Administration program which enters its second year this month, the act making it possible having been signed by the president on May 12, 1933, following ten years of agitation on the part of farm organizations for constructive legislation, commented Dr. L. N. Duncan, director of the Auburn extension service.

"This program means primarily more cash, better soils, and more food and feed," Dr. Duncan said. "Farmers who cooperate receive rental and benefit payments in cash. This means better business and better living for all people of the state. The planting of less cotton means that farm people will grow more feed and food crops and live more abundantly. In addition, the Adjustment program makes possible more attention to soil building, as a large part of the acres left out of cotton are being planted to soil-improvement and erosion-preventing crops."

Figures compiled show that the cash benefits from the program run into big figures. During 1933 the government distributed in cash payments and option benefits to Alabama farmers $13,620,892. It is conservatively estimated that reduction in the crop prevented sale at disastrously low prices and added approximately ten million dollars to the value of the Alabama cotton crop. This, added to the cash and option benefit payments, makes a total of close to twenty two million dollars which Alabama farmers received because they cooperated in cutting the surplus.

In addition to the 1933 benefits, Alabama farmers will receive for reducing their acreage in 1934 approximately $10,500,000 and it is hoped that cotton reduction will result in higher prices.

GRANT THANKS VOTERS

To the Republican Voters of Chilton County:

I wish to take this opportunity to express my sincere appreciation of the vote and influence of those who supported me in the recent campaign. Although I lost, I appreciate those who supported me just as much as if I had won, and I hold no ill will toward those who saw fit to support either of my opponents.

Again thanking my friends for their loyalty and encouragement, I am, very truly yours,—Ralph D. Grant.

Montgomery, Ala., May 22. — Wet, gentle hands can be made to save millions of undersized fish so that they may grow up to be big fish, says the Alabama Game and Fish News.

An experiment carried on recently by the U. S. Bureau of Fisheries show that practically 99 out of 100 fish so handled survive.

Out of 288 small mouthed black bass, caught on treble hooks, and then transported in buckets and automobiles, only four died. These fish were placed in brood ponds at one of the bureau's fish hatcheries and were observed for months.

Many sportsmen have questioned the wisdom of putting back undersized fish that had been hooked, fearing that they would die. However, it seems that the only appreciable danger is not in the hooking, but the handling of the fish in taking it off the hook or hooks. If the hands are dry they disturb the muscous protective shee or "slime" on the outside of the fish, and fungi attack the disturbed places and kill the fish eventually.

By wetting the hands thoroughly and handling the fish gently, preferably by grasping the fish by the underjaw rather than by the body, this danger is eliminated.

RATIONAL TURPENTINING

Montgomery, Ala., May 22.—A sample of the proper methods of turpentining is to be found in the operations of Mr. G. D. Cotton of Hobson, Washington County, Alabama. A tree 40 feet tall and 14 inches in diameter at breast height may be regarded as a fair specimen. This tree has been chipped for fourteen years, yielding a total to date of a barrel of crude gum with a gross value of $3.00. Each season the tree has yielded 14 cups of 1½ pints each, 2 cups being dipped every four weeks and 14 cups per year.

Only one face has been worked at a time. One side was worked for seven years and this season will finish seven years on the opposite face. At the end of this season another face will be started on one of the remaining quarters of the tree. From every indication it appears that the tree can be worked for another fourteen years. During the period of the operations no fire has been allowed in the woods and the tree has made excellent growth notwithstanding the chipping.

NO CONFLICT BETWEEN THE RESEARCH AND CROP CUTS

There is supposed to be a conflict between agricultural science and the need to adjust agricultural science enables farmers to increase the crop yields per acre, and increase the output of mat and milk per unit of feed consumed. As the users of agricultural improvements increase in number, output increases until prices fall. How can all this be reconciled with the need to make supply and demand balance?

What would happen were the farmers to abandon science, or even to use it with greatly decreased efficiency? They would have to continue plowing, sowing and reaping. But they would use poor machinery, poor technique and poor seed. They would allow pests and diseases to ravage their crops and would harvest inefficiently what remained. By so doing they would certainly reduce the output. But they would do so at a cost ruinous to themselves. They would increase their unit costs of production out of all proportion to any conceivable gain in prices.

From its start the United States Department of Agriculture, the state experiment stations, and state extension forces. Efficiency in the old sense of the word, however, is not enough. As farmers well know, profits cannot be got just by improving plants and livestock, by fighting diseases and pests, or by reducing the wastes of marketing. Ordinarily technical efficiency reduces only the cost of production. Low-cost production may mean loss to the farmer if it is excessive production. Under present conditions it is necessary also to adjust the output to a changed world market.

Action taken under the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1933 enables farmers to plan their production. It seeks to transform blind competition into broadvisioned cooperation, and to correct the result of previous mistakes. Meantime scientists continue their research in various problems of farm production. These two kinds of departmental activity must march together.

Agriculture needs not less science in its production, but more science in its production, and more science in its economic life. It is possible to have a full science, embracing the distribution as well as the production of wealth.

To produce efficiently is to release time and energy for other uses, adding to the enrichment of life. Not to produce as efficiently as possible would be silly. Not to regulate the total volume of production, to relate it to consumptive demand, also would be silly. No factory is expected to produce without regard to the market conditions. No factory is expected to fail, even when producing at less than capacity, to take advantage of new efficiencies. The same reasoning applies to agriculture.

THE DANGEROUS HOUSE FLY

The house fly is the most dangerous pest we have in the home. It carries the germs that cause nearly every disease known. Among these are typhoid fever and tuberculosis.

It breeds in filth. Sanitation is its most deadly enemy. Let's clean up the place, back yard, chicken house, barn, and especially the toilet. Either build a sanitary pit toilet, or screen the open toilet so that flies cannot get inside the toilet.

Just one small breeding place will furnish enough flies to annoy the whole family all summer. If one pair of flies, one male, one female, emerge in April and all their off-spring were to live, there would be 191,000,000,000,000,000,000 flies. This is enough flies to infest the whole face of the earth, eight to the cubic inch, to a depth of 47 feet.

Clean the cow stalls and mule stables often and carry the manure to the field and scatter. The flies develop from the egg to the adult fly in 10 to 12 days.

Don't blame your neighbor for your flies, for a fly seldom goes more than 300 yards from where it develops. So clean up your own premises and you will get rid of most of your flies.

Screen your house and protect your family from the most dangerous pest on earth.

FORD V-8 SETS DIRT RECORD

A new world's dirt track record for a 250 mile course was established last week at Oakland, California, when Louis Meyer, driving a Ford V-8, took first place, covering the distance in 3 hours, 13 minutes 4-3|5 seconds. Twenty stock cars participated in the race which was held on a dry track with excellent weather conditions prevailing.

The first six cars to finish were Ford V-8's piloted by such well known stars of the track as Sam Palmer, Danny De Paolo, Ted Horn, Mel Kenealy and Al Gordon.

Throughout the grind the winner's car performed consistently and under his masterful handling was able to sweep on to one of the most impressive victories ever seen at the famous California track. The fact that the first six cars to finish were Ford V-eights was hailed by Ford officials and Ford dealers as another striking indication of the consistent speed and the excellent maneuverability of this car and also demonstrated the manner in which a stock car of this type stands up under the terrific punishment which is the portion of any car which goes this distance on a dirt track.

NIGHT PASTURES FOR HORSES

Some people believe that horses at hard work do not do well if turned on pasture at night, says E. W. Sheets, of the United States Department of Agriculture. It has hardly more truth than the supposition that a good sized thunderstorm will curdle new milk.

Work horses will pull through a period of hard farm work in much better condition if they are turned out in pastures at night to get some succlent food, take a good roll and rest in the cool air, than if kept up in a hot barn.

Although pasture-fed horses will sweat more than those kept off gross, Mr. Sheets points out that a sweating horse will seldom get a sunstroke. Grain and hay should be fed in addition to the pasture for horses at hard work and sale should always be available, because sweating reduces the body's content of salt.

With the tendency toward overproduction of grain crops, farmers are being urged to put more land, particularly good land, into pastures, while the gross income per acre may not be so greatly as from cultivated crops, the net income from good pastures frequently is greater.

OAK GROVE B. Y. P. U.

The president calls for a unified business meeting, Thursday evening, May 24, at 7:30 o'clock, as there is some very important business to attend to. We urge that all B. Y. P. U. members will be there and be there on time. On some occasions members fail to attend because the program isn't interesting and well-planned. But you need not stay away this time on this account. A carefully planned program is outlined and everyone that comes will be sure of a helpful and interesteing meeting. The meeting will be held at the church with an invitation extended to anyone who will help, to make the meeting a success. Come with praying hearts and a broad smile. The admission is a heart full of love.

Without Impurities ... DEATH!

"A Pure Food and Drug Act for plants would be a death warrant to all living creatures."

—SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN

READ the above statement again. It seems strange. Yet no truer words have ever been written. If all impurities were eliminated from the soil, no man, no beast, no living thing, could stay alive.

Chilean Natural Nitrate, for many years, has stressed the importance of its Nature-given impurities. This magic plant food is the only nitrogen that comes from the ground. It is the only nitrate that contains Nature's blend of rare elements. . . Nature's own balance of vital impurities.

So you see the importance of protecting yourself by specifying Chilean when you buy nitrate. There are two kinds, Champion Brand (granulated) and Old Style. Both are genuine Chilean. Both are natural. Both have the vital impurities. You are safe with either one.

PLEASANT GROVE
JEMISON

Sunday school and B. Y. P. U. are progressing very well, but not like they should, dear people. Let's attend and make a success of our Master's work.

Mrs. Clarence Marcus and little son, Aldene, are visiting her home folks, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Wright, for a few days.

Mrs. Emmett Miskelley is on the sick list. We hope for her a speedy recovery.

The Misses Champion had their sister and husband, Mr. and Mrs. Will Kellum, and Mr. Joe Lucas and little daughter and son, Mary Nell and Jimmy Glenn, all of Belle Ellen, as guests Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Davenport and children, Edith and James Frank, were also visitors of the Misses Champion Sunday.

A number of our people went to Providence Sunday and reported a real nice time.

Mrs. E. C. Davenport and daughter, Odis, and Mrs. John Davenport were the guests of Mrs. Arthur Maddox on Sunday afternoon.

A large crowd enjoyed a very pleasant evening at the home of Miss Gail Gletty Saturday. Some one was so unappreciative of the hospitality shown them as to take two small, pure white Angora kittens, valuable pets of the family. Any help from the readers of this paper indicating them, would certainly be appreciated by the family.

Mr. and Mrs. Monroe Waller and son, James, Jr., of Birmingham, spent Saturday night with Mr. and Mrs. Emmett Miskelley.

Rev. Bryan of Birmingham, a young man who sang, and our pastor, Rev. Maurice Hodgens, were here Monday night. Rev. Bryan gave a wonderful lecture on Palestine, and also the Oak Grove quartet sang several songs and they were wonderful. We will be glad to have them all come back again.

Mr. Herman Freeman is visiting his aunt, Mrs. Arthur Maddox.

Mrs. Emmett Miskelley and Mrs. Hermie Hodgens are both taking treatment from Dr. Franklin. We hope that they will soon be well.

W. L. Sanders Explains Plans

To the Voters of Chilton County:

Some of my supporters have asked me to re-state and clerify a portion of my platform as a candidate for representative to the legislature of Alabama.

I wish to say that if I have failed to make myself clear on any question it was because I didn't want to annoy the voters with long letters through the paper.

To go into deltail of all questions mentioned would require considerable space. However, I am open on any and all questions of interest to the people.

First, I want to say that my experience on the farm and in the shops certainly enables me to know something about the problems of the laboring class. I know what it is to eat bread by the sweat of my brow. I know what it is to pay taxes to support an extravagant government. I know what is to take whatever price I can get for my produce and then have to pay the other man's price for the stuff I have to buy.

With this experience, surely none would think that I would cast a vote to increase the tax burden, or in any way give the money kings any more power than they now have.

My sympathy is for the working class, and if elected to the legislature my vote shall be for them.

Look at the millions of workers to day suffering because they have made too much stuff. People going naked because they have made too much clothing. Men plowing up their cotton, in tatters and rags, starving to death because they have made too much corn and wheat. People going barefoot because of an over-production of shoes. Eating bread without meat because they raised too many hogs.

The fact is, the more the people make the less they have.

The question naturally arises, What is the trouble? The system under which we live is responsible for our condition. Then what brought about this system that makes the rich richer and the poor, poorer? The answer is, the laws that regulate our system.

The next question is, Who made the laws? Was it men from among the laboring class, or was it men who never knew the problems of the laboring class?

If all the law makers of our country were made to eat bread by the sweat of their brow for twelve months I feel like they would abolish and ammend the laws to the extent that a system of justice would be set up.

For many years we have looked forward with hope that conditions would get better and the band of bondage would be broken, but to our sorrow conditions get worse instead of better.

Now if we wish to continue in the same old rut, we should continue to vote for the same old political pharaoh's that brought the plague of starvation in our land of plenty. I don't intend to say that I can change the condition, but I do say that if the majority of our law makers in the state legislature and in Washington were of the laboring class, conditions would be changed. There wouldn't be so many new jobs and offices created in order to place a special friend on the tax payer's pay roll.

There wouldn't be some jackleg officer in the bushes ready to pick you up for hunting on your neighbors land without license, or for catching a fish that is an inch too short. It seems there are numbers of such laws passed for not other purpose than to make criminals in order to have a case to plead in court.

Who made the law? Who pleads the case? Who pays the bill?

We have so many laws we can't turn around without being criminals. Then who can truly sing, "My Country Tis of Thee, Sweet Land of Li-bertee?" This poetry is out of date and should read, "This is a land of miser-ree, since we've been lawed into sla-ver-ee."

Laws are for the purpose of protecting peoples' rights, but often they are unjustly made and used to take them. The people who labored and created the wealth of this country are the ones that suffer most.

If elected to the legislature my promise to you is, that I shall support all laws that give equal rights to all and special favors to none.

My hands shall be tied to nothing but duty and justice. I have no votes to buy. I have no votes to sell. I have no fight to make for or against any of the various candidates for the different places. I am making the race for representative. I am willing to face my past record anywhere and any time.

I am asking for your votes on June the 12th that I might cast a vote for you in the next legislature. Anything you do in my behalf will be greatly appreciated.

Yours truly,
W. L. SANDERS.

UNION-BANNER WILL PRINT BIBLE STORIES IN PICTURES

The Union-Banner has arranged to print a series of Bible pictures, or rather picture stories, the 2nd of which appears on another page of this issue. There are forty-eight of these pictures, and every one of them very interestingly depict a Bible story that you have read about in your family Bible or have heard your preacher tell about. Look up these pictures in this paper. We do not promise to run one every week, but they will be used as space will permit until all forty-eight have been printed.

These pictures and the right to run them cost The Union-Banner real hard money, and we want our readers to get the benefit of it. They are no kind of advertising or free stuff that some propagandist furnishes to put a biased idea over, but are real reproductions from artists of world-wide fame. It will be worth your while to read and study these pictures.

REFUGE NEWS

The singing at this place Sunday was one of the best ever held here. The interest was exceptionally good from the very outset until the closing song at 4:00 p.m., although only a few songs were sung in the forenoon. The old books were used until 11:20 at which time our pastor, M. Lockhart, delivered a masterful message. His message was based on the text found in Psalms 61:2, "Take me to the rock that is higher than I." Useless to say, many could be seen weeping

This brought us to the noon hour at which time a bountiful dinner was spread by the good ladies of this and other communities both far and near, while the brethren were experiencing an old time hand shake and renewing old acquaintances. Of course this reminded us of olden days at Refuge. Yet we can hardly say olden days, because our little church is only 15 years old. The writer has experienced all the uprisings and the downsettings of this little church. Useless to say, Satan has tried desperately to crumble the very foundation. We are happy to say that we are once more on the upward trend.

Dinner is now over, and we are back in the house with every seat filled to its capacity and men standing in the rostrum, isles and doors. Our pastor, filling his place as chairman for the afternoon, sung the first song, of which the title was "Jesus is King Up There." Prayer by Rev. J. L. Smith.

Directors for the days were as follows: Marion Mims, R. M. Robinson, Lee Grant, A. O. Boswell, Ralph Grant, C. H. Robinson, Bill Coggins, Dewey Hughes, S. V. Miller, L. Grant, Dock Harris, Floy Devaughn, Mr. Williams, J. Z. Mims, John Cleckler, Chester Wyatt, Gerthie Easterling, Virgil Smith, Clarence Mims.

The arranging committee was composed of the following: Clarence Mims, Virgil Smith, T. B. Easterling. These brethren are due consideration for the splendid way in which the program was arranged.

The closing song was sung by the pastor, title, "Tell Me Who is My Neighbor." Everybody seemed to chime in on this wonderful song. The pastor's remarks before singing this song were "If we can't live neighborly, we can't be spirit filled at church." The benediction was offered by Mr. J. Z. Mims.

Remember next Saturday and Sunday are our regular preaching days.

SUNDAY DINNER SUGGESTIONS

By ANN PAGE

THIS week brings three fine days which should be enjoyed since fresh fish is plentiful and cheap. If fish is not desired quite so frequently, dishes combined of eggs or cheese, which are excellent values at present, with vegetables are delicious and satisfying. A vegetable plate consisting of asparagus souffle or omelet carrots and peas and a baked potato would be welcomed by most people.

Fruit desserts should also be popular with the large available selection, among them cantaloupe and honeydew melons, pineapple, strawberries, sweet cherries, raspberries as well as the usual excellent bananas and oranges.

The Quaker Maid suggests the following menus.

Low Cost Dinner

Pan-broiled Chopped Meat
Creamed Potatoes Buttered Onions
Bread and Butter
Chocolate Pudding
Tea or Coffee Milk

Medium Cost Dinner

Roast Veal Scalloped Potatoes
Stringless Beans
Bread and Butter
Strawberry Bavarian
Coffee Milk

Very Special Dinner

Cantaloupe
Roast Beef Browned Potatoes
Mashed Yellow Squash
Combination Salad
Rolls and Butter
Chocolate Refrigerator Roll

The Story of the Bible Told in Pictures

Man Created in the Image of God.—After God created fish and fowl, beasts and cattle, and everything that creeps upon the earth after its kind, He created man in His own image and gave him dominion over the brand-new planet. The Biblical account of man's creation is recorded in Gen. 2: 7: "And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul." One of a series of Bible pictures made by Matthew Merian, Seventeenth century engraver.

Reynolds Defends His Actions In Dealing With Commissioners Court

To the Republican Voters of Chilton County:

I entered the campaign for Judge of Probate last February, hoping that the Republican voters of Chilton County would have an opportunity on May 1st to express their choice for the different county officers freely, without undue persuasion, and knowing the true record of the candidates. I did not make a house to house canvass for two reasons; one, that I was engaged in the duties of the office of Judge of Probate and the Relief Program took every minute of my time; second, that I stated my cause publicly through the newspapers and by public speakings. I received 1149 votes, being 204 votes more than any other candidate for Judge of Probate received. I was invited to several communities to make speeches. I refrained from criticizing any candidate and I did not send out high pressure riders to try to persuade the Republican voters to vote for me. I am sorry that there was such a private campaign conducted over the county by some parties. Especially during the last few days of the campaign I was criticized most severely by some of the county officials and others who were spending most of their time criticizing me. Even during the night before the election, great deal of untrue propaganda and misrepresentation of the records were spread to a good many of the voters of this county. I have never believed in private campaigns, because the candidates have too much opportunity of telling a different story to suit every voter's whim. Really in this way a candidate's past record and what he intends to do in the future cannot be ascertained. For the entire time I have been in public life I have always been willing and anxious for the people to know of my official acts, but I feel that these should be presented to the people according to the records and not in the way that some disgruntled person or office holder may tell the people in the night time, when this person is sore at me because I have been the means of drawing the latch strings of the county treasury against this person.

The record I have made in office will bear me out when I say that it has always been my chief concern that the affairs of the county be carried on as economically as possible. When there are officials trying to get every cent possible out of the county, certainly the duty should fall upon someone to protect the finances of the county and to save the taxpayer as much as possible. The fact that this county, in a financial way, stands near the top of the list of counties of the state bespeaks the results of a close and watchful administration of the taxpayer's money.

It is no secret that some of the members of the Commissioners Court are opposed to me and that we have not agreed upon many of the matters that have come before the Court. It has been charged all over the county that I have arbitrarily refused to write warrants for claims passed by the Court of County Commissioners. It is true that I have refused to write warrants for many claims presented by the Court. These claims, however, were illegal and not proper charges against Chilton County. My action was not arbitrary, but was within my rights, and was done because the warrants were not legal charges against the county. It has been necessary for me to refuse to write warrants for claims presented by some members of the Court of County Commissioners. A reference to these claims will show that some members of the Court made claims for practically every day since they went in office, and for many acts for which the law provides no compensation. An official who handles the finances of the county should strive to deal with these matters just as economically as if they were his own private affairs, and an official who strives to get all the money possible for a selected few, without any consideration of the best interests of the county, will eventually bring the county into bankruptcy. It has been necessary that I refuse to write several claims presented by Commissioner J. C. Atchison, as these claims were clearly illegal and have been held so according to many opinions of the Attorney General.

At a recent meeting of the Court of County Commissioners held on May 14, 1934, Mr. Atchison presented a claim for Commissioner's services in the sum of $106.25. The overseers in Mr. Atchison's District presented claims as follows:

"1934—M. S. McGee, Beat 7. Road Overseer; April 2nd 1 day; 3rd 1 day; 4th 1 day; 10th 1 day; 5 day's work as foreman at $2.50 per day, Beat 7,—$12.50.

"1934—Sherman Motley, Road Overseer; May 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, (7) ½ day, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 30, 24½ days work on public roads as overseer at $2.50 per day—$61.25; May 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12; 10 day's work on public roads as overseer at $2.50 per day; $25.00; total $86.25.

"1934—Charlie Mitchell Road Overseer; April 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 10, 11, 13, 14, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27; 20 days work at $2.50 per days, as overseer on public roads in Beat 8, total $50.00.

"1934—Beat 15, R. W. Kendrick, Road Overseer; April 4, 1 day on Williams Bridge, $2.50; April 5, 1 day on Anderson Bridge, $2.50; April 11-12, 2 days on Billingsley Road, $5.00; April 16, 17, 18; 3 days on water boxes and bridges, Plantersville, Pletcher and Billingsley Roads, $7.50; May 8, 9, 10, 11, 12; 5 days on Langston Road, $12.50; total $30.00.

"1934—J. F. Giles, Road Overseer, Beat 15, Road Work; April 3, on John Scott R., $2.50; April 20, on Enoch Culp R., $2.50; April 21, on Mt. Nebo R., $2.50; April 23, on John Culp R., $2.50; April 30, on Less Broadhead R., $2.50; May 9, on Pletcher R., $2.50; May 10, on Jim Short R., $2.50; total $17.50."

It will be observed that Mr. Atchison's claim and his five road overseers in his District total $302.00. During this same period of time the claims for road hands in Mr. Atchison's District, and under the supervision of these five overseers, total $25.00. In other words the "bosses" got $302.00 and the persons doing the work got $25.00. It should be apparent to the voters of the county that Chilton County did not receive the benefits it was entitled to from this expenditure of public money and to allow this to continue means that Chilton County, now near the top of the list in Alabama, will, in a short while, be struggling for existance.

In the discharge of my official duties it has also become necessary that I refuse to write numerous claims presented to the Court of County Commissioners by Mr. W. H. Gillespie, Sheriff of our county, and others in which Mr. Gillespie was directly interested. These claims were clearly illegal and many of them involved the expenditure of large sums of money for which the county could not possibly be liable. It is my information that, and I presume it is no secret, that Mr. Gillespie and some of his deputies have spent a great deal of their time criticizing me throughout the county. I have no objection to this criticism, and if they will stay with the record and tell you voters openly why they oppose me, I have no objections. I prefer that they come out openly that I may have an opportunity to answer their statements and defend my record.

I think I am correct in saying that during the time Mr. Gillespie has held the office of Sheriff it is the first time in many years that the Fine and Forfeiture Fund has been unable to meet the claims presented against it. On January 1st, 1933, there was $4.10 to the credit of the Fine and Forfeiture Fund. On May 10th, 1933, the Court of County Commissioners, at the instance and solicitations of Mr. Gillespie, made an order transferring $2,000 from the General Fund to the Fine and Forfeiture Fund. The Commissioners had no authority to make this order and to divert $2,000 of the county funds in this manner. I refused to write this order transferring these funds, but the treasurer's report shows that on May 19th, 1933, $2,000 was transferred from the General Fund to the Fine and Forfeiture Fund of the county. This treasurer's report also reflects that on May 11th, 1933, Mr. W. H. Gillespie received of this $2,000, $753.55; and his deputies received more than $100. Also that Mr. J. Z. Mims, the Clerk of the Circuit Court, received from this $2,000 on May 10th and 11th the sum of $933.33. These and many other matters are of public record and the voters may find out the truth of what I am saying.

There has been considerable criticism as to the manner in which the gasoline, purchased by the county, free of taxes, has been handled. Some of those politically opposed to me have taken the opportunity of trying to hold me, along with the Court of County Commissioners, responsible for this. Several years ago when the county first commenced to purchase gasoline by wholesale, the Court of County Commissioners passed certain rules and regulations for the handling of the same. These rules were strictly observed until the early part of the pear 1933, when the Court of County Commissioners elected them a clerk and took over the handling of the gasoline.

These rules and regulations are yet in force and effect in Chilton County, but have been totally ignored in the handling of gasoline. If these rules and regulations as to the handling of this gasoline had been observed by the parties in charge of the same, you could accurately tell how each gallon of gasoline purchased by the county was used, but the way the matter is now handled thousands of gallons of gasoline paid for with county funds could be diverted to private use and there would be no way of finding out who was responsible therefor.

It is no secret that majority of the members of the Commissioners Court do not counsel or advise with me in regard to a great portion of the administration of the county's affairs, and I am frank to say that no one in the county knows to what extent the handling of the county's gasoline is being abused.

I could not attempt to cite all the many instances where it has become necessary for me to block the plans of persons attempting to secure funds of the county illegally or without the county receiving any benefit therefrom. I did not mention this before the other primary, and I am telling it now in answer to campaigns made by some of those opposing me and in order that the voters of the county may weigh their interest in this campaign. This is not the first time that I have been criticized, nor will it be the last; but I want to make this promise to the people of the county that if I am elected Judge of Probate, it shall be my policy to protect the finances of the county, pay the honest obligations and to see that our county holds its own among the other counties of the state. I promise you that I will use my power to see that the taxpayers get a dollar's value for each dollar paid, and that every person in Chilton County shall receive fair distribution of whatever money or work the county spends or has to offer.

The facts I have given above are of records, and may be verified by any voter who may be interested. I reluctantly bring these matters to the attention of the voters of the county, as the oppositions will probably charge that I am stirring up strife in the party, which I have tried to avoid; but in justice to myself and my supporters, these false charges must be answered and the truth must be known. Had these false accusasions not been made, it was not my purpose to bring them to light, but if the Republican party is to survive in our county, county affairs must be handled cleanly, openly and above board, and its up to the Republican Party to see that this is done, otherwise, the opposition will take advantage of this, and regardless of who the nominee of the Republican Party may be, these issues must be met or our nominees will suffer defeat this fall.

Respectfully,
L. H. REYNOLDS.

Why Doctors Favor a Liquid Laxative

A doctor will tell you that the careless use of strong laxatives may do more harm than good.

Harsh laxatives often drain the system, weaken the bowel muscles, and even affect the liver and kidneys.

Fortunately, the public is fast returning to laxatives in liquid form. The dose of a liquid laxative can be measured. The action can thus be regulated to suit individual need. It forms no habit; you needn't take a "double dose" a day or two later.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin gently helps the average person's bowels back to regularity. Why not try it? Some pill or tablet may be more convenient to carry. But there is little "convenience" in any cathartic which is taken so frequently, you must carry it with you, wherever you go!

Its very taste tells you Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is wholesome. A delightful taste, and delightful action. Safe for expectant mothers, and children. All druggists, ready for use, in big bottles. Member N. R. A.

UNIVERSITY NEWS

University, Ala., May 22.—Dr. John Howard Ferguson of Yale University and Dr. Albert Sydney Harris of Banks, Ala., a graduate of Washington University, St. Louis, are to come to the University of Alabama next fall to join the faculty of the School of Medicine, Dean Stuart Graves announced Saturday.

Dr. Ferguson will become assistant professor of physiology and pharmacology, suceeding Dr. Gene H. Kistler who is transferring to the department of pathology and bacteriology as associate professor. Dr. Harris will serve as instructor in physiology and pharmacology.

Dr. Ferguson is a native of Edinburg, Scotland. He went to South Africa and was graduated from the University of Cape Town in 1921, taking the A. B. Degree with distinction in anatomy and physiology. After spending one year in his alma mater as lecturer in pharmacology, he won a Rhodes scholarship and went to Oxford, England.

In addition to his teaching, Prof. Ferguson has continued his research and has published several articles in British and American medical journals. His present research is centered in investigations pertaining to the central nervous system. In this field his research will be coordinated with that of Prof. Allen D. Keller, head of the department of physiology and pharmacology.

Dr. Harris has also crowded a great deal of experience into his 31 years, Dean Graves stated. After graduating from the Troy State Teachers College in 1923, he was teacher of science and athletics in the Piper-Colcanor Jr. High School for one year and in the Macon County High school for two years. The next year he taught mathematics in Sumpter County High. From 1926 to 1929 he was principal of the Chisholm junior high in Montgomery.

In 1930 he enrolled at the University of Alabama, receiving his B. S. in 1930. While here, he held a fellowship in chemistry. For a year after graduation he was director of physical education in the Alabama Institute for deaf and blind. For the following two years he acted as instructor in physics of sound at Teachers Training College of central institute for the deaf in St. Louis. In 1933 he secured the Jackson Johnson Fellowship in the department of Physiology at Washington University under Prof. Erlanger and took his Ph. D. degree from this institution this year.

Dr. Harris has also been carrying on investigations relating to the central nervous system. He brings to the University a reputation for unusual skill and technique in that field, Dr. Graves stated.

Dr. Marie C. D'Amour of the medical faculty is leaving to return to her home in Colorado to supplement her Ph. D. degree with medical studies. She will enter the University of Colorado School of Medicine to work on the M. D. degree.

Dean Graves also announced the appointment of Jesse L. Walker of Columbus, Miss., as technician for the coming year in the department of physicology and pharmacology. He took his A. B. from Alabama this year and has served as assistant in the department of zoology under Prof. J. Henry Walker, Jr.

The gold medals for highest scholarship in Italian in the department of romance languages at the University of Alabama have been awarded to students by the Italian government, Dr. John C. Dawson, department head announces.

To Joseph N. Cunningham of Atmore, went the gold medal of highest scholarship in the course dealing with the life and works of Dante. Cunningham recently received his master of arts degree from the University and has been assistant instructor in the department for the past two years. Cunningham won the gold medal in 1933 for highest scholarship in the first year Italian class. He is a member of Phi Beta Kappa and Kappa Delta Pi, national honorary scolastic fraternities.

Dean Helle, of Hinsdale, Ill., was awarded the gold medal for producing the best essay dealing with the life and works of Dante. Louis M. Polichino, of Houston, Texas., junior in arts and sciences, was awarded the gold medal for highest scholarship in the first year class. This contest was open to undergraduates only. Honorable mention was given to Herbert Van Scoy, Rippey, Iowa, a graduate student in the department.

Mrs. Watkins will be assisted by Mrs. James Fitts Hill of Montgomery and Miss Mary England of the state department of education in conducting a week's course for members of the Alabama Congress attending the Institute. Mrs. Hill, president of the Alabama Congress, states that certificates of attendance will be given every woman attending the institute.

During a political campaign in Minnesota not so long ago a publicity man hailed a candidate one day and said:

"James, there is a paper in this town that says you're illiterate."

"Illiterate!" bellowed the politician. "I ain't either—I was the second child in the family."

BOB JONES

COMMENTS ON HERE AND HEREAFTER.

Recently the editor, in correspondence with a young minister accused this minister of being a modernist. The young man wrote, "If you call one who tried to live as God would have him live—to preach that Jesus' salvation of humanity and God was sufficient for the salvation of humanity and of the world—then I am willing for you to brand me as a modernist." I brand him. He is a modernist. I know that language. Jesus came to this world to die. He said, "My father and I are one." He was a revelation of God. He said, "He that hath seen me hath seen the father." That is all true but the salvation of this world depended upon Him death. The death of Jesus Christ was vicarious and substitutional. He died on the account of the sinner. He died in the place of the sinner. He came to this world to die. He said so. When He was nearing the end He said, "For this end came I into the world." Jesus should know why He came. He said He came to die.

Modernism talks about the sermon on the mount and the ethical teachings of Jesus. Modernism uses high sounding words about Jesus being the revelation of humanity and God, but modernism repudiates the blood which Jesus Christ shed on the cross. Modernism speaks of Jesus as an example. Orthodoxy says He is an example, but He is a savior. It is at the cross where we get the power to live the sermon on the mount. "Without the shedding of blood there is no remission for sin."

CHAS COOPER WRITES CONCERNING WORK

Referring to a letter appearing in this paper a few weeks ago concerning a plan by which several people would be able to obtain work in connection with a position I had accepted with a Tennessee Company, beg to advise that the preliminary surveys are practically complete, and that several will have a chance to work when the water in the river has gone down. The nature of this work is to gather mussell shells from the waters of the river. Now to those who think that they would like to work at this business, I will be glad if you will drop me a line giving your address. I have been informed that more than one thousand men make their living in this line of business on the White River up in Missouri and Arkansas. These men, I have been told, make from ten to twenty dollars per week, with a chance of finding some pearls that really bring money.

If the rain holds up for a while we ought to be able to get several men at work during the next thirty days.

I notice in a recent issue of this paper a letter from Mr. Shaw, one of the recent candidates, who failed to get enough votes to ring the bell. Brother Shaw seems to think, from the way he writes that the reason he did not get a sufficient quantity of votes was because someone or ones had told a lot of tales on him.

Brother Shaw, you should never worry about little things like that. It almost always happens that someone will tell a few tales on most everyone who gets into a political race. I happened to be numbered among the lost myself, but so far I have been able to bear the strain of disappointment and feel that after a while I will get over it. I feel that the ones who failed to vote for me are the ones that made the error, but I also feel that they thought they were doing the right thing that they should do, hence I have no bad feeling towards them. Next time I run for anything I am going to do my best to get all to vote for me.

In the past I have submitted bids on lots of building projects, and quite a number of times I have missed the job, but missing a job is not so bad after a person gets in the habit of missing once in a while.

In conclusion, let me ask that each voter try his best to vote for the candidate in the June primary that will be able to beat the stew out of the Democrats this fall.—Yours for the success of our entire ticket, Chas. Cooper.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

(By Frank P. Litschert

The opinion of Attorney General Cummings to the effect that nations making token payments on their war debts may still be considered defaulters under the Johnson Act, has once more brought the debt question to the forefront at Washington. Representatives of the principal debtor nations at Washington have begun to make inquiries as to whether their countries will really be considered defaulters if they make token payments, and are politely being referred to the opinion of the Attorney General. There is little question about what Senator Johnson, the author of the bill which prevents defaulting nations from obtaining credits in the United States, thinks concerning it.

Senator Johnson denounces token payments as a sham. The acceptance of so-called "token payments" from Great Britain, he says, in view of the fact that John Bull has a surplus instead of a deficit in his treasury, is an "absurdity, a farce and a delusion." This ought to furnish food for thought on the part of France, Belgium and other defaulters, who are now said to be considering the offering of token payments on June 15 in an effort to get off Uncle Sam's blacklist.

The French, it is said, contemplate the offering of a token payment in the hope that negotiations will then be opened looking toward the further scaling down of the French debt. Since the French are now paying on a fraction of the total debt, that part which was contracted before the armistice having been already wiped out, if Uncle Sam cancels much more of it, there won't be enough left to pay for a single CWA project. Some folks say, of course, that it is better to get something than nothing, which is all we may expect to get if the debts are not reduced. But there are two sides to this argument. Rather than acept a little "chicken feed" in payment of the debt it might be better business for Uncle Sam to permit the debtor nations to default and take the consequences. Then the amount owed could be carried on our official ledger in large figures made in red ink, as a warning to our government to go slowly, in the event European countries get in trouble again and want to borrow money from Uncle Sam to "save the world for democracy." If the defaults, coupled with the Johnson Act, should teach Uncle Sam to go slowly about lending his money to welching creditors, the lesson may be worth all it cost, some time in the future. You never can tell.

Incidentally, it is said that France now desires to make some sort of "settlement" with the United States for the favorable effect it will have on public opinion here. France, it is said, fears that in the not distant future she may need our help again. We will, of course, be very glad to receive from France a check for settlement of her debt, and it would have a favorable effect on public opinion here. But if the French think that this would "line-up" Uncle Sam for a plunge into a future European cock-fight, they certainly have another think coming. We are not going to do that as long as we retain our sanity.

There is another interesting thing to think about. Up to this time France and most of the other debtor nations have really not paid us anything on what they owe us. They have not only turned over to us the money which they obtained in the way of reparations. When the reparations stopped, they stopped paying us. But that isn't all of it, either. The money which Germany used to pay reparations to France and other nations, she borrowed from us. Therefore we loaned money to Germany to turn over to France to pay back to us. In other words, we have been paying Europe's war debts to ourselves. And yet a lot of people think that Uncle Sam is so clever in international politics and finane that he ought to join the League of Nations and the World Court.

Plow Up Wheat, Import Rye

The Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Morgenthau, has declined to place an anti-dumping tariff on rye imported into this country from Poland. The Polish government pays what amounts to a bounty of about thirty cents a bushel to grain exporters. Under our law the Secretary of the Treasury, in the face of such a situation, may impose a duty of fifteen cents a bushel. This Mr. Morgenthau declined to do, and, incredible as it may appear, he was supported in his refusal by the Secretary of Agriculture.

Mr. Wallace held that imports of rye have not done significant injury to American grain farmers. That may be true, but the fact remains that rye is a direct competitor of wheat as a breadstuff and of corn as a distiller's grain. There can be little doubt that if the importation of foreign rye had been halted in time the consumption of wheat and corn in this country would have been increased, to some extent at least.

Mr. Wallace does not hesitate to experiment in the destruction of food, and no scheme of acreage reduction can be too fantastic to meet with his approval, but he shrinks from taking a step which can only result in a decrease, however slight, in the surpluses which are depressing our markets. Millions for destruction, he says, but not one cent for increased use.—Chicago Tribune.

Probably there is no particular harm in the new, specially labeled 1934 model NRA pet critter, the Code Eagle. But if Hugh Johnson expects to scare up a lot of wild enthusiasm over his latest fledging we have a notion he is due for same disappointment. After all this is an adult nation and President Roosveelt is not the only person in it who is becoming fed up on kindergarten propaganda methods. We think there is a growing feeling that the one bird the country needs to cherish at present is the American eagle.

The fellow with a pleasing address is the one who can deliver it in about five minutes.

Patriotism or Anarchy

It is to the colleges of America that the country looks for the preservation and inculcation of those ideals of American life which will perpetuate the nation and carry it through the trials and perils which beset its pathway.

If love of country is to be flagrantly flouted in the trainging schools of patriotism what can be hoped of the country's future? The late and venerated President Eliot of Harvard once spoke of a type of undergraduate who was being "educated beyond his intellect."

That statement fairly characterizes some of the glaring weaknesses of modern education. The effort on the part of the teachers and professors who are none too able or profound to avoid the reproach of being regarded as old-fashioned or illiberal has produced much teaching in schools, colleges and universities that is essentially unsound, untestsed by life or experience and positively vicious in tendency and result.

Let's hope the time is fast approaching when a new respect will be shown in the colleges for the fundamental virtues of American character and American patriotism.

Elusive Crop Control

Government control of crop production seems to be about as difficult to put into effect as the prohibition of the sale of alcoholic liquors. No sooner is the trouble scotched in one spot than it breaks out some place else. Take the reduction of the corn crop for example. In the Corn Beit the government crop control has been put into effect, but the reduction of the corn crop will not be as great as anticipated. One of the reasons for this is that while the farmers of the Corn Belt are putting out less corn, the farmers in the cotton states are putting out more. In the nine great cotton states the production of the staple crop has been curtailed. This has left a lot of idle land and it is estimated that down in Dixie at least 1,200,000 acres of this idle land will be put into corn. The thrifty farmers of the South hate to see this land go to waste, so if they can't raise cotton, what is going to prevent them from raising corn?

The net result of this will be that in some of the cotton states, which have always imported corn from the Corn Belt, the farmers will raise enough corn to supply their own needs. This will curtail the market of the farmers of the Corn Belt to a certain extent, but there is nothing they can do about it.

Taking an even wider view, there seems to be more trouble ahead for the crop control plan. While we are cutting down the production of our wheat, Germany is increasing her crop, and Italy and France are becoming self-sustaining, so far as wheat is concerned. While we are reducing our cotton crop Russia is preparing to raise more and to supply the Polish market which has heretofore obtained most of its cotton from the United States. And so it goes. What is Uncle Sam going to do about it? Indeed, what can he do?

But while this effort on the part of the puny human brains to control nature is going on, nature herself may take a hand and solve the problem. Unless there is a lot more rain in the West than is now in prospect the crop control program may be saved by an act of Providence.

Big Business and the N.R.A.

Enemies of the NRA are imperiling its future existence, according to Gen. Hugh Johnson in a speech delivered a few days ago at Columbus, Ohio. These enemies, General Johnson is quoted as saying, while few in number are "wealthy and powerful and do not scatter their shot." Continuing, the General said: "They all just want one thing, and they know exactly what they want—to scuttle the whole recovery program, make the Blue Eagle walk the plank, hoist the Jolly Roger on the Ship of State and sail back to the good old piracy that brought the crash of 1929 and all that has happened since."

A great many of us had been led to believe that much of the criticism against the NRA had been coming from the small industries, rather than the big boys, on the theory that the new system, by rendering the Sherman anti-trust law inoperative, was working in favor of big industry, and was putting the little fellow at a disadvantage. Indeed so persistent were these statements that a commission was appointed to look ino the complaints and to see just how far the little fellow was being discriminated against in favor of big business.

It is rather surprising to learn from General Johnson, therefore, that the "plots" against the NRA program come entirely from a few of the big boys, who may know exactly what they want, and seem to have succeeded in getting it, if we are to believe Senators Borah and Nye and some of the other senatorial defenders of the little fellow.

But at any rate, if a few of the big fellows are the only ones who are seeking to scuttle the NRA and put the Blue Eagle in a gilded cage, General Johnson ought to be able to do something about it. Why not "crack down" on these big business barons, and put them where they belong? Up to this time there has been very little "cracking down" on big business, although there have been plenty of threats along that line. To assess fines and jail sentences against pants presses who cut the price a nickel or so, will not frighten the big fellows. If general Johnson wants to curb them and trim their claws he will have to do some "cracking down" higher up in the economic scale. If the friends of the NRA outnumber its enemies a thousand to one, as General Johnson estimates, that they do, then they ought to be able to solve the problem, if it is only a question of chastising a few higher-ups, as the General would have us believe. But the General ought to lead the way and show us how to "crack down" on some of the big boys. Then perhaps his millions in the ranks will show a little more enthusiasm. They are still waiting.

The wet wave of 1932 and 1933 is receding and even now a few dry landmarks are noticeable. If bootlegging and liquor profiteering continue the dry spots will be visible to the naked eye before another year.

A lot of these modern politicians talk like they were equipped with free wheeling.

No matter whether the government is a democracy, a monarchy or an autocracy, the people have to pay for the mistakes of the rulers.

A young, pretty, school teacher who taught school in Altoona several years ago, inaugurated a new cure for tardiness at this time. She offered a kiss to the first arrival each morning. The next morning, at five o'clock three young men were seen sitting on the schoolhouse steps, and by six all the boys of the school and two members of the school board had put in their appearance.

Looks Over All—Overlooks None

Will We Have Baseball?

About this time of the year, baseball creeps into our blood. After reading the returns in our papers every morning, we get to hankering for a look-see at a few games. And, so, as usual, during the past few days, quite a few have been asking if we would have a team this year. I don't see why we shouldn't have one, and a fairly good one, too. We have a right nice crop of ball chunkers around Clanton, from which it seems to me we might easily pick a good team. True, they are not in the class with Lou Gehrig, Chuck Klein, or Lefty Grove, but neither is Clanton in the class with New York, Chicago, or Boston. I think our boys rate as highly as baseball players as our town does among other towns. There are quite a few who might be drafted into service this summer—"Gabby" Tiffin and his brother, Tom, Ted Littlejohn, Clint Jones, "Red" Alex Hayes, "Cave Man" Baker, Benson Simms, Bill Simpson, "Dutch" Nivens, "Onion" Johnson, Bill Armstrong, Wallace Watkins, Clarence Easterling and his brother, J. E., and others, just "raring" to play baseball. We have lots of baseball fans around here who want to see a game now and then. So, if we "hanker" for baseball, and have the fellows here to build a team with, I see no reason why we should not have it. I have not seen "Vic" Heard, but I believe he would manage the club if the people of the town and surrounding country would give him their whole-hearted support. Talk it among yourselves, and when a baseball "canfab" is called, be there and give us your ideas. We CAN have baseball —we WANT baseball. Then, let's have it.

High Fidelity

Most people like a GOOD picture show, but for a show to be really good, both projection and sound must be good. You might have the finest production; let the projection be good, but the sound bad, and the result would be a poor show; the same would be true if the sound was good and the projection bad. When Mr. Wade announced that he was about to install his new equipment, I was glad. So I asked him if I might go up into his projection room and see the new stuff. He agreed, and I went, and what a surprise I got. Two gleaming new projectors, latest model and type, were there. And linked with this was the very latest model RCA-Victor sound system, the last word in machinery of this kind. No more sound from phonograph-like machinery, using records, needles, and the like. The sound now comes from a "sound track" and is recorded directly on the side of the film. That is why the sound is never wrong for the picture—it can't be wrong, being recorded right along with the "shots" of the picture. There are other new appliances in this room, re-winders, etc., too. If you have been to the Wadesonian since the new "High Fidelity" system was installed, I am quite sure you were very favorably impressed with the improvement in the service. I wish everyone could go in and see this new stuff. I suppose the most of you would be like I was—you couldn't tell much about it, except that it was new and up-to-date. But just the same you would appreciate Mr. Wade's endeavor to give Clanton a good show. After observation, I believe his attendance is improving, just as it should. If you are not a regular theatre-goer, on account of the old kind of service, take off and visit the Wadesonian. You'll be surprised.

"Mountain Music"

If you like "mountain music, played by a real hill-billy band," and most people do, here's a tip for you. Up at station WBT, Charlotte, N. C., they put on one of the best programs of this kind that goes on the air. I say it is one of the best, if not THE best. I listen to them every Saturday night. I think they put on short programs on other nights of the week, but on Saturday nights they begin at 8:30 and run to 11:00, central standard time. They broadcast on 1080 kilocycles, and what an uproarious time they have. Fiddles, banjoes, mandolins, guitars, Jews' harps, harmonicas, and all kinds of combinations go to make up the programs. Solos, duets, trios, vocal and instrumental, are included, and, if you listen, some time during the program you will hear an old time barn dance, with an old time caller, and everything, that lasts for several minutes. It's a great program, and is sponsored by the Crazy Water Co., distributors of Crazy Water Crystals. There is a little advertising, reading of telegrams, etc., that goes along through the program, but you will not mind that, when you hear the quality of program they put on. And, by the way, I made an error in my radio article of last week—it should have read WAPI instead of WBRC. I never know if anyone reads the column or not until I make an error, and then I find that lots of people read it. I suppose at least a hundred people called attention to that error—at that, lots of people must listen to the "Sunrise Hour," too.

The Literary Digest Poll

The Literary Digest is conducting another nation-wide poll, this time to find out if the American people approve of President Roosevelt's policies, "on the whole." That is, if a person sending in one of these ballots approves of the majority of the president's measures and actions, though he may dislike one or two of them, then his X-mark should go in the "Yes" square. However, if he disapproves of the most of these policies, although he may like one or two of them, then he should mark in the "No" square. The first report of the balloting came out in the issue of May 19, when 44,909 votes had been received from the states of New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania, which showed 29,724 "yes" votes, and 15,185 "no" votes—almost 2 to 1 in favor of the president. The Digest will send out 15,000,000 of these ballots. The polls the Digest has conducted in the past have predicted the result of the questions they were deciding so truly, that Americans have come to consider them with much respect, and attach much importance to them. The Digest warns its readers not to form their ideas of the outcome of the poll at this early date, as the number received to the present time is less than one-third of 1 per cent of the total number to be cast, and the lead could change several times before the final count is announced. But, when you get your ballot, be sure to turn it in, no matter which side you take. The Digest and the American people want to know just how everyone else feels about this. And each week 'Ill be giving the returns. Look for them.

Stealing Our Thunder

A short time ago the Democratic papers of the South land raised their voices in loud denouncement, and the editors of these papers filled column after column with rasping remarks, when DePriest, the negro congressman, elected in a solid negro electoral district, attended a dinner at the White House. A Republican dwelled at the White House then. But have you read anything lately in these same papers about negroes attending any kind of society doings at the president's mansion? That's easy to answer—you haven't. But just the same, they have been there —and not one, but twenty-eight. Here it is—and it's a fact. During April, 1934, at the annual White House Party—the criterion of social functions in the national capital, there were present no less than fourteen negroes, and their wives, twenty-eight of them in all, and all of them bearing invitations. I would like for my Democratic friends to try that one out on their dulcimers when they think of bringing up the DePriest case again. In addition to this, the first lady of the land, Mrs. Roosevelt, spoke to a great gathering of negro educators a few days later, and during her talk, she had the following to say: "There must be no oppressed class. We must have equality among our people in all walks, social and otherwise, if we, as a nation, are to survive. And there can be no foolish lines drawn as to race, color or creed, for, to do so would defeat the plan for human equality in life in the very beginning. We can not change the plans of the Creator, but we can work with and among ourselves to erase, so far as possible, any seeming ravines in the social world of our people." It is said that when the lady uttered these words, the applause was loud and long. No wonder! Shortly after the Depriest affair, a Democratic senator said that the incident would be worth thousands and thousands of votes in the Republican column. Now, it seems that other of his comrades believe the same, and are trying to steal the "thunder" which they hav given Republicans credit for so long. Remember this, Mr. Democrat, when you speak of the "white man's ticket" the next time.—Man in the Moon.

THE RUSSIAN TRADE BUBBLE EXPLODES

There has been a great deal of liquidation of one kind or another in the United States during the past five years, but none has been more complete and convincing than the recent liquidation of all the wild claims which were made a few months ago as to the amount of trade that the United States would get with Soviet Russia, after that country's governmen had been recognized by Uncle Sam. Newspapers with so-called "liberal" tendencies plastered themselves with headlines and editorials ballyhooing the story of the amount of business Uncle Sam would get from Soviet Russia just as soon as ambassadors were exchanged between Moscow and Washington. Some of them even went so far as to state that the increase of our trade with Russia would amount to the difference between the depression and prosperity and that this business we would get from the "reds" would just about end the hard times in America.

True it is that sound-thinking newspapers and financial experts pointed out time and again that there would be no important increase of trade with Russia unless we loaned Stalin the money with which to buy our goods. Their sensible observations were swept aside by the liberals and parlor pinks who seemed to think that recognition by the United States of the communis government would just about usher in the millennium. nium.

Now a few months later, after the excitement has died down, and the ambassadors have been exchanged, what do we find? No increase in trade between the United States and Russia. Furthermore, the ruling of Attorney General Cummings that Russia cannot get credit in the United States until she makes arrangement to pay us what she owes us, we are told has caused "anger" and talk of "reprisals" against Uncle Sam, in dear old Moscow. There has been no negotiations for a debt settlement, despite promises made at the time the recognition negotiations were carried on. And now, we are informed, Russian authorities will instruct Russian trade organizations to refrain from planning the purchase of any articles from the United States which can be bought elsewhere. Not only have we failed to gain more trade from Red Russia by recognizing her — we have actually been threatened with an anti-American boycott because we insist on a settlement of old debts before any new credits are incurred! Up to this time the Russian apologists have failed to find a suitable answer to this one.

Of course we should have known better and we would have known better had we been intelligent enough to recall what happened after Great Britain and France recognized Soviet Russia. Ten years or more have passed since then, and up to this time, Russia has failed to "come across" and negotiate a settlement of its debt to these two nations, although a promise was made that this would be done.

When the sage of old said "'Tis an ill wind that blows nobody good" he didn't know anything about saxaphone players.

The Man on the Corner

Some Sights He Saw— and Some He Saw Not

Watch the traffic light. Policemen of Clanton, acting upon orders of the City Council, will enforce a strict observance of the rules of traffic, both for pedestrians and motorists. What are the lights up there for, if not to be observed? Public safety demands that traffic rules be obeyed.

Congratulations to Mell Martin. Last week he was for the fifth time elected Secretary and Treasurer of the Alabama Funeral Directors Association. The annual convention held in Montgomery was acclaimed the finest ever put on by the association. Mell was hailed by the members as the person largely responsible for the most successful program. Mell Martin certainly does his part in putting Clanton on the map.

Ed Miller, better known as "Boss," made the interesting observation Monday that there was plenty of vacant parking space on the main drag in Clanton. This is unusual. Most of the time every hole is filled with a car. Ed says the boys on the farms are having to stay out of town a few days right now in order to conquer General Green.

A short drive through the rural sections will convince one that Mr. Miller is right in his diagnosis. Crops are looking good, but so is the plentiful supply of grass and weeds. Much hoeing, plowing and cultivation are needed right now; and the farmers are making every day count while the hot weather is on the menu.

A bit of repair work is being done at the Sheriff's house this week. A lot of it is needed. In fact, a new house would be in order, I think. The old barn which the Sheriff has to live in is past being comfortable. It looks terrible, and ought to be torn down and replaced with a structure in keeping with the new jail house. I do not think we should provide a palace for prisoners and compel our Sheriff and his family to live in a ramshackled old barn.

Mr. Backatter, manager of the Yellow Front Store, reports hat the opening of the new store in Clanton last Saturday was very satisfactory. Throngs of people visited the new place, and they bought liberally. Indications are that the Yellow Front will become soon one of the most popular trading places in our city.

Strawberry business here did not pan out so highly satisfactory to growers this year, it seems. Some I have talked to are rather disappointed. Many fine berries still in the fields, with no market for them. One prominent grower said he has concluded the best thing to do is to plow them as deep under the ground as possible. We hope a better solution may be found.

Dief came in just as I wrote the foregoing paragraph. I asked him about the situation. "There is no reason for berry growers to be blue," he said. "If our growers will be honest with themselves and the buyers, and observe a few simple rules which they know should be observed, we would come out all right." In fact, Dief has some figures which prove that our berries did not turn out so bad after all. I think our growers should iron out a few wrinkles, resolve to stick closer to the association, and keep on pulling for better results. You can do it, if you will.

Critical Old-Line Democrat

One of the significant developments of the day in national politics is the frequency with which the so-called "old line" Democrats are inclined to criticize certain phases of the "New Deal." One of the latest of these to offer sharp criticism is Governor Joseph B. Ely, of Massachusetts, who was one of the leaders in the unsuccesful movement to nominate former Governor Al Smith for president in the Democratic convention of 1932.

Governor Ely has, on several recent occasions, sought to criticize what he termed the "NRA bureaucracy." In an address before the Bond Club of New York the other day he approved the program of spending public money for relief purposes, and the elimination of child labor but sharply criticized what he called the regimentation of business under the NRA, the result of which, he declared, would be to set up "a bureaucracy so enormous as to result in a maze of confusion, inefficiency, waste and political chicanery, compared with which the prohibition experience pales into insignificance."

It is becoming more and more evident that the freedom from criticism which the proponents of the New Deal enjoyed in the first few months of the development of their program, is now coming to an end and that each new regulation will be subject to more and more public scrutiny as time goes on. In fact, the feeling seems to be growing over the country that there has been enough experimentation and regimentation, and that business should now be given a breathing spell to see whether it cannot go ahead of its own accord.

In view of the fact that both political parties in the 1932 campaign declared against the extension of bureaucracy, and the development of more "government in business," it is undoubtedly a fact that this feeling on the part of the public is well founded. It is to be remembered that the question of the regimentation of business was not an issue in the last campaign and the people were not given a chance to pass on it. The Blue Eagle was unheard of back in 1932 and nobody dared on the stump advocate the suspension of the antitrust laws. All of this came to the forefront after the election was over.

"Why, what are you crying for, sonny?" asked dad of his four year old heir.

"I heard you say you were going to get a new baby and I suppose that means you'll trade me in on it," he sobbed.

Fine Example Of Relief in Missouri

Cecil Allen of Jasper County, Missouri, with a wife and ten small children, found the road to rehabilitation on a farm which the local relief administration rented for them at $2 a month, and now the Federal relief administration is pointing to them as an example that it hopes will be multiplied some hundred thousand times in other states.

The oldest Allen child is now 15. The tenth child was about to be born, and the family was being evicted from their home in Joplin, a year ago, when the relief office found them. To cut off their last source of healthful food, the family cow had gone dry for lack of fodder.

Two dollars a month from the relief administration persuaded the owner of a 40-acre tract to let Allen work the land, but there was no house. Three tents were put up by the relief workers, one of them with board walls and floor. With a team loaned by his brother, Allen worked the tillable portions of the land in garden truck and corn. After feeding 50 chickens which the relief administration provided, he had more than enough corn for his cow, and managed for a second one on credit. A second brother loaned him two pigs which fattened on the remainder of the corn. Mrs. Allen canned 500 quarts of garden produce.

The three tents were replaced by a three-room house which the relief administration bought in the fall for $20. Allen moved it to his land and re-built it with $75 worth of relief-bought material. It is now a good home, and is flanked by his newly built cellar and well and large cow-shed made of logs.

Last winter, as in pre-depression days, Allen was able to take care of his wife and ten children without direct relief, obtaining a small amount of cash weekly by work on a CWA project. His oldest girl was placed in high school in a nearby town. She and the other nine are rosy-cheeked and healthy for the first time in years.

The case is one of a number reported to Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward, director of women's work in the FERA, by Mrs. Charley Tidd Cole, director of women's work for the Missouri Relief Administration.

"There are hundreds of thousands of farm families who need a lift more or less like the Allen's received," Mrs. Woodward said. "Each case may need different treatment. Our instructions are to get the job done, whatever it takes, within the limits of our financial resources."

When Lee D'Aubion of Joplin unloaded two and a half barrels of cucumber pickles at the warehouse of the local relief administration in Joplin not long ago, it was in repayment of seed and groceries which had enabled him to make those pickles. On top of pay his obligation to the relief administration, he also paid part of the interest on his farm mortgage and all of the back taxes that had been delinquent for several years, according to the report made by Mrs. Cole, who quoted the case as one of a number exemplifying the varied means in which destitute families may make repayment after they have been helped to become self-sustaining, and thereby removed from the relief load.

During the winter of 1933, groceries were furnished D'Aubion, for himself, his wife and two small children, but now they are supplied with canned and dried food of their own production, and with feed for their team and their cow. Out of the $13.50 a week which D'Aubion was paid on a CWA job, they saved $10 a week.

A second government agency has entered into the case with the refinancing of the mortgage on the D'Aubionn 20-acre farm.

CHESTNUT GROVE

We are having a very good Sunday school here, but it can be better. So, let's all put our shoulder to the wheel and get it going if we would all do good we would get good.

We are glad to state that Brother Horace Nabors will preach here for us next Sunday at 11 a.m. So let's all come and bring someone with us, and hear a good sermon.

Miss Betty Denson was a dinner guest with Mrs. Margaret Nabors Sunday.

Mr. Horseley Nabors and his wife visited his father and mother here Sunday afternoon.

There is a good bit of cotton being chopped here at present.

Don't forget to come to preachinng Sunday at 11 a.m., and Sunday school will be at 10 a.m.

John Clackler had a fine bird dog to go mad last week. It bit one of Mr. Clackler's boys. The dog, of course, had to be killed, and the boy is taking anti-rabies treatment.

"Joe, you carry the baby and let me have the eggs. You might drop them."

"What did you do when the doctor wanted to see your operation?"

"I just had to grin and bare it."

Tourist—What's in here?

Guide (leading way into a morgue)—Remains to be seen sir.

A man suffering from an excess of stimulant and tottering perceptibly, arrived home as the clocks were striking three.

After carefully removing his shoes, he tiptoed softly to his door.

He was half way down the hall when he upset the goldfish bowl, causing it to fall with a mighty crash.

His wife, hearing the commotion, appeared at the head of the stairs and called sharply:

"John, what on earth are you doing?"

"I'll teach those blooming goldfish to snap at me!" replied John.

THE LAST JUDGMENT

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 25:31-46.

GOLDEN TEXT—For we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ, that every one may receive the things done in his body, according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad. II Cor. 5:10.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Doing Things for Jesus.

JUNIOR TOPIC—The King's Test of Service.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Serving Christ by Serving Others.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Christ Our Judge.

A more correct topic for today's lesson would be The Judgment of the Nations. According to the legitimate textual and contextual signification it is the judgment of the living nations, which still lies in the future. The idea of a general judgment is a fundamental error. Doctor Pentecost well says, "It is a mischievous habit that has led the Christian world to speak of the judgment as being one great event taking place at the end of the world when all human beings, saints and sinners, Jews and Gentiles, the living and the dead, shall stand up before the great white throne and there be judged. Nothing can be more wide of the Scriptures."

The Bible speaks of several judgments, differing in respect to the subjects to be judged, the place of judgment, the time and result of the judgment. The judgment which we are considering today is not that one set forth in Revelation 20:11-14. It precedes that one by at least 1,000 years. A definite analysis of this lesson will show how entirely distinct this judgment is from the final judgment.

I. The Judge (v. 31).

He is the Son of man, the one who came and died to redeem the human race. At this time he is seen clothed with majesty and power sitting upon his throne acting as judge. There is no judgment, so far as sin is concerned, for those who now accept Jesus Christ as their Saviour (John 5:24).

II. The Time of Judgment (v. 31).

This judgment will take place when the Lord comes in his glory accompanied by a retinue of glorious, angels, and after he has gathered the elect remnant of Israel. There will be no resurrection in connection with this judgment.

III. The Place of Judgment (v. 31).

The prophecies of Joel (2:1-17) and Zechariah (14:1-5) show that it will be in or near Jerusalem. The angel said to Mary, "Thou shalt call his name Jesus. He shall be great and shall be called the Son of the Highest, and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David. And he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end" (Luke 1:31-33). As David was a literal king and reigned at a literal place, there shall be at that time a literal judge occupying a literal place of judgment.

IV. The People Judged (vv. 32-45).

It is expressly declared "before him shall be gathered all nations." They will be the nations left upon the earth after the church has been translated (I Thess. 4:16, 17). These are the nations to whom the gospel of the kingdom shall be preached just prior to the coming of the end of this age. "And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come" (Matt. 24:14). This gospel is distinct from the grace of God which is now being preached. The preachers of this gospel will be the Jews (Rev. 7 and Rom. 11). They will move among the nations of the earth with the startling news of the Lord's approaching kingdom.

V. The Issue of the Judgment (vv. 32-46).

Some of the nations will gladly receive the message of the kingdom and most kindly receive the King's messengers. Others will persecute them, thrusting them into prison. Here those who receive the message will visit the messengers of the King and provide for their wants. At this time the judge will separate the nations, placing the sheep on the right hand and the goats on the left. The sheep are those who give proper treatment to Christ's brethren, the messengers of the gospel of the kingdom. The goats are those who reject the message and maltreat the messengers. If these three classes, the sheep, the goats, and the brethren be kept separate in our thinking all confusion will be avoided. The sheep will enter upon the inheritance of a prepared kingdom. The goats will go into everlasting fire prepared for the devil and his angels (v. 46).

For Our Trust

The infinite Father does not stand by us to be catechised and explain himself to our vain minds. He is here for our trust; and if we will but lean on him our chafing heart shall sleep the sweet sleep of recovery.

A Constant Prayer

Love for our fellow creatures is a constant prayer, but this very love will always incite us to actual prayer at stated seasons, and for prescribed times.

Hectic Days Sleepless Nights

Miss Currier relieved of nervous days and sleepless nights.

Christene Lanier finds Nervine best nerve medicine she ever used.

Miss Redman takes Dr. Miles Nervine whenever she feels restless.

IF YOU are nervous today, you probably will not sleep well tonight. If you don't sleep well tonight, you will probably be nervous tomorrow.

Don't allow yourself to become nervous. Take Dr. Miles Nervine. It will relax your tense nerves and let you get a good night's sleep.

Irritability, Restlessness, Sleeplessness, often lead to Nervous Headache, Nervous Indigestion, Hysteria—sometimes to a nervous breakdown and organic trouble.

Some of the people, whose letters are printed below, were as nervous as you are—possibly more so—yet they have found relief.

Three years ago I was so nervous I could not bear to go out in company and could not sleep nights. A friend recommended Dr. Miles Nervine. I now enjoy myself thoroughly and sleep every night. Miss Juliette Currier, New Market, N. H.

I have used Dr. Miles Nervine in liquid form and find it the best medicine for the nerves I have ever used. Christene Lanier, Middleton, Tennessee

Whenever I have over-indulged and feel restless I take one or two Nervine Tablets just before I retire. In the morning when I awake I feel like a new person and can go about my work as usual. Dr. Miles Nervine Tablets quiet your nerves, brace you up and are the simplest, most convenient tablets to take I have ever found. Miss Grace Redmann, St. James, Minn.

Before using your Nervine I was very nervous and irritable. Since I have started to take it I feel so much better that my family notice the difference. I still take it from time to time and the good result is wonderful. J. H. Redding, 1027 18th Ave., Rock Island, Ill.

MAPLE SPRINGS

The Saturday and Sunday services were very well attended, which we are very glad to say.

We had a large crowd out at our B. Y. P. U. convention Sunday afternoon. The B. Y. P. U. at Cane Creek carried the banner back with them. Brother Willie Jones from Thorsby delivered a wonderful sermon, which everybody seemed to enjoy. The next B. Y. P. U. meeting will be held at Pates Chapel the second Sunday in August. Come on Maple Springs and let's get to work and work harder than ever then we'll bring the banner back with us next time.

We have gained two new members, which we are very proud to say. They are Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Mims.

Mr. R. J. Downs and family had as their guests this past week end Mr. Claude Downs and wife and children from near Verbena.

Mr. and Mrs. Bill Wise spent a while Saturday night with Mr. Wise's mother, Mrs. Anna Wise, of Cooper.

Mr. Arnold Glenn had as his Sunday dinner guest, Mr. Claude Downs, Jr., from near Verbena.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Mims had as their guests Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Farley Mims from the Clanton cotton mill.

Messrs. Oliver Glenn and O. L. Devaughn attended the singing at Providence, Beat 13, Sunday afternoon.

Legion Auxiliary To Sell Memorial Poppy

On Saturday, May 26, Which Is Poppy Day all Over the U. S. A.

Clanton and Chilton County will be called upon to honor the World War dead and give aid to the war's living victims by wearing memorial poppies on next Saturday, May 26th. This day, the Saturday before Memorial Day, will be Poppy Day throughout the United States, and will be generally observed by wearing the little red flower of Flanders Field.

Observance of Poppy Day here will be directed by the American Legion Auxiliary, Mrs. W. M. Wyatt, president of the local unit has announced. Women of the Auxiliary will distribute poppies on the streets, and receive contributions for the Auxiliary's welfare and relief work among disabled veterans and their families.

Organization of a corps of volunteer workers to distribute the memorial flowers will be formed under the direction of the chairman of the Auxiliary's poppy commitee. A large supply of poppies has been received from a work room of disabled veterans, who have been employed during the past winter and spring making the little paper flowers.

The purpose of Poppy Day is to give everyone an opportunity to pay individual tribute to the men who gave their lives in defense of the nation. The little act of wearing a poppy touches the individual more closely than large public ceremonies. It also gives everyone a chance to share in the vast work which the American Legion Auxiliary is doing for disabled men, their families, and the families of the dead.

Community Canning Plants Proposed

Is Contemplated Feature In Rural Rehabilitation Program

Mr. T. J. Arledge, county engineer, in conjunction with the Rural Rehabilitation authorities of the county, is working on plans for the building of community canning plants for Chilton County. The Relief Administration proposes to furnish the labor, but other provision must be made for the material, which consists of brick (or rock), cement, lumber and roofing.

Mr. Arledge has drawn up blue prints of the plant, according to government specifications, and has figured the approximate cost of each unit, which is about $55, not including the labor. The plan was for the county commissioners to furnish the material, but the court has decided that the county is not in shape to handle this cost. It is hoped that some arrangements may be made whereby the cost of the material can be provided for.

This seems to be a worthy movement. Such a plant in each community in the county would be of untold benefit to everybody, and if it is done, it should be done and the plants put o operation at once. It is sincerely hoped that plans may be worked out for building at least some of these plants in the near future.

On Friday night, May 25, at 8:00 p.m., the students of the singing school at Friendship, one mile out on the Lay Dam road, will entertain at a concert.

This will be the closing exercise of a 20-day singing school, taught by Prof. Emmett M. Wilson. Good music, singing, and special out-of-the-ordinary acts are promised on the program. The school has about 30 students, and all of these, together with other local performers, will appear on the program. A small admission charge will be made, the proceeds from which will go toward the piano fund for Friendship church.

The interest in Jefferson County over the approaching May primary was worth $43,242 to the school children of the county. That amount, representing poll taxes paid this year in Jefferson County.

M. J. Davis, Millport, has been installed president of the newly organized Lamar County Exchange, Inc., to deal in better planting seed and fertilizers, approved by the State Department of Agriculture.

NEGRO DROWNS IN COOSA RIVER

Witness Saw Him Fall Overboard Into Honeycutt Branch

Emmett O'Neal Knight, negro, age 20 years, was drowned last Friday afternoon in the backwater of Honeycutt Branch, Cargyle Creek, east of Clanton. The body was recovered from the waters Saturday morning.

Sheriff Gillespie and Coroner J. Mell Martin were summoned to make investigation of the circumstances. After examining witnesses Coroner Martin stated his opinion that the negro was accidentally drowned when he fell out of a boat.

Description of the incident was furnished by a negro, Theodore Roosevelt Adams, who witnessed the scene from the bank near where the drowning took place. It appears that Knight, with three negro companions, was in the boat staging quite a celebration about something. Knight fell overboard and was drowned.

After investigation by Coroner Martin, the negro's body was turned over to his companions, who buried him in Mary Williams Cemetery in the vicinity of Dixie Camp.

All the negroes involved in the matter were caretakers at some of the fishing camps in the vicinity of Cargyle Creek.

A Successful Year for Jemison F.F.A.

Ervin Beasley Makes Summary of Work Done the Past Twelve Months

The Jemison F. F. A. put through a successful year this year, with many outstanding credits to her chapter. The year began with an enrollment of 15 green hand members, and when the term ended we had 19 green hands and four who reached the future farmer degree.

We conducted a rat poisoning campaign through the Town of Jemison, and the surrounding farms, which was very successful. In October we had the privilege of entertaining Congressman W. B. Oliver at a banquet held in the auditorium. Five chapters, representing three counties were present. Mr. Joyce Howard and Mr. Ernie Lee Robinson were our representatives in giving the addresses from which many good comments came back to us from outstanding men.

If you want to see our cotton experiment, visit Mr. Leo Cobb's farm, about four miles west of Jemison, on the Center Hill Road. The Arcadian Nitrate of Soda people gave 300 pounds of soda to the boy in each chapter in Alabama who made the best public address on some subject pertaining to the A. A. A. Mr. Ernie Lee Robinson was the boy who won it in our school. Mr. Erdist Atkinson won the second prize of $1.00 offered by Mr. Montgomery, our chapter advisor.

One of the most outstanding things that happened was when we were notified that two of our boys had received first and second prizes in an essay contest in Alabama. Mr. Ernie Lee Robinson received the first prize of $25.00 and Mr. Charles Nix the second prize of $20.00.

Mr. John Busby and Mr. Joyce Howard are our representatives at Auburn this summer at the annual F. F. A. Convention.

Our officers for this year were: President, J. T. Cobb; vice president, John Busby; secretary and treasurer, Joyce Howard, and reporter, Ervin Beasley.

We are sorry to say that two of our prominent members are leaving us, who graduated—our secretary, Mr. Joyce Howard and one of our faithful workers, Mr. Charles Nix. — Ervin Beasley, reporter.

SINGING AT SAGINAW

Business Concerns Contributed Toward Entertaining the Young People

Mr. J. W. Fant, county agent, and Miss Ruth Pardue, home demonstration agent, wish to express their appreciation to the following firms and individuals that cooperated with them in holding the annual 4-H club rally on May 16th:

The following donated lunch for the boys and girls:

Clanton Cash Store, Hill Grocery Store, Wade Grocery Company, Culver I. G. A., Southern Seed and Plant Co., Merita Bread Company, J. Lee Smith, Barney Deramus, Verbena; A. & P Tea Co., Broadhead's Market, People's Cash Store, B. L. Jones, Easterling Cash Store, Ward's Bread Co., Chilton County Commissioners, Gulledge Bros., Verbena.

Especially do we wish to thank Mr. Wade of the Wadesonian Theatre, who so graciously gave those attending the rally a free ticket to the show. This was a very attractive feature of the program.

Appreciation is also expressed to the following who gave very interesting and inspiring talks to the boys and girls: J. Lee Smith, mayor; Judge L. H. Reynolds, John Hollis.

ALECK HAYES WINNER OF MEDAL AT GULFPORT

Aleck Hayes, son of Dr. and Mrs. J. P. Hayes, of Clanton, was declared the best-drilled cadet at the Gulf Coast Military Academy, Gulfport, Miss., last Saturday. Aleck won in a contest judged by Capt. O. W. Chalker, of New Orleans, and was awarded a medal for his proficiency. Bill Burton, Jackson, Miss., was second, and E. B. Kitchens, Greenville, third.

Aleck Hayes, Callen Alred and J. Lee Smith, Jr., comprise the Clanton group at Gulfport. They will return home this week for summer vacation.

Internal Revenue Men Awaiting Orders To Stop Shipments

Montgomery, May 30. — Orders to halt the flow of beer and alcoholic liquors into Alabama and all other states whose prohibition laws are still in effect have been issued from Washington, it was learned Tuesday.

Director Bruner, of the alcoholic unit of the Bureau of Internal Revenue for Alabama, was expected to arrive in Montgomery Wednesday, it was learned, for a conference with the Deputy Collectors of Internal Revenue on the proposed barricade against interstate shipments.

The barricade against beer shipments will be raised at the state line on highways entering the State, and on railroads. It is believed that a minimum amount of activity will be necessary in preventing shipments by rail as the railroads have always scrupulously cooperated with the federal and state governments.

The major drive, it is understood, will be made to halt shipments over the highways.

HERMAN LOWERY ON RADIO

The friends of Herman Lowery will be pleased to learn that he appears on the radio program over WAPI every morning in the Sunrise Program. Mr. Lowery is competing for the prize, and will appreciate a card from his friends recommending him for the award.

TRUSTEES ELECTED

At the meeting of the Chilton County Board of Education last Friday, the following were elected as trustees of the Clanton schools: Dr. W. L. Parrish, Wiley M. Bean, and W. M. Wyatt. These are three out of six who were nominated by the school patrons in a recent meeting.

THORSBY SECTION

(Mrs. S. E. Norton, Manager)

Rev. and Mrs. E. W. Butler and Miss Dorothy spent the week end in Montgomery with Mr. Clarence Butler and family. They were there especially to attend the commencement exercises of Woman's College, Miss Elizabeth Butler being one of the graduating class. They knew that Elizabeth had made a good record in college, but were surprised when at the close of the commencement exercise it was announced that she was the winner of the Margaret Read Scholarship Medal, awarded annually to the graduate making the best scholarship record during the four years course. Elizabeth's friends tender her their congratulations.

One of the cottages at the tourist camp north of Thorsby was burned last week. It was set on fire in order to distract attention from the office building. And when the man in charge left the building the incendiary took the money and left he camp.

Mary Pearl Sorrell left last Tuesday to spend a month with relatives and friends.

The B. Y. P. U. study course will be in progress all of this week at the Baptist church. Everyone is invited to attend. Last week there was a mistake in the Thorsby Section about the speakers for the study course. It should have been Dr. J. O. Colley instead of Joe Colley of Troy, and Mr. Dennis Harper of Mt. Creek instead of Coosa County. The teachers will be Miss Icie Bell Cobern of Mt. Creek, Dr. J. B. Williams of Clanton and Miss Louise Robinson of Thorsby. The parade of the B. Y. P. U. which was held Saturday of last week was very successful in advertising the study course. Other speakers for the week will be Carl Grouby for Wednesday night and Dr. J. O. Colley on Wednesday night. Dr. L. E. Barton of Baptist headquarters of Montgomery for Monday night and Rev. Theo. Harris, of Birmingham, for Tuesday night.

Miss Martha Williams returned on Thursday from Talladega where she attended the commencement exercises for the blind.

Graduation At Thorsby Institute

Last Wednesday night was Senior class night. The play given was "Dr. Pepp" and was well acted.

Conway Thornburgh read the class prophecy, Nelle Tracey the class poem, S. E. Maddox the class history and Mary Louise Bates the class will.

Thursday morning at ten-thirty the graduating exercises took place. Linnie Bell Reinhardt and Hal Broadhead, who have received the highest grades for three years, read their Senior essays. The girls chorus under the direction of Miss Phillips sang "The Swan," by Saint Saens. Ruth Foss, who is very talented in music, played a solo, "Rondo Capricioso" by Mendelssohn.

The address of the day was given by Rev. A. W. Dycer, D. D., of Birmingham. He is pastor of the Community Congregational church there. His address was entitled "The Road of Life" and was very attentively listened to by young and old.

The college scholarships for Piedmont College were awarded to Linnie Bell Reinhardt and Hal Broadhead, with C. B. Jean and Phares Raybon as alternates.

The undergraduate tuition scholarship for one semester next year was goven to Mary Louise Reinhardt. She also received the five dollar prize for excellence in English.

The French prize of five dollars was awarded to Ruth Foss. Prizes were awarded for perfect attendance to Hal Broadhead, Hoyt Burnham, Ruth Cox, Melvin Dollar, Sarah Green, Ruth Higgins, Irving Hudman, C. B. Jean, Julia Pratt Johnson, Norwood Johnson, Kathleen Langston, Gladys Martin, Leroy Peterson and Lois Rister.

A splendid community dinner was served on the grounds after the exercises. The Senior Class gave the undergraduate scholarship of $13.00, also $21.00 for concrete posts to be placed at the driveway entrance to the campus and $48.91 for a fund to enlarge the library. All of these gifts were very much appreciated.

The new music teacher for next year will be Miss Mabel Allen of Wilmore, Kentucky. She is a graduate of Asbury College with an A. B. degree. She majored in English. She is also a graduate of the Asbury College Conservatory with a Bachelor of Music degree. She also has a certificate in voice. She has studied the violin and could teach beginners, but prefers not to teach more advanced pupils—if there is time to offer instruction in violin.

Asbury College and Conservatory are well known and rank high. The past year the Glee Club has broadcast over the radio very often in the morning through the Louisville station.

Miss Allen is a young woman of talent, pleasing personality and excellent character. Her father has been a professor at Asbury college for several years.

We wish to thank very much the many who have given money or provisions for dormitory use. These things have been a big help. Interest shown in the school in this way encourages outsiders to help.

Mrs. H. R. Maddox will be in charge of the office this summer. The office will be open each day from 8 to 12 in the morning. Those who have not registered may see her. Anyone who wishes to register for music should see her. There will be a chance for those outside of school to take music. The charge is $8.00 a semester (half year) for one 45-minute lesson a week, or $10.50 for two 30-minute lessons a week. The rate is more if paid by the term (six weeks.)

VIRGIL ROBINSON WINS HONOR KEY FROM COUNTY HIGH SCHOOL

Virgil Benton Robinson, prominent young son of Mr. and Mrs. O. R. Robinson, received the honor key from the Chilton County High School, and also a diploma. Virgil has really worked for this honor. He has walked 12 miles to and from school many days, and always cheerfully. I have also learned that Virgil is one of the leading members of Cane Creek church in church work, song service, Sunday school and B. Y. P. U. Virgil is a boy that his community should be proud of.

CHESTNUT GROVE

We have a good Sunday school here. We are glad to see the young people take an interest in the good work.

We were glad to have Brother Horace Nabors with us Sunday. He delivered an excellent sermon. His subject was, "Love." If we had more of the love of God in our hearts for our fellowman, our country would be in a better condition. It would be a better place to live. It would be a better place to raise our children.

We hope to have Brother Nabors with us the fourth Sunday in June.

Brother Horace Nabors and wife were the dinner guests of Bro. G. G. Nabors Sunday.

Let us all remember the subject, love, and love one another. We can love a person and not love their ways.

Brother A. B. Canant of Wilton will preach for us the second Sunday in June at 2 p.m.. So, let's all come and hear a good sermon.

WORK CONTINUES AT THE AIRPORT

Grading of Runways Now in Progress On Local Project

Work is going forward on the Clanton Airport, using men furnished by the relief office. Last Tuesday, 28 men were working on the job, but information was given out, that after Friday the force will be cut to 10 per day for two days per week, or 160 man-hours per week. These men were loading trucks with dirt in grading the run-ways.

The grading work on the southeast-northwest run-way is practically finished, and is approximately a quarter of a mile in length. Grading work is going on now on the southwest-northeast run-way, which will be a little over a quarter of a mile long. After all the grading is done, the specifications call for sodding of the run-ways, marking of the field, and other necessary touch-ups that go with landing fields. It is not known now whether or not landing lights will be installed, for night flying.

There have been reports of planes landing and taking off from the Clanton airport, but, as yet, the field has not been approved by the commission governing landing fields.

When the field has been brought to a degree of completion where it will be safe for planes to land and take off, plans call or a formal opening and dedication.

SUMMER SCHOOL STARTS HERE

Mrs. L. C. Warr and Prof. Searcy will teach a summer school at the Chilton County High School, beginning next Monday, June 4th.

All who are interested are requested to come at 8 o'clock Friday morning of this week to register.

Mr. W. M. Davis and family from Montevallo spent Monday night with Mrs. Davis' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arkie Mahan.

SARDIS NEWS

P.-T. A. met last Thursday night with a very good attendance.

Mr. and Mrs. Jim Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Philmon Smith spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. David Sansom.

Mrs. Verge Klinner had as her Sunday guests Mr. and Mrs. G. L. Adams, Mr. Carson Williams and Tom Deramus.

Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Adams were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Sansom Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Williams spent Sunday with Rev. and Mrs. Johnson.

It seems like our Sunday school is on the drag at present. We can't account for this, unless it is that we, as people, get careless of the things that we know are our duty. We know that it is our duty to do and take part in the Lord's service. May I plead with you to come and be with us. People, we will never have Sunday school and B. Y. P. U. if you don't try. We haven't put on a program in B. Y. P. U. in several Sunday nights, but we expect to put on a program next Sunday night at 7:00 o'clock. We invite everyone to come and be with us. If we can't do you some good, we will assure you that we will do you no harm. We feel that if you will come for that purpose you will get some good from our programs from time to time.

Honors For Percy M. Pitts

Chilton,s Representative In Alabama Legislature

The defeat of the Chilton County Board of Revenue Bill in the legislature of Alabama will forever stand out as an achievement of Hon. Percy M. Pitts, our representative, which establishes him with distinction in the minds of the great majority of our citizens. In accamplishing the defeat of this bill Mr. Pitts can and should be credited with a successful discharge of the great obligation which was placed in his hands by his constituency.

While he did not introduce a single bill for enactment into law, that is more of a credit to him than a cause for blame. Alabama would perhaps be better off for years to come if many more representatives could say the same thing. It is almost universally agreed that we already have too many laws, and the legislature which has just adjourned added about 700 more to the number.

It is a stock argument in campaigns in this county that a Republican representative in Montgomery is equivalent to no representative at all. That was used against Mr. Pitts. Such is not true. While it is a fact that the legislature of Alabama is composed of Democrats almost entirely, yet they are men of reason in most cases. Upon local county measures they most generally adhere to the wishes of the county representative.

Such was the case this time. It was not so much a matter of Percy Pitts otherwise politically. Mr. Pitts contended for the best interests of his county and the defeat of the Board of Revenue Bill. He was fair, square and honest with his colleagues, and displayed sane judgment in every act he was called upon to perform. His conduct impressed his fellow-members that he was a man worthy of confidence; and when he told them the best interests of his county, demanded the defeat of that bill, they found out through other representations made by many citizens of the county that he was telling the truth, and they stuck to him when voting time came.

Percy Pitts has demonstrated that even if a man is a Republican, if he will prove himself every inch a man he can gain audience with other real men, even though they be his political opponents.

The verdict of the people of this county upon the record of Mr. Pitts as their representative in the 1927 legislature might well be expressed in these words: He has fought a good fight; he has finished his course; he has kept the faith; enter thou into the joys which are reserved for faithful servants who are honest and conscientious in the discharge of the duties of public trust.

The Union-Banner here and now nominates the Hon. Percy M. Pitts as Chilton County's representative in the next legislature of Alabama. Do we hear a second?

From The Union-Banner, September 8, 1927.

(Paid political adv., by Percy M. Pitts, Clanton, Ala.)

ENDORSE W. T. BEAN

Editor Union-Banner:

Having known Prof. W. T. Bean, candidate for superintendent of education, a long while, and believing him to be truly loyal to the Republican party, a man deeply interested in the progress of the county, a man of ripe experience, an able man, a successful teacher, one whose past official career receives praise from many people, who is fully competent to fill the office he seeks, one who will be an asset to the party,

We, therefore, cheerfully recommend him to the consideration of the voters on June 12. We do this with due respect to any other candidate, not wishing to speak one discouraging word about any other candidate. We just wish to call attention of the voters to the merits of Prof. Bean. We are not wishing to change people in this family contest. We are only asking for due consideration of Mr. Bean, and if you find our recommendations correct, we are sure you will make no mistake in giving him your support. —T. J. Hubbard, W. R. Redden, Zac J. Jones.

G. O. P. TURNS TO NYE AS LEADER OF N. R. A. ATTACK

Washington, May 23.—The National Recovery Admniistration became today a full-fledged political issue as the controversy over the Darrow board report shifted from its downtown battleground into the open forum on Capitol Hill, where issues are made.

The first salvos have been fired for the offense by the youthful Sen. Gerald Nye (R.,N.D.) who seeks to uphold the Darrow board findings that NRA is fostering monopoly and crushing the little fellow; for the defense by Sen. Robert F. Wagner (D., N. Y.) sponsor of the National Recovery Act, who hailed the NRA as the "core of the recovery act" and praised its accomplishments. Nye was responsible for creation of the board.

The issue probably will be foremost in congress from now until it adjourns and then will be carried into the campaign.

Republicans are very thankful for young Nye. Some of the regulars tried to keep him out of the senate when he came here nine years ago, a country newspaper editors with purported radical leanings.

But Republicans who have not the least sympathy with many of the senator's ideas sat, charmed and hopeful as thier colleague attacked the NRA.

Young Nye, now 41, was turning out to be their champion in the hour of dispair.

It was somewhat like the story of the man who went all over the world hunting diamonds and came home to find them in his own backyard. Republicans have been listening, anxiously, for a keynote from their supposed big shots. Suddenly, they discovered that perhaps they have the right answer to their prayers right in their own midst.

The North Dakota Senator was a contrast as he stood before the senate —an immaculate figure in double-breasted gray suit, with blue shirt and tie and white shoes—to the rather commonplace young man who slipped timidly about the senate when he first came here.

He's a nephew of Bill Nye, the famous humorist, but there was no sparkle of fun in his serious speech, which was thoroughly prepared beforehand and read, with a confident air, from manuscript.

Observers thoroughly familiar with the NRA issue and the Republican attempt to capitalize it saw some inconsistency in the great anxiety of Republicans over the "little fellow" pointing back to the recent history of the party in the Harding, Coolidge and Hoover regimes, when big business, industry and finance was in the saddle.

But they agreed that there's no consistency in politics or political issues.

Meanwhile Clarence Darrow and Gen. Hugh S. Johnson appeared ready today to call a halt in their two-fisted battle of adjectives, and attempt to apply their common energies toward betterment of the NRA.

Darrow and Johnson spent an hour and a half together last evening, riding about the city in the Recovery Administrator's expensive limousine. Overtures toward peace were believed made, although both men returned from the conference tight-lipped.

"We talked about religion and several things," said Darrow.

"We talked about the Piltdown man and the Neanderthal man," was Johnson's only comment.

However it was indicated that a truce was sought. It is shown that Darrow is not anxious that possible benefits of his critical analysis should be lost in controversy and Johnson was believed willing to inaugurate NRA reforms.

Darrow has been worried over the emphasis placed on his supplemental report suggesting that the NRA be replaced by socialism, feeling that the findings of the board's main report will be ignored.

The greater attention will be paid to the position of the small business man and the consumer appeared certain.

President Roosevelt has made it known that he will take the interests of these two groups of citizens under his special protection. The first step in this direction will be a conference of four agencies concerned with the recovery program.

The NRA consumers board, the NRA statistical and planning division, the federal trade commission and the Recovery Review board are expected to meet, probably immediately after the final report of the review board which is to pass out of existence May 31.

PLETCHER—PILGRIM REST

Rev. Bentley has recently returned from the Southern Baptist Convention at Ft. Worth, Texas. He filled his regular appointment at Pilgrim Rest Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. His text was taken from Paul's words, "I thanked God and took courage." This was an inspiring sermon.

Among the most welcome visitors to our church Sunday was Mrs. Alice Herrod. It has been quite a while since she was here. She is visiting her sister, Mrs. Will Johnson, of Alpine community.

Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Arant and son, Herman, of Prattville, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Chandler and family Sunday.

Rev. E. A. Norris of Verbena, will preach at Pilgrim Rest church Saturday night, June 9th, at 7:30 o'clock, also Sunday morning, June 10th, at 11 o'clock. Everybody tell everybody else and let's greet our former pastor with a large crowd.

Crops of this community are looking nice, considering the season we have had. Cool weather is not good for cotton, however.

Measles are passing out. Everyone should be thankful for that.

J. F. Rawlinson was canvassing with Grover A. Bice around here last week. People in this community have a lot of confidence in Mr. Rawlinson, and Mr. Bice ceretainly knew what he was doing in giving Mr. Rawlinson a ride.

Friends of Leon "Shorty" Mullins will be glad to know that he is improving after a serious operation in a Birmingham hospital.

When you have a puncture or blowout you know, from experience, that running on the flat will ruin the casing.
Dou you realize that cuts and breaks in a casing will shorten its life almost as much as running flat, unless they are attended to at once?
When cuts from glass, stones, nails, and other causes make a small or large hole in your casings two thing occur—the holes become larger due to the pressure from the air inflation and water and dirt accumulate in the holes and rot, cut and deteriorate both the rubber and the cord fabric with the result that your casings only give you about half the mileage you should get.

ROAD SERVICE

Favors Economy In County Work

To the Republican Voters of Chilton County:

I noticed in last week's issue of the Union-Banner an article where certain road claims put in by Mr. J. C. Atchison, commissioner and some of his overseers were stopped by the judge of probate. I want to commend any official who takes a stand to save the taxpayers as much money as possible. I believe that extravagance in government is one of the reasons why taxes are so high and the quicker we stop extravagance and waste of the public money, the sooner will taxes be reduced, and it is certainly a waste of the public money when the overseers' bills amount to over $300.00 and the laborers' to around $25.00. I am from the western part of the county and know how the people feel about this matter and I have heard a great many express themselves, and they appreciate Judge Reynolds's action in holding up these claims and they will appreciate any offfcial saving the county all the money that can possibly be saved. If our officials whom we elect do not take care of the finances of the county, I don't know who the people can look to and I am glad that we have one official who is coming out in the open for saving all the people and the taxpayers as much as can possibly be saved. I am proud that Chilton County stands at the very top in the state in financial condition and I hope that we Republicans can elect officials who will stand for keeping our county at the top.

Yours for the success of our party and county.—Byron Harris.

County Farm Agent's Notes

Compiled by J. W. Fant, County Farm Demonstration Agent for Chilton County

PRICE OF TIMBER FLUCTUATES LESS

Auburn, Ala., May 29.—That timber is a very dependable farm crop is evidenced by the fact that prices of trees sold on the stump or logs delivered to the mill have remained more nearly on a level than for other farm products. Figures taken by the various agencies of the U. S. government over a period dating back 20 to 30 years reveal this fact.

Comparing the rise and fall of the prices of these products by using the 1910-1914 average as 100 per cent we find that while from 1910 to 1920 log prices and other farm products rose steadily together the prices of other farm crpos then dropped below the level of log prices and remained there for the following ten years. Not only this, but when farm commodity prices began to slump in 1929 and dropped to about 95 per cent of the 1910-1914 level by 1931 log prices remained at about 130 per cent of that level for pine logs and 150 per cent for hardwood logs.

We also find that prices for cotton and second growth southern pine stumpage were on about the same level in 1920. Then the price level of cotton, using the 1910 to 1914 average, passed below and above that of the pine trees on the stump five times before 1930, showing the stable price position of the timber and when cotton had sunk to 45 per cent of that level by 1932 the pine timber prices remained above 100 per cent.

Another interesting fact learned from the study was that timber prices in the South and East have remained higher than west of the Great Plains. It also shows that prices for hardwood logs and stumpage have stayed up even better than the pine prices.

This seems to indicate that the southern farmers have an advantage in timber growing, being nearer to larger markets and—in the South particularly—the farmer's timber can be depended on to hold a steady value.

Farm timber has ranked next to cotton as a net cash producer on the farms in Alabama. It is wise planning to have timber and logs ready for sale at any time and especially when times are hard and other farm products are low.

Invites comparison between his record and that of his opponent, about whom the SUPREME COURT OF ALABAMA (210 Alabama Page 680) has said:—

"Hartwell's unauthorized appropriations of complainant's (Mobile Towing & Wrecking Company) money to his own uses were not loans to him by complainant in any sense of the word, but were in fact simple embezzlements."

There is no record of dishonesty or unfaithfulness to any trust against Morgan.

A PURE FOOD LAW FOR PLANTS? NEVER!

News from Washington these days has much to say about new regulations covering food and drug products—stricter laws covering the labeling and sale of food and drugs.

These dispatches from correspondents and news-services in the nation's capitol are being read with interest. Strangely enough, however, an exactly opposite view applying not to human foods but to plant foods, is being read with equal interest, particularly through the agricultural sections of the South.

"A pure food and drug act for the plants" says the editor of Scientific American, "would be a death warrant to all living creatures."

This statement by the editor of a publication which is an unquestioned authority in its field, is being widely circulated through the South. It is featured in advertisements of Chilean Nitrate of Soda, the natural nitrate which has enjoyed first favor with Southern farmers since its introduction here more than 100 years ago. It appears under the startling headline, "Without Impurities . . . Death" in this paper and many others, to emphasize the importance of certain rare elements, popularly called "impurities" which because of this nitrate's natural origin, are present only in Chilean Nitrate in Nature's own balance and proportions. These "impurities" boron, magnesium, iodine, calcium, potassium, sodium, etc., are the subject of much research on the part of soil scientists and other agricultural authorities. More and more is being learned about them. Today they are considered absolutely essential to successful crops.

We have just received a report to the effect that a local radio station attempted a broadcast of bagpipe music recently. Many listeners complained that it sounded like bagpipe music.

PLAN DOLOMITE AS FERTILIZER FILLER

Montgomrey, Ala., May 29.—Under a plan suggested by the Experiment Station of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute the sand and other materials now used in fertilizers as filler would be replaced with dolomite, a form of limestone.

The plan was discussed at a meeting here of fertilizer manufacturers, the State Board of Agriculture, Farm Bureau officials, and representatives of the Auburn research institution.

The aim is to make available to the farmers of the state non-acid-forming fertilizers to increase productivity of state soils. Experimental results show that the change from materials now used as filler to dolomite would be beneficial to farmers.

The result of experiments show clearly that acid-forming fertilizers when applied to acid soils for several years do not produce as high crop yields as non-acid-forming fertilizers," it was reported by Dean M. J. Funchess, director, and Dr. T. W. Tidmore, head of the soils department, of the Experiment Station.

Following a half-day's discussion of the recommendations of the Experiment Station and the problem in general, the fertilizer manufacturers and the board of agriculture members agreed for the manufacturers to appoint a special commitee to study the problem and meet back with the board at the earliest date possible, probably some time in June, to take definite action.

BRIEF RURAL ITEMS

Kudzu should be well established before beginning to mow. It should be allowed to grow at least two full seasons before mowing is started. If the soil is very poor it may be necessary to wait three seasons before mowing.

Middling 15|16 was quoted at 21 points or $1.08 per bale and middling 1-inch at 59 points or $2.95 per bale premium over middling 7|8 inch on central markets, according to report of May 19 of Division of Cotton Marketing of Bureau of Agricultural Economics, Atlanta, Ga.

Cowpeas fit well into hog-grazing systems. This crop may be planted from time danger of frost is past until late July. Several plantings will extend grazing period. The Brabham should be used where cotton wilt is common.

Yarns spun from cotton grown from mixed seed were 12 to 13½ per cent weaker than the same counts spun from cotton from pure seed of the same variety in tests by North Carolina Experiment Station.

A survey of 5,441 homes in an average Alabama County revealed that only 107 or slightly less than two per cent had a bath tub or shower, while only 222, only four percent, had electric lights.

GAME AND FISH NEWS

Montgomery, Ala., May 29.—Birmingham anglers say they have found a fisherman's paradise at Lake Purdy this summer.

During one week end approximately 700 fishermen were reported to have tossed their lures into the lake.

Fishing in this magnificent body of water has been made possible through the generosity of the Birmingham Water Works company, according to R. S. W. Browne, one of Birmingham's best known anglers.

He reports the lake is well stocked with bass, bream and crappie and that boats are there for anybody that wants to fish. J. W. Billups is in charge of the lake and is described as a most courteous and congenial host.

"Lake Purdy is 12 miles from Birmingham and there is no reason why anyone who likes to fish should complain that there is no good fishing around this city," said Mr. Browne.

"More large bass have been caught in Lake Purdy this spring than ever before and several have been brought in that weighed in the neighborhood of seven pounds.

"It is not unusual any day to see 50 or more men and women fishing at Lake Purdy and a majority of them see that the state laws are respected as to size and creel limits."

FORESTRY CAMP AIDS THE HURRICANE SUFFERERS

Montgomery, Ala., May 29.—One of President Roosevelt's Alabama Forestry Camps demonstrated the availability of the young men of the woods for public service in an unexpected way when a detachment of workers was dircted to assist the local authorities in clearing up hurricane debris in the city of Livingston during the past week. Recently various parts of west Alabama suffered severely from terrific winds. In the city of Livingston in Sumpter County the damage was quite heavy.

About this time, however, a forestry camp was established on the highway between Livingston and York. It was but natural that the afflicted community should turn to this organized body of able workers for assistance in relieving the situation. Unfortunately this help could not be furnished immediately due to the iron clad regulations of the Federal Government specifying the exact kinds of work on which the men of the forestry camps may be employed. This difficulty was obviated by Representative W. B. Oliver who secured Washington authority for the state forester to assign men to the necessary task. Immediately upon receipt of this authority the husky woodsmen of the camp went into action.

HUGHES WRITES CONCERNING HIS RACE OF SHERIFF'S OFFICE

To the Republican Voters of Chilton County:

It was not my intentions to trouble you with another piece through The Union-Banner until after the next primary in June, but I think it has become necessary for me to answer some charges that have been made against me concerning who might be hired for help should I be successful in my race for sheriff in the November election.

I made the race through the May primary without making any promises to anyone and I intend to make the race this fall the same way. It will be about two months from the election until time to take office and anyone would have plenty of time to select men who would be well qualified for the place in that length of time, and it is my intentions to wait until after then to make any selections, as I do not believe in making any promises to anyone before you have a sure place to make them good.

I asked you people to vote for me in the primary, telling you if I got the place I would do every thing in my power to give you a square deal, try to treat you just as I would have you treat me if I were in your place, and I intend to stick to this to the end of the race. With best wishes for the success of the Republican party.—I am your friend, Dewey Hughes.

BEAN BEETLES

The bean beetle is doing lots of damage in this county at present. This beetle is very difficult to control, however, it can be controlled sufficiently to produce a good crop of beans if properly treated. Below is a formula that, if properly applied, will help to control the bean beetle.

One part of magnesium arsenate, five parts of hydrated lime; mix thoroughly and use as a dust.

This beetle works on the under side of the leaves and it is very necessary to get the poison on the bottom of the leaves to be effective.

The best way to apply it is to use a dust gun of some kind, as it should be applied with force. Apply once per week and you will get fairly good results.

There is a small dust gun on the market that is all right for the home garden that can be bought for $1.50.

Farmers producing beans for the market should be careful and not put any beans on the market with dust on them. If the beans are thoroughly washed there is no danger in eating them, but a little dust would cause you to have trouble selling the beans.

BOB JONES COMMENTS ON HERE AND HEREAFTER.

"I am an evolutionist, but I believe in the Bible." That is what a man said to the writer one time. This man thought he was telling the truth, but he wasn't. No man can be an evolutionist and believe even the first verse of the Bible. The Bible begins with this statement, "In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth." The word "created" here is a Hebrew word which means "made out of nothing." There are two Hebrew words used for "create" in the first chapter of Genesis. One means to create out of nothing and the other means to form out of something which has already been created. The word which means to create out of nothing is used in the first verse of the Bible about the heavens and the earth. The same word is used about the creation of animals and the same word is used again when it says "God created man in His own image."

In the second verse of the first chapter of Genesis, we read "and the earth was without form and void." This should be rendered "the earth became waste and desolate." God did not create the earth waste and desolate. We learn this from one or two passages of scripture. God created out of nothing a perfect heaven and a perfect earth. Something happened to the earth. There was a cataclysm which probably had to do with the fall of angels. But remember, originally the earth was perfect. It became waste and desolate. The earth was inhabited before it became waste and desolate. God commanded Adam to replenish the earth. It is the opinion of the writer that all of these fossils are the bones of animals which possibly were on this earth before the earth became waste and desolate When the curse came these animals were destroyed. There was an awful smash. After this wreck of the earth, God took charge of the chaotic world and brought order out of chaos. He made the earth habitable for men. Please remember that the earth is not perfect now but it is habitable. "All creation groans and travails in pain." Paul says it is wating for redemption. Some day this earth will be restored to the perfection which it had before it became waste and desolate.

PERCY M. PITTS

Republican Candidate for Representative, Subject to the Republican Primary To Be Held June the 12th

To the Republican Voters of Chilton County:

Allow me to, again, express to you my appreciation of the vote of confidence that I received in primary of May 1, which was demonstrated by the handsome vote that I received against my opponents. By reason of the fact, in the official count, I lacked a few votes of getting as many as both of my opponents, under the law I am placed in the run-off of June 12th. I solicit your continued influence and vote and desire to restate a few of the things I will use my influence for, should I have the honor of again being your representative:

(1) A three-dollar minimum charge for automobile license tags.

(2) A seven-months free school for Alabama without incidental fees.

(3) If possible, without additional taxation on any of the necessities of life, the exemption of a homestead from county and state taxes in value not exceeding two thousand dollars.

(4) All economy measures which will reduce the operation expenses of our county and state governments. This includes the consolidation of the departments and the cutting out of unnecessary offices.

(5) Local self-government. By this, I mean to favor all measures by which the people may have a right to be heard by their ballot in the selection of their local officers, or otherwise. What our county needs is more local self-government and less centralization of power at the state capitol.

Thanking you in advance for your support of my candidacy. I am,

Respectfully yours,

PERCY M. PITTS.

A MAN CAN DO IT

What's he doing? He's making mayonnaise and isn't he pleased with himself about it? You can't blame him. Like everybody else he is extravagantly fond of fresh mayonnaise with its delicate flavor. And you see he knows that the mayonnaise he is making is going to turn out perfectly and that everybody is going to rave about it.

Just imagine a man being able to make delicious, fresh mayonnaise, the kind that makes special treats of summer salads and cold dishes.

It's true. But here's the secret.... the new Wesson Oil Mayonnaise Maker you see in the picture. It makes perfect mayonnaise in one and a half minutes and never a failure . . . fresh mayonnaise, quick as buying the bottled.

Anyone can make mayonnaise this new easy way, even a child. Because the new Mayonnaise Maker is positively fool-proof.

A very good recipe for mayonnaise is right on the jar but of course you can use any one you like. That's one of the things that makes fresh mayonnaise so nice, you can use whatever seasoning you and your family like, for a sharp flavor, a mild flavor or a sweet one.

This is the way the new gadget works. You put the egg and the seasoning into the jar, screw on the top and then pour in the Wesson Oil while you whip the dasher up and down with the other hand. You don't even have to worry about the oil pouring too fast, the cup-shaped top takes care of that. When the Wesson Oil is all out of the can, give the dasher a few more strokes and the mayonnaise is finished. And it's always perfect.

Now do you wonder that even a man can turn out marvelous, creamy-smooth, fresh mayonnaise?

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

(By Frank P. Litschert

The Pennsylvania primary has performed one important service already. It has put added pep into the regular Republican leaders at Washington and all over the country. The newspapers, and especially those favoring the "New Deal", had in advance hailed the Pennsylvania primary as a test of the administration policies. Evidently some one had told them that Governor Pinchot was going to win the nomination in a walk so they prepared the foundation for their celebration in advance by publishing freely the statement that the new deal was going to get its first real test. Unfortunately for them, however, the primary didn't turn out as they thought it would. So they had to go into reverse rather quickly and to intimate that the Pennsylvania primary was purely a local affair with no national significance. The regular Republicans, rather than the liberals of both parties, got the chance to crow. Senator Hastings, chairman of the Republican Senatorial commitee, immediately announced that, "Heartened by victory in the Republican primaries, the Republican organization will go on to many additional victories." On the other hand, Postmaster General Farley said: "I do not regard the defeat of Governor Pinchot as a test of the New Deal." What the administration leader might have said, had won, is something else again.

All of which might cause the average observer to stop and wonder just how much prophecy can be based on these state-wide primaries anyhow. There can be little doubt that their important bearing to the November result can be easily exagerated. Take the primaries in Illinois and Indiana for example. Democrat leaders claimed to get great solace from these two reasons: first, because the Democratic primary vote gained over the primary vote of 1932 and, second, because all of the Democratic congressional candidates were renominated. They hailed this as a sign that a great victory was coming in November.

Now just how much significance is there in this? In the first place, it can be said that more Democratic voters turned out because the Democrats now have the machinery and have been bolstered up by hope of additional victories to come. In the second place, it is pretty hard to defeat a sitting congressman in a primary, no matter what party he belongs to. Let us go back to 1922, for example. That was two years after the Harding landslide. In the primaries that spring Republican voters generally outnumbered the Democrats and all over the country sitting Republican congressmen were renominated, with very few exceptions. The Republican publicity services hailed this as a straw of coming victory. Yet in the election that fall, due to natural reaction from the 1920 landslide, the Republicans lost 76 congressmen and came very near losing their control of the House. So history teaches us that you can't always tell in advance just what is going to happen.

And while the Reed victory in Pennsylvania is undoubtedly a tonic to the Republicans, it must be conceded that there were many issues involved other than the New Deal. For example, there was the personality of the two candidates, and Mr. Pinchot's record as governor. Pinchot has always succeeded in rolling up a big vote in Pennsylvania, and he would have done so this year, New Deal or no New Deal. The best that can be said of the Pennsylvania primary is that the regular Republicans retain control in the biggest Republican state in the nation, and they have "dug themselves in" in a position from which they can expect to build for the future on a solid foundation.

The Legion and Politics

Various comments, opinions and predictions have been made in the present political campaign about the American Legion in partisan politics. Most all of them have displayed ignorance or mis-information about the subject.

Those who may be interested in knowing the truth about American Legion's attitude toward politics are invited to take the following expression which comes officially from Commander W. Arthur Abramson, of the Department of Alabama:

"Inquiries are coming to me from over Alabama in regard to participation of the American Legion in the present political campaign.

"I wish to state most emphatically that neither the American Legion Department of Alabama nor the local Posts thereof, nor its members as an organization or group are taking part in the campaign for or in behalf of any candidate for state or local office. And further, I wish to make it plain that any statement that the American Legion is suporting any candidate or assisting his cause is a deliberate falsehood.

"The American Legion in Alabama has only one official publication, The Alabama Legionnaire. This paper not only has not taken part in the campaign, but it has also refused to accept advertising in behalf of any candidate lest there be any misunderstanding about the state and local organizations adhering to that section of our constitution which declares that The American Legion shall be absolutely non-political and shall not be used for the dissemination of partisan principles nor for the promotion of the candidacy of any person seeking public office or preferment.

"There is a publication issued in Birmingham as a private business enterprise under the name of the Alabama Veteran, which has been espousing the cause of several candidates and carrying much political advertising. This publication does not officially nor unofficially in any way represent the views of the American Legion, and any inference published contrary to this is a gross injustice to the American Legion and thousands of its individual members.

"While the American Legion is a non-political, non-partisan, and non-sectarian organization, we recognize that one of the functions of good citizenship is exercising use of the ballot according to the dictates of ones conscience. We are promoting interest of good government in urging not only War Veterans but all citizens to have a voice in the administration of our local, state and national government, which can only be done through intelligent use of the ballot—foundation of democracy. I hope every veteran in Alabama has a sufficient interest in the welfare of his country and state to perform one of the highest duties of good citizenship and cast a ballot in the forthcoming election and all others that are to follow.

"As Commander of the Department of Alabama I hereby call upon the members of the American Legion throughout the state to refute any and all charges that the American Legion is endorsing any candidate in the political campaign. Any Department or Post that violates the above provision of the constitution of the American Legion is subject to the revocation of its charter."

Just What Happened

In an address to the graduating class of Oberlin College the other day Prof. Rex Tugwell, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, is quoted as stating that the old order of business, economics and politics, "became calamitous to the entire nation" and the people decided something had to be done. Continuing. Dr. Tugwell is quoted as saying:

"It is very strange to me, though perhaps familiar to students of abnormal psychology, that there are today in this country still a considerable number of irrational people who do not realize that something more than an ordinary presidential election took place in 1932, and who are now clamoring for a return to a kind of civilization which is as archaic as the ox-cart and the windmill."

Here are words worth thinking about. If something more than an ordinary presidential campaign occurred in 1932, just what was it? Certainly there were no issues discussed in the campaign which presaged anything more than a simple change of administrations. Both political platforms talked about economy, less government in business, simpler government and a return to normalacy. If something more than an ordinary presidential election has taken place, when did it occur, and who authorized it? Certainly it did not occur in the ballot boxes of the nation. Then just when did it happen? Did it come about when the college professors and the experts whom a distinguished Democratic statesman called "crackpots" began to appear in the picture? And if it was something more than an ordinary election what was it—a revolution? Here are some questions which the good Professor might answer in order to clarify his presentation of the situation.

And again it would be interesting to know just where is the abnormal psychology? Is it abnormal psychology to hold a reverence for the Constitution of the United States, and for the institutions which gave us the greatest country the world has ever known? Is it abnormal psychology to prefer individual liberty to regimentation to hold with the views of Washington, and Jefferson, and Lincoln, rather than with those of Rex Tugwell, Mordecai Ezekiel, and Felix Frankfurter? We would suggest that Professor Tugwell read the Republican and the Democratic platforms of 1932 and then tell us whether or not they are a development of an abnormal psychology. And if they are, then just when did we as a nation, get on the normal way of thinking?

Either the New Deal is revolutionary or it is not. Some of the professors who brought it into being deny that it comprises a revolution. But Professor Tugwell strongly intimates that in 1932 something more than an ordinary presidential election took place. We think the American people have the right to know just what it was, and how.

A scientist says that men and women learn better at forty-five than at fifteen. The big trouble is that at forty-five they have done most of their learning, and what they get from then on doesn't do them much good.

It is remarkable how the real Republicans have commenced sticking out their chests and perking up since the Pennsylvania primary.

There is an old saying that you never can tell what a woman will do, but the same thing applies to a state legislature.

The old woman who lived in a shoe would feel at home in a modern city apartment.

Some people are expecting General Johnson of the NRA to do some "cracking down" while others seem to believe that the NRA itself will soon do some cracking up.

MAN IN THE MOON

Looks Over All—Overlooks None

Gragg Field Again

Our airport is being finished, and before long Clanton is to have a real, honest-to-goodness flying field. Maybe we'll have a daily delivery of air mail. Who knows, To say the least, Clanton will be on the sky lane, and this should "put us on the map." Some time ago I mentioned the fact that we should name our local airport Gragg Field, in honor of Dr. V. J. Gragg. Clanton's first pilot. Now Mr. Victor Norris, in his "So it Seems" column in the Chilton County News, agrees that Dr. Gragg is due this recognition, in view of his untiring efforts in getting the airport for Clanton. He has spent much time and money in behalf of the airport. As said before, he is Clanton's first air-minded man. Some of these days the airplane will be the chief mode of travel. Before many years I expect to see nearly all long distance traveling done by plane, and in time, we will see much freight carried in this manner, also. Clanton, with an up-to-date field, will get her share of this "new deal" in transportation. And, if Dr. Gragg has been far-seeing enough to look into the future and see the new order of things as they are to be, then why not let his fellow townsmen be big enough to accord him the honor he is due?

Perpetual Menace

When yau take your family in your car and out on the highways of Alabama, no matter how careful a driver you may be, you are putting yourself and them "on the spot." The highways of our state are full of reckless and incompetent drivers of motor vehicles. Less than a week ago I saw a lad of about 18 years in a new 1934 model, making not less than 75 miles per hour, and violating every law of safety in the catalog. Let's consider a moment. Suppose you had met this chap, though you might have been driving carefully, and he had taken a notion to pass another car just as he met you (which I saw him do on this occasion), and suppose there had been no place for you to go, on account of a fill, or a guard rail, there would have been nothing else to do but hit him, head on, with almost sure chance of death to someone. Then, there is the nervous driver, who, when the critical moment arrives, throws up his or her hands, loosing an uncontrolled 80-horsepower motor to wreak what havoc it may. Then, again, there is the irresponsible driver, driving an old wreck of some kind, with not a dime in his pocket. Suppose he hits you—you have no way to make him pay, for he has nothing with which to pay. I believe that a great per cent of the drivers of automobiles in our state come under one of these classes, and I believe, also, that any sane person will admit that such drivers should be barred from the steering wheels of motor vehicles. These are the ones who swell the death and accident totals from auto wrecks every year. I dare say that if we had a state law, forcing all drivers to pass a test, embracing a knowledge of traffic rules, the rules of safety, and a nerve test, and allowing only those who pass this test to drive cars and trucks, our accident total would be reduced more than half. That would be worth while. I expect to have more to say about this later, and I would like to see our representative submit a bill along these lines in the next legislature.

Peace and Safety

When the NRA was first advanced, it was with the announced purpose of giving everyone an even break—to force an even break. The labor unions were to get reasonable recognition, the factory owners were to get the same, all working toward unity. We were to have heaven on earth—all peace and quiet would reign when the NRA got its work in. Well, what is the result? When you pick up your morning paper nowadays and scan over the front page, take stock of what you read. Do you see evidence of a peaceful industrial heaven? You do not! Instead, you read of riots and bloodshed from one end of the country to the other. Why? Are the rates being paid workers objectionable? No. Is the factory owner kicking at he wages he must pay? No. The answer is this. The factory owners feel that all of the unfair restrictions have been put on them, and they don't like it. The workers resent the "must" clauses in their working codes. All this breeds suspicion between capital and labor. Capital feels that control of its plants is being taken away with undue favoritism. Labor feels that capital has used money to force conditions on workmen which are objectionable. And so the war goes on, with neither side quite sure what it is fighting for. Left to themselves, as has been the case in the past, representatives of the two factions might easily come to terms. Then they could KNOW what to expect from each other. As it now stands, there is a third agency which takes a hand. Not a meditator, but a agency which FORCES its hand into the affair, telling each what it can or can not do. That forcing hand is the NRA—the agency that was to bring peace, but has not and will not. There are too many "must" clauses on both sides. People will not be forced, and the sooner this dictatorial administration finds this out, the better it will be for all concerned.

Something Good

Somebody is always turning thumbs down on me for kicking on the way things are run by these Democrats. They accuse me of never seeing anything good in the acts of Democrats. Well, I must admit that occasions for praise are few and far between, so I must not let a chance slip when I can say a good word for them. The administration at Washington has done one thing of late that is really good. It has cut off further loans to European countries who have defaulted, and a law has been made to keep private capitalists from lending to them, too. That IS good. Would that Wilson had thought of that years ago—I think we would have been on much better terms with these countries today. It has long been said that "a sure way to lose a friend is to lend him money," and truer words were never spoken. I suppose it will make them awful mad for a while, but when they find that they are to get no more until after payday, they will begin to make some kind of preparations to pay. In fact, I believe that is the only way to get those fellows to pay up. As long as they have money dished out to them every time they ask for it, we can't expect them to pay it back. France, who, with her back to the wall, was saved by men and money from America, has told us very sweetly and politely to go to the devil for our money. And now Mr. Roosevelt has told them just as politely that they can do the same when they want more money. We glory in Frankie's spunk. Now he's on the right track, and we hope he keeps it up.

"As Maine Goes—"

It is quite interesting to watch the progress of the Literary Digest poll, which that magazine is conducting to determine the attitude of the voters of the nation toward President Roosevelt's policies and the "new deal." A reduced new deal percentage marks the second week's count in the poll. Last week the percentage was 66.19 per cent in favor of, and 33.81 per cent against the new deal, out of 44,909 votes. This week, with 195,454 votes in, 120,474 vote "yes", and 74,980 vote "no". This lowers the percentage as follows: "yes"—61.64 per cent, and "no"—38.36 per cent. This is a drop of 4.55 per cent from the "yes" side, and a proportionate rise on the "no" side. In addition to this, Maine comes in as the first state to turn thumbs down on the administration, and as you know, it has long been said, "as Maine goes, so goes the nation." The Democrats pooh the idea, yet when Roosevelt ran up such a big score in Maine in 1932, these same Democrats quoted that old saying, themselves. The last week has seen a big drop in the majority the state of New York has given the president, while New Jersey and Pennsylvania were building their "yes" percentages higher. As yet no totals have been received from and of the middle western states, and a big "no" vote is expected from this section, even by the administration officials. The AAA and its farm policies didn't click so well in the west and mid-west, and the voters in these states have a way of saying what they think with votes.

Millions for Propaganda

Those opposed to American adherence to the World Court have been having their innings before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and one of the statements which has caused much newspaper comment is the one of former Senator Reed of Missouri in which he charged that the "Carnegie and Bok millions" have furnished the funds for the propaganda to get the United States into the World Court and the League of Nations. In part, Senator Reed said:

"In considering the question I want first to outline the origin of this movement. The proponents of this measure are the proponents of the League of Nations. This is the back door through which they seek to effect our entrance. They are intimately connected with the Carnegie Foundation, which, with a heavy contribution from Mr. Bok, has financed the entire propaganda.

"Years ago Carnegie published a series of articles. In them he declared the United States never should have gone out from under the protection of the British Empire, should return to the British Empire and that when she did return Great Britain must occupy the dominant, controlling position.

"Carnegie money is being used to finance in numerous countries international organizations working to bring the United States into a combination of peoples of the world. It is that money and those employed by that money, perhaps with the money of Mr. Bok, who have carried on this effort to pull down the American flag and to substitute for it an international rag. * * *

"I may be old fashioned, but I think that when George Washington, knowing the dangers of entangling alliances, warned us that Europe had a set of interests distinct from ours, he was a better patriot than Andrew Carnegie or even Elihu Root.

"I still think that Abe Lincoln, Theodore Roosevelt, and Grover Cleveland had some sense. I still believe we can attend to our own affairs, that if we stay on this side of the ocean and attend to our own affairs, we probably will never be involved in another world conflict."

Here are some statements which are worth thinking over. The propaganda to get Uncle Sam involved in foreign affairs has been unceasing, and has extended over a period of fifteen years. Nationalists have been compelled to depend on their own efforts and the worthiness of their cause to block these efforts, and that they have been successful for so long in the face of the huge sums of money which have been spent on the other side, is the best evidence that their cause is just.

Dr. and Mrs. Earle Gowan are in Atlanta to see their son, Jesse Sam, receive his D. D. S. degree from Atlanta-Southern Dental College. Jesse Sam will return to Clanton soon and begin preparations to set himself up for practice of denistry. His many friends hope he will locate here with his daddy. This is a good field of opportunity for him. He knows people here, and people know him. He is a grandson of the Johnson family, among whom are and have been some of our most successful physicians. His father, Dr. Earle Gowan, has practiced dentistry here for close to thirty years. Family and professional background offers Jesse Sam a mighty fine foundation upon which to build a most successful career in his home town.

While at Montevallo Monday Dr. Gragg was introduced to Miss Frances Perkins by Dr. O. C. Carmichael, as "our State Senator." Earle Thomas, perhaps, will question the correctness of this introduction; but it won't be long until we shall see.

Grady Broadhead came up from Montgomery last week end to complete plans for moving his family to the Capital City. They will move this week, after which Dr. C. O. Lawrence and family will occupy the Broadhead home here.

The mail carriers of the county had a picnic Wednesday at Gulledge's Camp on Blue Creek. This is the first gathering they have had for some years, the old custom having been temporarily abandoned during hard times.

Howard L. Foshee, former County Superintendent of Education, was a visitor to Clanton last Saturday. For several years Mr. Foshee has been living in Montgomery, but he keeps his interest in Chilton County affairs.

Byron Harris, of Stanton, Beat 8, was a visitor to Clanton last Saturday. Mr. Harris said he is specially interested in the nomination of Judge Reynolds in the primary of June the 12.

Frank Foshee, of the Clanton Mattress Factory, is fond of all-day suckers. Sometimes he amuses himself with one while he goes about his work. Likewise, Charles Cooper, erstwhile candidate for the Legislature, likes lolly-pops.

Kelley Gentry, of Montgomery, was a visitor here last Saturday. He comes back to the old homestead quite often to see his mother, Mrs. W. J. Gentry, of Cane Creek.

A number of mad dogs have been reported in this vicinity in recent weeks. This creates a very keen menace to public safety. It is hoped that our town authorities will inaugurate such measures as will reduce the mad dog danger to the very minimum. One human afflicted with the terrors of rabies would be a price too big to pay for all the dogs in the county.

Why do people "cut across" the corners of yards? There is a well-beaten path on the lawns of both the Methodist and Baptist churches, where folks have taken a "short cut" as they pass along. I noticed the same thing at many homes. Once I had to build a brick wall at the corner of my yard to keep boys from riding across the grass. It appears rather a thoughtless act for one to walk across the grass—on the other fellow's yard—and make an ugly trail where no grass can possibly grow.

Remember the old fashioned platforms of 1932 which stood for economy and less government in business?

The reason those Japanese cherry trees at Washington are so popular with the youngsters is that there is no cherry picking to do after the blossoms fade.

Not A True Bill

It may be that even Mr. Mellon's best friends, thoroughly convinced of his innocence, nevertheless believed he would be indicted. Conviction in a court of justice, of course, would be something else again. But partisan though they may be, Americans resent political maneuvers that savor of persecution or vindictiveness. It was difficult to believe that high administration officials would risk the criticism resulting from an appearance of persecution and would take before a grand jury hearing only one side of the case, allegations so flimsy that they would be ignored. Even a grand jury indictment, which represents nothing except a finding that the evidence is such as to warrant trial, would have represented justification of a sort of the extraordinary tactics pursued by the government in the Mellon case, and the government needed justification.

That the grand jury ignored the government's case and refused to indict is something more than a viudication of Mr. Mellon. The grand jury's ignoramus is an indictment of the government's course. That course was to deny to Mr. Mellon the established right of a hearing to determine, in the first place, whether there was evidence of improper tax payment and, in the second place to carry the case to the Board of Tax Appeals and have the matter examined there. After that, of course, there was resort to the courts. Leaving aside entirely the matter of personal honor and integrity, it was rather silly to believe that a man of Mr. Mellon's wealth and prestige would haggle over the payment of several hundred thousand or several million dollars, if this failure to pay that sum was to constitute evidence of fraudulent evasion of taxes. Any argument he might make, and he was denied the traditional right to argue his side of the case, would be based on principle and interpretation of a law with which he was thoroughly familiar.

The Mellon case represents a blunder that will carry its own penalties. It was brought into the headlines, in a manner that was as unusual as it was improper, at a time when criticism of another blunder—the airmail fiasco—was at its height. The Attorney General, in a statement commenting on the grand jury proceedings, suggests that the business of criminal prosecution of Mr. Mellon is now over and there will be no more moves in that direction. "The simple truth is that he was treated like any one else in a similar situation" said the statement. But it is not recalled that anybody other than the former Republican Secretary of the Treasury has found himself in "a similar situation."—Washington (D.C.,) Star.

For Bice For Clerk

To the Voters of Chilton County:

Here are some things I want the voters of Chilton County to consider when you go to the polls to nominate a man for Circuit Clerk June 12.

Mr. Bice is young alert and about the age man we need for the Circuit Clerk's office. He has been highly recommended by the business men of Thorsby, a fact I hope you will give deep consideration. We need to nominate men for office who bring the right recommendation to the voters. When you select men to run your personal affairs, you select a man who can and will furnish a good recommendation by people whom he has served, and found competent for the job. Such a one he has furnished you with. Also I want to call attention to the fact he received 275 votes in his home Beat, 9. When a man's home beat stays by him 275 strong that man is worthy of your consideration.

Now, a word to the ex-service men. Now, boys, come on and pull for your buddy. He is in every way worthy of your help to put him over the top. Don't stop with your personal vote, but show his recommendation to your neighbors who do not take The Union-Banner, and ask their support of him on June 12th.

Readers, when you read this letter, note the contents carefully and I believe you will agree that Bice is the man to nominate for Circuit Clerk.

Yours truly,

J. W. SORRELLS.

D. S. ROBINSON WRITES TO VOTERS OF CHILTON COUNTY

D. S. Robinson writes to voters of Chilton County thanking them for their liberal votes cast for me on May the first, that I might get the nomination to become a member of the school board of education in Chilton County. Now, as you know, I did not get enough votes to become a nominee. I am sincerely asking you for your vote and influence to your friends to vote for me on June 12, that I may be the nominee for election in the general election in November.

And if I am nominated in the primary and elected in November, I hope to serve the people of Chilton County at large, in a way that will be justice to all concerned and an honor to the school board. Children may get their equal rights; parents receive what is right; teachers receive a just benefit for their services. As a whole we want cooperation in a general way. Everybody do right and we get it.

Again thanking you for your past votes, also your future votes. If I am your choice in the June primary to that of nominee, thank you. If Mr. Smith is the nominee I will support him in the general election.

Yours for service,
D. S. (SEBE) ROBINSON.

J. N. DENNIS FOR J. Z. MIMS FOR JUDGE OF COUNTY

Please allow me to say that I do not believe that the voters of our party need any one to tell them how to vote, and I would not try to influence any voter to vote against their judgment. But in response to numerous inquiries, I beg to say that it is my judgment that it is to the best interest of our party to nominate Mr. J. Z. Mims to lead the Republican party to success in November. Yours truly, J. N. Dennis.

We had services at his place Saturday and Sunday. Our pastor delivered two masterful sermons. We also had prayer service Sunday night.

As far as the writer knows, the health in this community is good. We don't know why the crowd was not larger Sunday night. It seems that some are more interested in other churches than they are in their own. So, let's all come to Sunday school next Sunday with a well prepared lesson.

Our revival will be held at his place beginning on Saturday before the fourth Sunday in July. Let us pray that his be one of the greatest revivals ever held in the history of the church.

We are expecting to have singing in the afternoon the third Sunday in June. Everybody is cordially invited. Come and bring your books and sing. The Harbor Bells will be used or if you have any other new books bring them.

Majority Of Voters In First District Are Opposed To Commissioner J. E. Cobb

To the Republican Voters of Chilton County:

We, the undersigned qualified Republican voters residing in the First District of Chilton County (at present represented by Commissioner J. E. Cobb) hereby call attention of the voters of the county to a few important facts and figures.

Commissioner Cobb was a candidate for the nomination to succeed himself in the Republican Primary of May 1st. There were four other candidates against him. The various candidates received votes in the First District as follows:

W. G. SHAW	196
J. P. BEAN	190
J. E. COBB	128
A. P. ROBINSON	107
W. H. CONWAY	29
Totals	650

Out of the 650 votes cast in the First District, Mr. Cobb received 128. Mr. J. P. Bean and Mr. W. G. Shaw each received a higher vote than Mr. Cobb in the First District.

Now, it is evident from the above figures that if the Republican voters of the first District had been left to settle for themselves the question of nominating their candidate for Commissioner, Mr. Cobb would not now be in the run-off primary. It would be between Mr. Bean and Mr. Shaw.

We, therefore, want to remind the Republican voters in other parts of the county that the Republicans of the First District, by their votes on May the first, eliminated Commissioner Cobb, and said they do not want him in office any longer.

Now, we appeal to the voters in all parts of the county to let the people of the First District have the Commissioner they want, and help us nominate J. P. Bean on the 12th day of June. It is self-evident, by the vote cast in the first primary that the majority of the voters of Mr. Cobb's own district are opposed to his policies and the manner in which he has handled county affairs.

The Story of the Bible Told in Pictures

The Serpent Deceives Eve; Man's Shameful Fall.—After God created heaven and earth and populated the earth with all manner of living things, He made man in His own image, putting him in the Garden of Eden to care for it. He saw that Adam was lonely and caused a deep sleep to fall upon him. From one of man's ribs God then fashioned woman, and warned the pair not to eat of the fruit of the tree of knowledge, threatening them with death if they disregarded His commands. But the serpent told Eve not to be afraid, "and she took the fruit thereof, and did eat, and gave also unto her husband with her; and he did eat."—Gen. 3: 6. W. A. MOORE ENDORSES REYNOLDS

Editor Union-Banner:

I want to say a few words to the voters of this county. Voters, where are we drifting? Can we look across on the other side and see the shore? Republicans, what is the matter with our people? Will we vote to continue the present condition? Can we defend the record of our party officials this fall?

It is said that the commissioners court has spent around $300,000 in the last year besides the CWA money and the roads that have been built by the U. S. government with CWA money. Some good work was done on the schoolhouses with CWA money and all this should be credited to Judge Reynolds. He almost worked alone for this money against the opposition of the balance of the county officers.

Now, I would like to know what is the intention of our commissioners by spending nearly all our money with the overseers, trucks and truck drivers, when we have so many good men that are in need and a few days work would help them so much. It is discouraging to us to see some men on the payroll nearly all the time, some of them related to the commissioners, some brothers, some brother-in-laws. It has been the custom in the past to pass the work around. Why this change in the past year? The thing I cannot understand is that all our county officials seem to endorse the present manner in which our money is spent and it looks like our commissioners have taken the advice of most of our county officers. Were they just trying to kill Reynolds? Have they shut their eyes to the welfare of our party and forgotten that we are to have an election this fall and that we will have to explain and give an accounting for our stewardship to the people of this county?

It looks like we have come to the place where Judge L. H. Reynolds is about the only leader we have left that is fighting the battles of our party; and it must be embarrassing to him to have to refuse to write warrants after the commissioners have passed them. But in the name of common sense, where would we be if we did not have Judge Reynolds where he could save us and our treasury from being busted? I glory in his backbone and I for one will help hold up his hands, but if he should go down in defeat, I had rather be defeated by taking the stand he has than to be elected on the other side. I do not believe that the Republicans will defeat him, but will give him the biggest endorsement he has ever received. They say he has held the office too long. The length of time he has had it is the strongest endorsement of his acts that could be mentioned. If he had not been a good judge, he would have not stayed in office this long.

I commend Judge Reynolds to the Republican voters of this county. It is my opinion we need his service at this time and we can elect him easier than any other candidate.

Judge Reynolds fights openly. He has no secrets. He takes the people into his confidence. I wonder what would have happened to us in the last two years if it had not been for Judge Reynolds.

Republicans, think well before you cast your vote on the 12th day of June. — Yours truly, W. A. Moore, Lawley, Ala.

A Republican Writes Voters

Editor Union-Banner:

As the final round-up is drawing near, we should all be thinking seriously of who we will bring out on June 12, as our standard bearers in November. All rests on us now. We want men one hundred per cent loyal to the party, men who can do our work in the best possible manner, men who are able to meet the criticism of the enemy. We have that kind of material in our midst. Then one hundred per cent loyalty on our part comes next. Like immortal Calvin Coolidge said, "We, as an individual do not belong to this time." No, we are of the past, but interested in the grand old party.

There are now and will be more defeated candidates after June 12, but that is no disgrace. They are the real victors in this campaign, because we can't do without them. They are indispensible. We need every one of them.

Then let us still keep up the record, no "mud slinging". Not even just a little. But crush the vindictive spirit. The great success of our county calls on all of us to keep the record up regardless of candidates.

The depression is still on us. The buying power is not restored yet. Until that is done we will drag. So we are expecting a fine lot of candidates after June 12th, all moving in harmony, holding up the banner of the grand old party, and all will be well.

Our long list of county officials is a source of inspiration. Some of them have served long, faithfully and successfully. We are proud of them. Let the spirit of union that led the party in the stormy days of old, still lead us, and the party of Lincoln, McKinley and Coolidge will still flourish in our county.—A Republican voter.

MAPLESVILLE ROUTE 2 CITIZEN FAVORS REYNOLDS RE-ELECTION

Editor Union-Banner:

I would like to write a letter for the first time to the paper in behalf of Judge Reynolds. I have not been asked to do this by any one, as some may say.

I am thankful that we have a man that has the interest of the poor taxpayers at heart. Boys, if we have a man in the June primary, a candidate, who doesn't pay taxes, skip this name. I am 69 years old and I have been voting for Judge Reynolds for 30 years; I have never regretted it.

Some say we have kept him too long. We have tried him and we know that he has been true to his party. He is the "daddy" of the Republican party in Chilton County. He has always stood for the people and has never held any secrets from them. He always comes out in the open with public matters and stands out for the taxpayers. So, I say, let's follow him until he gets so old that he can't get to his office; so, let's give him one of the biggest majorities on the 12th of June that he has ever gotten.

We have tried Judge Reynolds and we know that he will stand any test that he is put to. So, in the face of these things, I think it is a bad time to swap judges. He will sweep this part of the county, I think. So, remember Judge Reynolds on June the 12th, and vote for the man who we all know is a true friend of the people of Chilton County.—J. R. Rucker.

It looks so sweet to see a small child like he is take so much interest in singing.

At eleven o'clock the memorial services began, singing in memory of loved ones that have passed away. Mrs. Era Culver, Mr. T. C. Jackson, Mr. J. R. Scott and Mr. W. L. Sanders sang in memory of Major B. F. White, the author of our dear song book, which gives us so much comfort and consolation to sing from. Mr. M. C. Jackson sang in memory of Mr. Martin Jacks, one of our beloved brothers of the convention, who has lately passed away. Mr. J. W. Hays sang in memory of a Mrs. Edwards. Mr. A. A. Jackson sang in memory of Elder Joe W. Howell, another man whom we all loved. Mr. J. R. Scott sang in memory of Mr. D. T. Popwell, another one of our beloved brothers of the convention. Mr. T. C. Jackson sang in memory of Bro. Nelson, a man whom every body loved.

Late in the afternoon several special songs were sung, which were enjoyed by all. They were directed by M. C. Jackson, J. A. Barnett, G. W. Akers, Mr. Crocker, J. W. Hays and T. C. Jackson.

We want to thank the New Harmony community for their interest shown in this convention last Sunday. We sure thank each family that brought a box of dinner, for we had a beautiful table set before our many visitors, in which I am sure they all enjoyed. We hope each and every person enjoyed the day at New Harmony last Sunday and will come back again. Everybody has a welcome here at all times.

The closing song was sung by the chairman, W. L. Sanders, and prayer by J. W. Hays.—Winford Jackson, secretary.

Says "Doing Well Is Hard to Beat"

The time is growing near for the people to vote again, and the time is slipping by so I must speak another good word in behalf of our present judge. People who are not for Judge Reynolds, open your eyes, wake up and see where you are going. Don't the Bible say if the blind leads the blind we will all fall in the ditch. Now, Judge Reynolds is not blind. He has been leading and helping us for a long time, and who has been in the ditch? No one. But we were in the ditch, in debt, and almost in bankruptcy when he became judge.

Our roads could not be traveled by automobiles. A mule and wagon could hardly crawl. The man had to walk and let his wife drive, and if she weighed over 98 pounds, she had to walk too. This is true, not a joke. And one of the two led the mule.

Judge Reynolds has saved us. He has worked, worried and lost sleep to put us where we are today. Are we going to support him in return, or are we going to shut our eyes and try to forget him and the good he has done?

I heard a compliment passed on our judge the other day. A man from Montgomery, an orator, says Judge Reynolds is one of the finest judges the South affords. He is so honest. Honesty is what we need.

Now the old saying is, "Doing well is hard to beat." So, let's let doing well alone. It's not what I say or what the other fellow says that should count with you so much. It is the record. There is nothing wrong with it. All the people out where I live are going to vote for him. They know he is O.K. Why don't you? You know it. A lot of you Democrats know it. Don't you?

Now everyone who wants a real judge, Reynolds is the man. He has proved he is. We know a tree by the fruit it bears. We know our judge by the good he has done. People, you can't say no. Think now, before it's too late. If you don't know the judge, go to see him and he will appreciate your visit. He's your friend. He will appreciate your vote more than anyone. Support him. You can't be sorry.

Thanking you in advance for your vote for Judge Reynolds on June the 12th, 1934.—Carolyn J. Shaw.

BEAN DENOUNCES RUMORS THAT HE IS NOT ELIGIBLE

To the Voters of Chilton County:

I regret that it has become necessary that I write this letter, but several of my friends have come to me, saying that there is a rumor afloat that I am not eligible to hold the office of county superintendent of education, because I have not filed the necessary papers with the probate judge. I want to say that this is absolutely false. I have filed every paper of every description whatsoever that is required by law and I felt certain that I had compliel with the law in every detail, but to make sure that I had not overlooked anything, I took the matter up with three of the best lawyers in Clanton, and each of them says that I have fully complied with the law.

This is the second time that I have been forced to denounce rumors that I do not meet the legal qualification to hold this office. The first time that such rumors of this nature were started there were a few who thought they had me out of the race because I had not taught during the present scholastic year. They fell flat on that, for the law had been changed without their knowledge, so that I was eligible. The second rumor originated in the minds of certain Democrats and it was passed on to me by some of my political enemies. This is just another of the many acts to persecute me and bring about my defeat.

I wish to say while writing this that it will be practically impossible and unnecessary that I make an extensive canvass of the county again. I am very busy with my farm work and will not be able to see many of the voters before the June primary, but I again take this means of soliciting your vote and influence.—Very sincerely, W. T. Bean.

Prof. D. Pinkerson of Mobile spent Sunday and Monday in Clanton visiting his brother and wife, Mr. and Mrs. H. Pinkerson.

Mrs. Irene Rasberry has returned after a brief visit to friends in Thorsby.

Lesson for June 3

JESUS IN THE SHADOW OF THE CROSS

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 26:31-46.
GOLDEN TEXT—And he went a little farther, and fell on his face, and prayed, saying, O my Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me: nevertheless not as I will, but as thou wilt. Matthew 26:39.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Praying.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus in Gethsemane.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Jesus Praying in the Garden.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Gethsemane.

I. Plotting the Death of Jesus (vv. 1-5).

Jesus, with divine insight, predicted not only the fact of his death but its time and manner. He was not taken by surprise since for this preeminent purpose he came into the world (Heb. 2:14). He deliberately walked up to death. He knew that the Passover would find its fulfillment in his death, for he was the antitypical lamb thereof. The Jewish authorities in secret conclave were plotting to silence his voice by putting him to death. It was the divine purpose that he die.

II. Mary of Bethany Anoints Jesus (vv. 6-13).

1. The place of the act (vv. 6, 7). This anointing occurred when Jesus was at meat in Simon's house. She brought a precious possession and lavished it upon her Master.

2. The indignation of the disciples (vv. 8, 9). The action of the disciples was in strange contrast with Mary's love. The real thing that hurt Judas was the loss of the money for which the ointment might have been sold; not that he cared for the poor (John 12:5, 6).

3. Mary defended by Christ (vv. 10-13.) Jesus could not allow his most appreciative disciple to lie under this censure so he came to her rescue. In spite of their criticism, he had nothing but the highest praise for her deed. As a result of Christ's defense, Judas is so stingingly rebuked that he hastens away to betray his Lord.

4. The meaning of this act (vv. 12, 13). By sitting at Jesus' feet in loving fellowship, she obtained a grasp of truth which none of the other disciples had. She saw that his body was to be broken and that his precious life was to go out. She entered into fellowship with his sufferings and the joys of his resurrection. This she showed in the symbolic act of lavishing her most precious possession upon him. She did this service in loving anticipation.

III. Jesus Betrayed (vv. 14-30).

1. The bargain of betrayal (vv. 14-16). Satan had so complete a mastery over Judas that he sold his Lord for the price of a slave (Exod. 21:32).

2. The betrayal announced (vv. 17-30). This took place while they were eating the Passover. It may be that the reason for this announcement at this time was to afford Judas a last opportunity to repent. Jesus' words, "He that dippeth his hand with me in the dish the same shall betray me," revealed the darkness of this crime.

IV. The Disciples Warned (vv. 31-35).

This took place as they walked from the upper room to the Garden of Gethsemane. He plainly told them, "All ye shall be offended because of me this night," quoting Zechariah 13:7 as proof. Peter vehemently protested that although all should forsake him, he would not. How little Peter knew of his weakness. His self-confidence was his snare.

V. Jesus Praying (vv. 36-46).

1. The place—the Garden of Gethsemane (v. 36). Gethsemane means "oil press." It was a place some three-quarters of a mile east of Jerusalem where oil was crushed out of the olives.

2. His companions (v. 37). Peter, James, and John, who had been with him on the Mount of Transfiguration, are permitted to go with him in the deep shadow of the garden.

3. Jesus sorrowing even unto death (vv. 37, 38). The cause of his suffering was not primarily physical but spiritual. He was being made sin for us (II Cor. 5:21).

4. The prayer itself (v. 39). "O my Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me." What was this cup? It was not a prayer to be delivered from the cross. The idea that he desired to escape from the cross and thus stop short all his redemptive work is not to be entertained. Redemption through the sacrifice of himself was the supreme purpose of his coming into the world. The holiness and perfection of his nature moved him to shrink from the mountain of sin which was resting upon him. Though the cup was bitter he bowed in submission to the Father's will.

Following a Star

The secret of the perseverance of the wise men is not hard to find. It sprang from this, that they were following a star. Had they been guided by anything less than that, they would have sunk down wearied long ago.

Fear of Conscience

Many a man has in his past life some deed hidden which, if it became known, would drive him from society, because it would bring down on him the reprobation of the conscience of all who knew him.

Many girls are not so bad as they paint themselves.

ENDORSES J. E. COBB

Please allow me space in your paper to express my opinion of Mr. Cobb. He has made us a good commissioner in every respect. Mr. Cobb is an honorable and upright man, one who has labored in season and out for its success. He has made good roads and saved the county money, too, and on June the 12th we want to vote him in again. The roads have improved considerably since Mr. Cobb became commissioner. We are hoping he will be re-elected.—Yours truly, R. M. Vines, Perry Vanderslice, Colonel Blow.

The following are in favor of Mr. Cobb: J. H. Cleckler, Mrs. Callie Cleckler, Synthia Littleton, Gertie Mae Brand, Clarence Burnett, J. C. Knox, Fonzie Ellison, J. A. Blalock, Mrs. Oda Bates. W. L. Littleton says his road is in good condition and hopes Cobb will be elected next time. Mrs. W. L. Littleton.

We, the fishermen of this county, know the road to our camp has never been worked in years until Mr. Cobb became commissioner. Now we have a road that is worked and kept in good shape, and we call on the fishermen of this county to help keep Mr. Cobb in office.—Matthews Fishing Camp, by J. M. Matthews and Alfred Johnson. J. McDOWELL ENDORSES W. T. BEAN

To the Editor of The Union-Banner:

Will you be kind enough to give me space in your paper to say a few words in regard to the candidacy of W. T. Bean, who is now asking for the position of county superintendent of education?

When he was superintendent before I taught for a while under him, and I believe I know wherewith I speak. I have never once heard an intelligent criticism of his acts while he filled this office. On the contrary, I have heard many, many people say that he made the best superintendent that Chilton County has ever had. I really believe the schools made as much progress under his administration as has ever been made in that period of time. He increased the length of term from about four and one-half or five months to seven months for every white school. The number of teachers was increased to about what it is now. It should be remembered that this was done with about one-fourth of the money that is now available for the schools. Taking into consideration the fact that Mr. Bean is a man of mature mind and in the prime of life, and a man of long and successful teaching experience, and his six years' experience in this office, and the fact that he has had several months special college training for this special work, and the fact that he has children of his own to educate, all go to make him the best qualified man for that position that the county affords. Let us see further why this can be truthfully said. What has he done for the county? First, he graded the schools and put them on a progressive basis. Second, he raised the term of school to seven months for every white child in the county. Third, he has been the promoter of nine of the most progressive, county-wide far-reaching movements that have brought thousands of dollars to the county. Fourth, he has been a life-long, loyal Republican, who has done as much for the party as any man in the party.

I wish that space would permit me to speak more fully of his record as a promotor of worthy causes, but if every one will stop and think he will recall that Bean is a man who really does things. He has spoken through the county for almost every good movement that has been launched for the last fifteen or twenty years, and he has never lost in but one cause. He has been the instigator of several movements that have been put over and have meant much to the county.

Bean is not a dreamer nor a theorist, he is a practical man who puts over whatever he undertakes. This is exactly the type of man needed to fill this office. A very large per cent of the things that confront a superintendent of education is county-wide questions and needs leadership to carry them over. I feel that no one in the county has had more experience and has been more successful along this line than has Mr. Bean.

Voters, this is a time when we need the most talented man available to put at the head of our schools. The whole country is in the midst of an economical change. We have no time to experiment with new men. What is needed is a man to fill this office who has been tried and has stood the test. We need a man who will be ready to cope with whatever situation may arise. Mr. Bean's election will be no experiment; he has been weighed in the balance and found worthy and efficient.

Voters, let's lay all prejudice aside and think for just a moment. I feel that beyond a ray of doubt that Bean is entitled to this nomination. He has worked unceasingly for the Republican party for many years, speaking every time the party has called upon him. He has been one of the main links in the chain that has held the party together. He has never once fallen down on the party. Last year in the special election he was defeated because the party was shot to pieces. Due to the condtion of the party, it could not be helped then, but we can help it now. I want to ask that we lay all prejudice aside and put Bean back in the race where he was this time a year ago.

I understand some voted against Mr. Bean in the last primary because they thought it inadvisable to put him up against the same man who defeated him last June. But I want to call attention that the party supported him in the general election as is shown by the fact that he got several more votes in the general election than he and his opponent together received in the primary preceding that election. The party will support him again in November if he is nominated on June 12th. Look at the vote polled in the recent primary for all three candidates running for this office on the Republican ticket. The three together received about 1,000 more votes than the Democrat candidate for this office received. Under this condition, it is bosh to say that there is a danger of Bean's losing in the November election if nominated.

I hope that all Republicans will take the same interest and go to the polls on June the twelfth as they did on the first of May. It is important that we nominate men who are safe for the November election and safe to fill the respective offices to which they aspire.

Sincerely,
O. H. McDOWELL.

Thorsby Institute News

Last Thursday, May 24th, was commencement day for Thorsby Institute. It was a beautiful day. The exercises of the day were held in Helen Jenkins hall, beginning at 10:30 a.m. The hall was very artistically decorated with larkspur flowers. The processional was quite impressive as all the pupils of the school in double file marched up the center aisle singing and taking their places at side seats in front, followed by the seniors in single file, who took their places on the platform. Then followed the program interspersed by the girls chorus and an instrumental solo. The Rev. A. W. Dycer, D. C. FENN JONES IS MENTIONED FOR MAYOR OF TOWN

Will Be Requested To Offer As Candidate in September Election

The time is rapidly approaching when the people of Clanton will be called upon to choose a mayor. The election comes in September. Not only a mayor, but members of the Council, as well, are to be chosen.

The general inference, of course, is that present Mayor, J. Lee Smith, will not be a candidate to succeed himself, inasmuch as he is the Democratic candidate for Probate Judge in the November general election.

This leaves the Mayor's race wide open for the introduction of a brand new piece of timber, and already a number of citizens have offered suggestions as to probable and suitable candidates for the head of our city government.

The name of Mr. C. Fenn Jones appears at present to be uppermost in the minds of those who have made open suggestions as a suitable successor to Mr. Smith. Many have expressed their favor toward Mr. Jones, and it is almost certain that he will have strong support if he will consent to get into the race.

Mr. Jones is eminently fitted for the office of Mayor of our city. He is able, experienced, and in every way suitably situated and equipped to give himself to a period of public service. He is a retired business man, with plenty of time on his hands to devote to a proper attention to public matters that go with the mayor's office.

The many friends of Mr. Jones are intensely interested in the suggestion that he be made mayor. He will have strong support, and we dare say he will be elected, if he will consent to get in the race.

Feud Ends With Death For Two

Elmore County Store Keeper Slayed Two Assailants In His Store

Wetumpka, Ala., June 3. — Arthur (Spot) Ingram, one-eyed storekeeper in the Red Hill community, shot two men to death in the bedroom adjoining his store last night, thereby ending a feud which had kept him at enmity with Dennis Smith and Norman Tantor, ever since the night, several months ago, when Ingram's grist mill burned to the ground.

After the shooting Ingram escorted his wife and child to the home of a relative and notified Sheriff J. Hasty Golden. The sheriff took Ingram into custody and Coroner W. M. Owsley removed the bodies.

Only Ingram and the men he killed were in the combination store and dwelling when the shooting took place and his account was all the sheriff had tonight.

Sheriff Ingram said that Ingram's grist mill was destroyed by fire several months ago and that Ingram suspected Dennis Smith. Enmity developed between the two men and Tantor incurred Ingram's dislike, it was said, when he took Smith's side.

According to the story of the shooting Ingram related to the sheriff, Tantor came to his store Saturday afternoon and a quarrel ensued, ending when Ingram knocked Tantor down. Later, Ingram said, Tantor and Smith came together to the store and assaulted him.

Ingram's invalid wife and their child ran from the store and hid in a nearby thicket. Then, Ingram related, he managed to retreat into his bedroom, followed by Smith and Tantor.

Obtaining his revolver, Ingram said, he shot has assailants. Then he accompanied his wife to her mother's home and notified the sheriff.

When the coroner arrived to remove the bodies he found that Smith had been shot in the chest while Tantor had a bullet hole in his head.

Dennis Smith, who was 63 years old, is survived by his widow and a son. Tantor, 28, leaves a widow.

The Red Hill community, where the shooting took place, is in the northeast part of Elmore County, about 23 miles from Wetumpka.

Sheriff Golden said last night that no specific charge had been brought against Ingram, pending further investigation. Ingram is about 45 years old.

RECORD BOOKS GIVEN FARMERS

To Be Used In Keeping Record of Farming Business During Year

Farm record books are being furnished for the convenience of the farmers of Chilton County in keeping certain information of importance in connection with their cotton acreage reduction contracts. For example, a record should be kept of the amount of lint cotton on hand January 1, 1934, the pounds of lint bought in 1934 not covered by contract, pounds of lint sold under contract and names of buyers, amount of lint on hand at the end of the year, and the use of rented acres. The record has very convenient forms for keeping this information needed in connection with the contracts and in addition has space for keeping other information of value to the farmer.

4-H club members and members of agricultural classes can render valuable service and gain considerable experience by helping their fathers keep the record.

Farmers who do not understand how to keep the book should get help from their local committeeman, 4-H club leaders, agricultural teachers, or from a neighbor who understands how to keep it.

Every farmer in Chilton County who signed a cotton contract is urged to keep this record.

Additional books have been requested for those farmers who have not yet received a record book.

TEACHER TAKES OWN LIFE

Bessemer, June 2.—Twelve days before she was to have been married, Miss Margaret Alford 25-year old school teacher in the Bessemer High School, shot and killed herself.

Miss Alford's wedding dress was delivered Friday morning, a short time before she shot herself through the heart.

One note found in her room gave directions for disposing of a sum of money, and another said, "I am doing this because there is no happiness in the world."

The body was found by a man who went to call the young woman to lunch. A coroner returned a verdict of suicide.

Miss Alford's home was in Elmore, Ala., where she was buried Sunday.

Prospects For Gas

Editor Union-Banner:

Thomasville, Ala., June 2.—It will probably be of interest to the readers of the Union-Banner to know that there is very favorable prospects for oil and gas in this section of Alabama. The Magnolia Petroleum Company of Texas now has approximately 65,000 acres of land in this section under lease and a number of geologists, who have made careful surveys of soil conditions in this section have expressed themselves as being favorably impressed with the possibilities.

Mr. W. L. Wood, head of the land leasing department has been working for some time, getting land titles, etc., straight and I understand that work will begin this week preparing for the first well, which will be located near Thomasville, Ala. This will only be a test well, but it is expected by many that if they are succesful in finding oil or gas that immediate operations will begin in producing same. Best wishes to The Union-Banner.—M. C. Henley.

MRS. ADDIE DEVAUGHN DIED

Mrs. Addie Devaughn, age 77 years, died last Thursday at her home in Poplar Springs community. Burial was at Poplar Springs Friday, with Martin in charge. Funeral services were conducted by Rev. G. G. Williams, assisted by Rev. W. P. Lowery.

PROF. ALZORA IS AN INTERESTING CHARACTER

Yes, sir, we have a real mystery man right here in our midst. And he really does mysterious-looking feats. Prof. Alzora is located in his tent at the little red filling station on the highway below Cooper.

The professor, a young man, has put on two performances at the Wadesonian Theatre in Clanton, two in Calera, and he appeared at Collins Chapel schoolhouse Saturday night before a large crowd.

If Alzora is not real, he certainly has a clever way of illuding the human eye. He is even a fairly good weather predicter. The professor gives personal readings at his tent when he is not engaged in public appearances.

W. W. FOX DIED LAST SUNDAY P M

Prominent Clanton Business Man For the Past 20 Years

Mr. W. W. Fox, age 68 years, prominent business man of Clanton, died at his home here last Sunday afternoon. He had been sick for several months, suffering with cancer.

Funeral services were conducted Tuesday morning by Rev. R. P. Cochran, pastor of Clanton Methodist church, of which the deceased was a member. Burial was in Clanton Cemetery, with Martin in charge.

Active pallbearers were L. C. Warr, J. P. Lawrence, Reed Mullins, Eric Hart, Dr. J. E. Gowan, and J. B. Atkinson. Honorary pallbearers were V. J. Elmore, Dr. V. J. Gragg, Dr. N. S. Johnson, W. H. Sartor, W. D. Spigener, and W. M. Polk.

Mr. Fox is survived by his second wife, Mrs. Mattie Fox, and one brother, Mr. Joe Fox, of Mulberry community.

Twenty years ago Mr. Fox came to Clanton from Huntsville. He had pursued a very active business career ever since coming here, until he was forced to retire a few months ago on account of illness.

By his fine personality and his natural turn of mind and disposition, he was endowed with a marvelous faculty for making friends with people with whom he came into contact. He had not been in Clanton many years until he was known by almost everybody in the county.

During the past twenty years he has been identified with most all of the progressive community interests of Clanton and Chilton County. He acquired lots of property, dealt in real estate, developed subdivisions, sold property at auction, conducted a hardware and furniture business, and followed actively many business interests.

He was ever active and on the alert. He was gifted with the art of making money out of his business activities, and he also used his energy and abilities fearlessly for what he thought the best interests of the community. He will be greatly missed in Clanton, and there will not be another who can fill his place.

COUNTY OFFICIALS "UP IN THE AIR" LAST FRIDAY

Judge L. H. Reynolds and members of the Commissioners Court were really "up in the air" last Friday.

Mr. Bragham, a flier from Montgomery, came up and landed his plane at the Clanton airport. He was met by Dr. J. V. Gragg, who very promptly took a turn at piloting the ship. Although not authentically confirmed it is rumored that the purpose of Mr. Bragham's visit here was to give Dr. Gragg a demonstration of a new plane, which he may consider buying.

Anyway, after Dr. Gragg had tried the ship out, Judge Reynolds and Commissioners, Duke, Atchison, Cobb and Robinson, in turn, were carried to ride by Mr. Bragham.

Repeated landing and take-off by the pilot proved that the Clanton airport is an ideal arrangement for an airport.

Cobb Makes Plea To County Voters

Explains Transfer of Money From the General Fund to Fine and Forfeiture Fund.

Editor Union-Banner:

Please allow me to say a few words through your paper to the voters of the county; also to thank the ones who supported me in the first primary. I cannot express my appreciation for your support and encouragement. I feel proud to say that I have the support of many friends who supported me four years ago.

The next election is so near at hand and I haven't seen all the voters so I am taking this means of asking you for your support and to let you know some of the things I contend for. I have conducted my campaign fair and honest. I have not knocked my opponents to try to get votes. I have not given special people work to gain their support.

Since I have been commissioner there has been quite a few differences in the court. I have always tried to vote the way that I thought the majority of the people wanted me to vote. I have tried to serve the whole county and not just a few friends. My road work has been divided equally o ras near so as possible. I told the overseers to divide the work equally and to treat everybody the same. I believe in spending what money we can at home. I've always tried to buy lumber for bridges in my district, as near the job as possible.

In order to save the county a few dollars I have not hired a special bridge man, but the overseers and I have looked after this work. I believe in a road system which will scatter the money over the county, work roads to people's homes and not spend it all on some special road.

The court has been criticized for transfering $2,000 from the General Fund to the Fine and Forfeiture Fund. The facts in regard to the transfer are these: On September 30, 1930, $7,000 were transferred from the Fine and Forfeiture Fund to the General Fund. This transfer was made by the former commissioners court before I came into office. As you know, the depression began about this time and the people who were convicted for criminal violations were not able to pay their fines but the law allows them $2.50 per day if they work out these fines in the penitentiary. Since it was not convenient for a majority of the violators to pay, they were compelled to work out these fines. The state does not send any money to the county for convict hire, therefore, there has been nothing coming into this fund except a few who have paid fines in preference to working in the penitentiary. There were several hundred people who had appeared as witnesses for the state and who were not able to get cash on their certificates. We asked the Attorney General about transfering some money from the general fund to the fine and forfeiture fund to take care of the claims which had been filed against that fund. He ruled that we could transfer any amount up to and including the amount of $7,000 which had originally been transferred from the fine and forfeiture fund. We passed an order authorizing the treasurer to make the transfer, as we felt that the claims should be paid.

I have also been criticized for not getting a majority of votes in the first district. I am asking you to consider that Mr. Robinson, who is my tractor driver, was also a candidate. We would naturally have many of the same friends but they could vote for only one of us. I believe that had not Mr. Robinson been in the race I would have gotten the majority of the votes cast for him and this would have given me a plurality.

I assure you that if I am nominated and elected that I will give the very best service that I can, and I -ope you will see fit to give me the nomination, but should you see fit to nominate my opponent, I assure you that I will do all that I can to help elect him this fall. — Respectfully yours, J. E. Cobb.

TOM GULLEDGE FAVORS L. H. REYNOLDS FOR PROBATE JUDGE

Permit me to say a few words in favor of Judge Reynolds. I have been a resident of Chilton County for over thirty years and I have been voting for Judge Reynolds ever since I have been living in this county, and so far I have never had occasion to regret voting for Reynolds.

I honestly believe that he has made the best probate judge that Alabama has ever had.

I feel that each Republican voter ought to weigh well the facts in the case before casting his or her vote in the June primary.

If you voters will consider the record that Judge Reynolds has made during his term of office. I feel sure that you will join in with the majority of the Republican voters and nominate him for another term.

I am writing this letter of my own personal desire, and without he knowledge or consent of the judge.

I will thank you voters to consider the merits in the case and cast your vote for the welfare of the people of Chilton County in general and the Republican party in particular.— Very truly yours, Tom Gulledge, Mt. Creek, Ala.

Prof. J. W. Swindall, of Titus, prominent among the negro church workers for the past several decades, and for the past several years clerk of the Morning Star Association, was in Clanton Monday. He left an order with The Banner Print Shop for his minutes for the past year.

Nature Provides Only One
NITRATE FERTILIZER

CHILEAN Natural Nitrate is the only nitrogen that comes from the ground. It is the only natural nitrate—the only nitrate with Nature's blending of vital rare elements or "impurities" so essential to good crops.

Quick-acting—safe—dependable. Chilean Natural Nitrate is the perfect side-dresser, proved by over a century of use.

There are two kinds of Chilean—Champion Brand (granulated) and Old Style. Both are the genuine original soda—the natural material. You are perfectly safe with either one. But make sure you get what you want when ordering from your dealer. It's just as easy to get what you want instead of—something else. Simply tell him—"Champion Chilean" or "Old Style Chilean", and you'll be safe.

GAME AND FISH NEWS

Montgomery, Ala., June 5. — The Muscle Shoals Game and Fish Protectors, organized about a year ago at Florence, are engaged in an effort to persuade the Tennessee Valley Authority to set aside some sub-marginal lands in the Muscle Shoals district for game refuges.

The organization also is planning to build a rearing pond for fish shipped into that district for restocking purposes. It is especially interested in improving the fishing resources of the Tennessee Valley and each year renders valuable aid in fish rescue work.

The groundwork was laid at a meeting in Bay Minnette recently for a permanent organization of sportsmen in Baldwin county. A temporary organization of 40 members was set up to function until June 22 when final organization will be perfected.

Enforcement of game and fish laws and surveys for the location of game refuges and for restocking streams with fish are some of the objectives contemplated by leaders of the movement. Game Commissioner I. T. Quinn has offered the Baldwin sportsmen the full cooperation of his department in their efforts to protect wild life.

Sportsmen throughout the nation appreciate what the work of the American Game Association has meant to the wild life restoration movement.

Like every other organization, the association suffered during the depression, but since conditions have begun to improve it has set out to add more of the leading sportsmen-conservationists to its membership rolls.

Its 23 years have been devoted exclusively to the wild life problems of this country and it has a big program ahead. In rallying to its support, sportsmen may have the assurance they are backing a worthy enterprise.

A. M. Barley, managing director of Game Conservation Institute at Clinton, N. J., announces that he has room for 10 additional students in his 1934 class started this past spring.

The two-year course is open to men with high school education between the ages of 18 and 40. No charge is made for tuition, this expense being borne by the More Game Birds in America Foundation.

To those who satisfactorily complete all of the course, including class work, laboratory and practical work, a certificate will be given by Game Conservation Institute.

So The Voters May Know

When any man aspires to important public office it is only fair that matters pertaining to his personal integrity should be known to the voters whose support he seeks. Mere rumors or unsupported statements by political opponents should not be given much consideration, but when a solemn judicial decision is directed against a man by the highest court of the state, and the same is made a matter of public record, the voters are entitled to the facts.

In the case of Harry T. Hartwell, candidate for membership on the Alabama Public Service Commission, the foregoing applies with particular force. An editorial published several weeks ago in the Eufaula Tribune, and circulated throughout the state since, is republished for the information of the voters of Lauderdale county.

MORGAN CLEAN AND HONEST
(Eufaula Tribune)

The gall of this man Harry Hartwell of Mobile, who is campaigning for a place on the public service commission passeth understanding. For several years this same gent who misruled Mobile for a season has been seeking a coat of whitewash to cover his infamous record while with the Mobile Towing & Wrecking Company. A suit filed by the wrecking company, of which Hartwell was secretary and treasurer and also a director, reached the supreme court and here is what that body had to say about Hartwell:

"Hartwell's unauthorized appropriations of complainant's (Mobile Towing & Wrecking Company) money to his own uses were not loans to him by complainant in any sense of the word, but were in fact simple embezzlements."

Honest Alabamians do not want this type of man handling the duties of an important office.

The safe plan is to elect a man who has been tried, one who has fully measured up to expectations and against whose record there is no stain.

That man is Frank P. Morgan, who is seeking another term on the Public Service Commission.

The record of the case referred to above shows that the amount of money involved was approximately $58,000. The decision quoted was written by the late Judge Ormond Summerville, and concurred in by Chief Justice John C. Anderson, Associate Justice A. D. Sayre and Associate Justice Virgil Bouldin of the Supreme Court of Alabama.

Dear Sir:—

I hope you will give me a few lines in your paper to ask my friends to vote for Mr. J. Z. Mims for our Probate Judge. Mr. Mims is a Christian gentleman of the highest type, and is a friend to those in need. It is true that Mr. Mims does not brag nor boast about what he does, but he goes about it in a quiet unassuming way, letting his life and deeds tell the story. But just one instance I would like to relate:

The terrific storm which passed through our section of the county destroyed my home and all I had, killed my wife and two children; it destroyed my mother's home and all she had and killed my father, Rev. R. S. Chandler; the deed to my land was destroyed and had not been put on record. We, not having any money to pay a lawyer's fee nor court cost, mother went to an officer who was her friend and was advised by that officer that I could get a deed without going into court. With this information and by the advice and assistance of Mr. Mims, I got a deed to my land without going into court. I did as I was advised and the deed did not cost me anything. I call that service from an officer and it is service that is, and should be appreciated.

I have never gone to Mr. Mims's office for counsel and advice but what he readily took the time, and it seemed a pleasure to him, to talk and advise with me. I feel that Mr. Mims's loyalty to the Republican party and the faithfulness and efficiency with which he has handled his office deserves promotion. I believe that we could elect Mr. Mims in the general election.

Now, my friends, I believe it to the best interest of the people of Chilton County, and especially to the Republican party, to nominate Mr. Mims on June 12. Therefore, I ask that you rally to the support of Mr. Mims and we will be assured of a great victory this fall. Yours very truly, B. O. Chandler.

For Bice For Clerk

To the Voters of Chilton County:

Here are some things I want the voters of Chilton County to consider when you go to the polls to nominate a man for Circuit Clerk June 12.

Mr. Bice is young alert and about the age man we need for the Circuit Clerk's office. He has been highly recommended by the business men of Thorsby, a fact I hope you will give deep consideration. We need to nominate men for office who bring the right recommendation to the voters. When you select men to run your personal affairs, you select a man who can and will furnish a good recommendation by people whom he has served, and found competent for the job. Such a one he has furnished you with. Also I want to call attention to the fact he received 275 votes in his home Beat, 9. When a man's home beat stays by him 275 strong that man is worthy of your consideration.

Now, a word to the ex-service men. Now, boys, come on and pull for your buddy. He is in every way worthy of your help to put him over the top. Don't stop with your personal vote, but show his recommendation to your neighbors who do not take The Union-Banner, and ask their support of him on June 12th.

Readers, when you read this letter, note the contents carefully and I believe you will agree that Bice is the man to nominate for Circuit Clerk.

Yours truly,

J. W. SORRELLS.

Overseers In Third District Explain Road Work And County Claims

Editor Union-Banner:

Since our claims as overseers in the third district have not been paid by the Judge of Probate and since he has publicly criticized them, we wish to make the following statement:

There were a number of men in our district who were ablebodied, but not employed. Due to this non-employment they were given direct relief from the Federal government. Many of these men told us that they would be glad to contribute work on the county roads in our district so as to show their appreciation for the money they were receiving from the federal government, and improve the roads in their local community. We supervised that work as we would have the hired labor.

There was a total of 313½ days contributed during a period of six weeks, as is shown by the following people who have signed their names. These people received a total of $752.-40 from the federal government. We presume that if it was a good idea for the county to receive free labor from the federal government and have it supervised, as they did during the time of the R. F. C. and C. W. A. that it would be a good plan to accept volunteer labor from individuals and for the county to have it supervised, as this would help the local community roads. We can see no reason for criticism of this volunteer labor.

Following this letter are those who voluntarily worked the roads and their labor was supervised by us.—Sherman Motley, C. J. Mitchell, J. F. Giles and M. S. McGee.

State of Alabama, Chilton County

We, the undersigned people who received relief from the R. F. C. in April and May, 1934, wish to state that we worked voluntarily on the Chilton County roads the number of days opposite our names, and that we worked to show our appreciation of the $2.40 each day which we received from the said R. F. C. and that we worked to help improve the condition of the roads of our County. We further certify that Sherman Motley, C. J. Mitchell, J. F. Giles and M. S. McGee sreved as our overseers on the day that we contributed this labor on the public roads.

DANIELS IS MAN FOR OUR COUNTY SUPERINTENDENT

To the Republican Voters of Chilton County:

I want to write a few words to you regarding the candidacy of Joseph E. Daniel for the position of Superintendent of Education of Chilton County.

In all political campaigns, rumors are bound to get afoot. There are such rumors in this case, and it is for the purpose of rebuttal of these that this letter is written. The most of this is of my own knowledge. I know much more of Mr. Daniel than many people. I was in high school with him; I have worked alongside him; I know the obstacles that he has had to overcome, and I know what have been his aspirations since early high school days.

High Ideals

All through our high school work together, I have known Elly Daniel as a fellow student of high ideals and aspirations. He was always one of the hardest workers in the class. He is a fighter from the start. The harder the problems the better he liked them, and he always tackled them with courage to overcome them. He took part in all kinds of school activities, and carried out his work with honor to himself and his school and class. It always has been his intention to go up in the educational world. He had this in mind from the start, and allowed no obstacle to stop him in his preparation for higher service.

Preparedness

Consequently, when Elly's high school days were over, he went right ahead with college work, preparing himself for a position of trust in school work. College courses, especially fitting him for school superintendency came next. He has completed special courses in school superintendency in the University of Ala., Jacksonville Normal School, and in the University of Texas. He has prepared himself especially for the particular position for which he asks. If you needed the services of a surgeon, you would not be satisfied to have your work done by a country physician. You would employ a good surgeon, a man especially trained in surgery. Then why not elect a man especially trained for school superintendency to head your school system in Chilton County? He is not merely a made-over school teacher, asking for a higher job, although he has taught in the schools of our county for years. He knows the problems of the teacher, and has been trained in the best manner of their solution. For some time he has been principal of the Maplesville High School, and I have had people from that town tell me that he is by far the best that they have ever had there. "By their fruits you shall know them."

Party Affiliation

There is a rumor that Mr. Daniel is not a good Republican. I know this to be a bare untruth. During our high school days together, to the best of my memory, we were the only two in the class of Republican faith, and many were the hot debates and disputes we had with our class mates, on problems involving party principles. Elly was right in the thick of the fight back then, even before he could vote. He came of a family who are all Democrats, save himself, but that is more to his credit that he saw fit to think for himself and form his own party affiliation, bolting family tradition rather than go against the political beliefs which he thought to be right. Again I say he is due commendation from Republicans in this action. He has proved again that he seeks the right and then fights for it.

A Struggle

But the job of fitting himself for the higher places in the educational world has not been a bed of roses for Elly Daniel. He has not been able to attend school with someone at his back with money to pay his expenses. Not at all. Instead he has been forced to scratch for an education. To gain an education in college, he has been forced to teach a year to get the money with which to attend college a year, then another year of teaching followed by another year at college. That is the way he has had to fight for his higher education. But all these obstacles have only served to temper him for his greater battles in life. He recognizes no obstacle as a bar to perfection. The harder the battle, just that much harder is the fight he wages, and thought of giving up in the face of odds never crosses his mind.

I think that is the kind of man Chilton County needs at the head of the school system. He is a trained man, the best trained I believe of any in the county for this especial job. And he is a self-made man. What better example could be offered the youth of Chilton County. Politically he is clean; he has never been in politics before.

Consider Elly Daniel seriously in making up your mind for whom you will vote in this race. Consider your children and your schools—they deserve the best that can be had. Then consider Mr. Daniel's ability and special training. I believe he is the man for the job, and will sincerely appreciate your vote and influence next Tuesday. Yours very truly,—Paul C. Mims.

Pitts Passed State Law Providing Hospital Aid

To the Republican Voters of Chilton County:

On the eve of our second primary election, which is to be held next Tuesday, it is my sincere desire that our people go to the polls and cast their vote in taking a part in the selection of our candidates to be elected in the general election.

I want to assure the people of Chilton County, and particularly those whom I have been unable to see, that I will deeply appreciate their contionuous support on next Tuesday.

I would like to call your attention to one of the bills that was introduced by me, as your representative, which was passed by the legislature and approved by the Governor on November 9, 1932. I realized two or three years ago that we had in our county many people who were sick and diseased and needed hospital treatment, but for the lack of finances were unable to go to a hospital, which possibly would mean their recovery instead of loss of life. For this reason I introduced and passed the following law, which appears in the "General Acts of Alabama of 1932," on page 335, and which was necessary to enable our Commissioners Court to legally pay for such hospital treatment and care.

(No. 340) (H.636—Pitts.)

AN ACT

To amend Section 1201 of the Code of 1923.

Be it enacted by the Legislature of Alabama:

Section 1. That Section 1201 of the Code of 1923 be and the same is hereby amended so as to read as follows: Section 1201 (735) APPROPRIATION FOR SICK AND WOUNDED AUTHORIZED.—The Board of Revenue or court of County Commissioners of any County in this State may make an appropriation or appropriations out of their respective county treasury to aid in maintaining and taking care of sick and wounded persons who are unable to provide for themselves in any hospital maintained in their respective counties exclusively for the care of the sick and wounded.

Section 2. All laws and parts of laws in conflict with the provisions of this Act are hereby repealed.

Approved November 9, 1932.

Up until the passage of this law our Court of County Commissioners were unable to make appropriations in certain worthy causes of this character. In the last few months there have been twenty-six patients, either operated upon or treated in the local hospital and their bills have been authorized and paid by Chilton County. I am reliably informed that possibly several lives have been saved, by reason of this law, at a nominal expense to the county. I feel like this has been, not only a saving to the county from a financial standpoint, but possibly by the saving of some precious life as well.

The records of the Commissioners Court will show the facts pertaining to this matter and I feel like it would be a great hardship upon the taxpayers of this county to equip and maintain a hospital to take care of such cases, which I am reliably informed, would cost approximately fifty thousand dollars ($50,000.000) or more to start with.

I have in the past, through The Union-Banner, advised the voters as to those things which I would sponsor and work for should they see fit to nominate me as a candidate to succeed myself. Should I be nominated and re-elected as your next Representative, I will continue, as in the past, to represent my county and state to the best of my ability and be ever mindful of the interest of the people as a whole in Chilton County.

Respectfully yours,

PERCY M. PITTS.

CANE CREEK

Friday, June 8th, is cleaning up day at this place—cemetery, church and every thing around the church needs cleaning up. Everybody who is interested, please meet early with the necessary things to work with, and spend the day working.

We had an interesting Sunday school lesson last Sunday, some were absent though. We hope they will be present next Sunday. We missed Mr. J. M. (Tug) Willis from this place Sunday. He and Mrs. Willis are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Willis of Montgomery for a few days.

Our B. Y. P. U. is still holding out faithful. We hope to grow better each time. Just after Sunday school Delene Willis of the Advanced class carried her class on a picnic to the Thompson Mill. They had lunch and later enjoyed boat riding for a while. The rain came up and we came home hurriedly, hoping to finish our picnic soon.

Next Saturday and Sunday are our regular preaching days at this place. We hope to have a large crowd at each service. Bro. Robinson will have something good to tell us as always. He is an excellent preacher. You who haven't been coming, come out and hear him, you will enjoy it.

Sunday afternoon is regular singing evening, and let us all look forward to our annual singing the fourth Sunday in this month.

Candidate for Office of Judge of Probate of Chilton County Subject to the Action of the Republican Primary June 12

To the Republican Voters of Chilton County:

As the time comes close when the Republican voters of the county will choose their candidate for Probate Judge, I wish to take this means of making a closing statement and appeal to you.

I have purposed to see each voter personally. My court has hindered me considerably, so to you whom I may not get to see, please accept this as a personal appeal.

I desire to again thank my supporters in the first primary and ask that you renew your support, speak to more of your friends and neighbors for me and help me to win with a good majority on June 12th.

To you who saw fit to vote for my opponents on May the 1st, I have no ill will. You are my friends and we are fighting for a common cause, but for various reasons you voted for one of my opponents, which I am glad you had the privilege to do.

On June 12 you will make your choice between Mr. Reynolds and me, therefore, I am appealing to each of you to help me obtain the nomination. I will greatly appreciate your vote and influence, and will strive to give you no just cause for regretting having done so.

In another place in this paper I am giving you a short and concise statement of the principles that will govern my actions if elected Probate Judge of your County. I would like to discuss those principles here, but since I have discussed them with you personally in my canvass, I will not discuss them in detail; although, may I request that you carefully consider each one.

Recently I have been asked my views on persons between the ages of 18 and 45 years being required to work on the public roads of the county a number of days each year. I consider that a relic of the by-gone years, and that no citizen should be required to give of his time and labor to the maintenance of our public roads, but I do believe and shall advocate that the people in each community shall be given the privilege to do the labor necessary for the upkeep of their local roads and that they shall be paid for same.

Now, my fellow citizens, I have served nearly two terms as Clerk of the Circuit Court of our County. During this time I have tried my best to faithfully discharge the duties of that office and to render efficient and courteous service to the public, who have had occasion to have business in my office. I have also taken a keen interest in the general affairs of this county and the administration of its affairs. I believe that I have obtained information as to the needs of the county and its government that would enable me to serve you as probate judge.

I am now seeking this promotion and believe that I can give you efficient and satisfactory service in that office. If elected I pledge you that I will at all times give you my best and will strive to see that the county affairs and the spending of your money are conducted in such a manner as will bring the greatest value to the taxpayers with special favor to none, and I will always endeavor to work for the best interest of our county.

I shall not be dictated to by any one person or by any group of persons, but will at all times welcome the counsel and advice of any and all citizens of the county.

I have always been a loyal Republican. I have led our county ticket in the last two elections when I was a candidate and I believe that I can lead the ticket to victory next November.

I will appreciate your vote and support on June 12th.

Yours for the success of the party,

J. Z. MIMS.

Just a word about the SERVICE at the

MOLTON HOTEL

FIFTH AVENUE AND TWENTIETH STREET

THERE'S a pleasant, friendly atmosphere about the Hotel Molton—a delightful informality and unobtrusively efficient service that appeals to discriminating guests. While Molton service is punctilious, it is entirely lacking in that stiff formality one often finds in larger metropolitan hotels. LETTER FROM BESSEMER MAN FAVORS BEAN AND REYNOLDS

The Union-Banner is pleased to have a letter from our good friend, Rev. J. Robert Bean, of Bessemer, Ala. While Rev. Bean preached in our county he wrote considerably for The Union-Banner, and we are sure that our readers enjoyed his elaborations. Therefore, we will all be pleased to hear from him again. Here are a few excerpts from his letter:

"I have been watching the various races for nomination in your primary with much interest. Of course, no one can tell what the outcome will be in the runoff, but I feel that Hon. L. H. Reynolds for Judge of Probate and Prof. W. T. Bean for superintendent of education can't be beat

"Of course, I don't expect this to carry much weight, as it is from one of the 'black sheep', and your Man in the Moon would have the people think that those who are of a different party are so narrow minded that they can't see far enough beyond their nose to know who is and who is not a good man. I wish to ask that the Republicans of your county consider seriously the two men mentioned above on June 12th.

Rev. Bean, since leaving Clanton eight months ago, has been living with his son, Percy, at Bessemer, and he adds: "Our health is good; we are living and getting along very well. I am not working now—just making a garden. I am supplying for a brother pastor, Rev. Kitchens, at three of his churches."

Rev. Bean, sometimes known as Elder Blossom, agrees to write us another sermon for publication some time soon. We are sure that our readers will be glad to have the opportunity of reading another one, since we have published numbers of them heretofore. We hope to extend you this privilege in the near future.

Don't give up!

"I DO NOT want to give up ... but why do I tire so easily ... why can't I 'carry on' ... and how is it that I do not feel like myself?"

It may be that as the result of colds ... indoor or over work ... worry and the like ... the strength of your blood has been weakened—that is, the red-blood-cells and hemo-glo-bin reduced ... and Spring finds you with that "worn-out" and "let-down-feeling."

For such cases try that time-tested tonic S.S.S.—not just a so-called tonic, but a tonic specially designed to restore body strength by its action on the blood.

S.S.S. value has been proven by generations of use, as well as by modern scientific appraisal. Unless your case is exceptional, you should soon notice a pick-up in your appetite ... your color and skin should improve with increased strength and energy.

S.S.S. is sold by all drug stores ... in two sizes. The larger size is more economical. © The S.S.S. Co.

FAVORS A. J. DAVIS

To the Voters of Chilton County:

As the second primary is close at hand, it is time we had our ticket made out. I want to say just here that we have at this time one of the best men in the county to vote for and that is Mr. A. J. Davis. I have known him ever since 1908. He is fully competent to fill the commissioners office. I think the voters of the county will make a sad mistake if they don't elect him. So, come on one and all, and go to the polls on June the 12 and put him over by a big majority. —Yours for a better government, George B. Williams, Pletcher, Ala.

UNUSUAL FILM TO BE SHOWN AT THE WADESONIAN THEATRE

An unique film produced by the Wesson Oil people, illustrating the making of fresh mayonnaise, is to be shown the week of May the 11th, at the Wadesonian Theatre. It is creating unusual interest among the housewives — particularly those who want to make fresh mayonnaise instead of buying the bottled.

The ease and simplicity of making fresh mayonnaise at home with Wesson Oil, a fresh egg and a new simple and handy Mayonnaise Maker recently introduced in this trade territory by the Wesson Oil people is shown in detail in the film.

The recipe as demonstrated by the film is as follows:

One pint of Wesson Oil; 1 egg; 2 tablespoons of lemon juice or vinegar; I teaspoon each of mustard, salt and sugar and a dash of pepper.

Put all the ingredients except the Wesson Oil into the Mayonnaise Maker. Put on the basin top. Then while working the dasher with one hand, pour in the whole pint of Wesson Oil . . . just as fast as it will run through the basin top. You simply can not pour too fast. When the can is empty, six or more full strokes of the dasher and your mayonnaise is finished. It's as easy as that.

This recipe makes a generous pint of fresh mayonnaise. And the ease and simplicity of making it at home with the new Wesson Oil Mayonnaise Maker in just a few minutes, with no fuss or trouble and never a failure, is meeting with universal approval, especially of those "choosey" folks who like fresh mayonnaise.

JOHN BAKER, JR. FAVORS L. H. REYNOLDS FOR JUDGE

To the Republican voters of Chilton County:

I would like to say just a few words to the voters who are interested in the Republican party in our county about the Probate Judge's election next Tuesday. I do not very often write in the papers, but I feel that it is time now that the voters should seriously consider the best interest of our party and our county.

To those who may not know me, I am 72 years of age, and I am a nephew of Alf Baker, the person for whom Chilton County was first named, when it was called Baker County, and I believe I am correct when I say that my father, John Baker, was the first man who voted a Republican ticket in Chilton County, something over a half century ago, and since I began voting, I have never voted any ticket but the Republican ticket and I believe I have the party's interest and the county's interest as near to my heart as any man in the county.

In casting our vote, we Republicans should consider our county's interest and our party's interest above any candidate's interest, or any personal feelings that we may have. As to county affairs, as shown from the records, our county is right at the top of the counties in Alabama, and, of course, we want to keep our county at the top for our own good and that of our party.

Of course, I suppose it is known by every voter in the county that Judge Reynolds has given the best part of his life towards working and helping to put Chilton County at the top, and, of course, he is the best qualified man with his experience in office to keep our county in its good position. Furthermore, we are still in a hard depression, and with his experience in the relief work and the other county affairs, I believe it is a dangerous time to turn him loose. As for as our county is concerned, we know that he has fought the battles of the Republican party for over a quarter of a century and we know that the Democrats are going to make an extra hard fight to carry our county Democratic this fall.

I believe for our party's sake that we had better keep Judge Reynolds and if we are going to make a change, I do not believe that it is best to make a change in times like these, as this is a time when we need the best man and the most qualified man we have got to help us through this hard depression. It is no time to take a chance with our party or with our county, but we should get the most qualified man to give us a dollar return for a dollar spent, and let's not do anything that we would regret when it is too late.

Without any personal feelings for or against any candidate, but looking solely to the interest of our county and ourselves and our party, I appeal to you to cast your vote next Tuesday for Judge Reynolds for Probate Judge.—Yours truly, John Baker, Jr.

WILL VOTE FOR DAVIS

Editor Union-Banner:

I signed a paper for John Caton, stating that Perry Gore was a good man, but I did not endorse him for Commissioner. Perry Gore is a good man, but I told Mr. Davis I would vote for him, and I always try to do what I say. I did not understand what Mr. Caton said about it.—G. W. Burnett.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Pinkerson will occupy the Flem Higgins home recently vacated by Dr. Lawrence.

BOB JONES

COMMENTS ON HERE AND HEREAFTER.

The Bible was never intended to teach men science, bue the Bible is scientifically correct. Jesus said, "If I have told you earthly things and you don't believe them, how will you believe me if I tell you heavenly things?" If we can't believe what the Bible says about this world, how can we believe what it says about the next world?

We read in the Book of Job that God hung the earth on nothing and the north on empty space. Astronomers used to laugh at that expression in Job. "What did Job know about astronomy? He should have attended to his stores and let astronomy alone. There is no empty space in the north." That is the way men used to talk. But one day a man turned a telescope toward the north and he found a great vacuum. Job was right. There is an empty space in the north. Job was not trying to teach astronomy, but Job was scientifically correct.

The most accurate people I know are those who really know the Bible. The Bible contains more wisdom than all the books in all the libraries of the world. Don't be disturbed by the high sounding words of worldly wise men who know not God. How utterly ignorant some of our so-called scientific men are. How very little they really know and yet a lot of them think they are so wise. Remember, "The world by wisdom know not God."

ENDORSES J. P. BEAN FOR COMMISSIONER'S OFFICE

Please allow me space in your paper to say a few words to the voters in regard to Mr. J. P. Bean for Commissioner. I have known Mr. Bean all my life, and have found him to be a straight, upright man—one who believes in treating his fellowman right. I was a tenant on his farm for four years. During this time we never disagreed on anything. He was always ready and willing to help me in every way possible. I feel if elected he would do all he could for the people as he did during his first term in 1929 and 1930. I worked as grader man for Mr. Bean. We spent most of our time widening and making new roads.

Mr. Bean tried to give each one an equal part of work. He never had the privilege of keeping up good roads, but had all the worry and responsibility of making them. I urge every voter to go to the polls on June 12 and help us elect Mr. Bean back. Let him enjoy this privilege as well as help his fellow man, which I feel sure he would do. Hoping each one will consider this matter and do all you can for the first district. Your vote for Mr. Bean will be appreciated.—A voter, Grady L. Martin.

What is a liberal? We used to suppose a liberal was a person who believed in free speech, a free press, the sanctity of personal liberty, down with monopolies and such.

But we understand the brain trust regards all these things as trifling or even reactionary. The modern liberal is devoted to telling farmers and business men just how they must conduct their affairs, the price to be charged for pressing pants, and with deciding that professional baseball is a social waste and telling people they must go to lectures instead.

We are confused and upset at the bone in our head that prevents these new ideals of liberalism from penetrating to the brain.

One investigator reports that no new sin has been originated in 5,000 years, but it isn't as if our lawmakers hadn't tried.

"Frequent water drinking," says Gladys Glad, "prevents you from becoming stiff in the joints." Yes, but some joints don't serve water.

It is said that beet growers are having trouble getting labor in Colorado because so many people prefer living on unemployment relief to working in the beet fields. Well, it is more fun to get your exercise pitching horse shoes.

The Nazis are going to put in jail all business men in Germany who recklessly squander their profits. What we would like to know is: where do they get any profits?

Secretary of the Treasury Morganthau says that 3,300 federal sleuths will be turned loose against the bootleggers. But having survived the repeal of the 18th amendment, the bootleggers won't worry over a little thing like that.

Mayor LaGuardia has won a victory in his fight to get rid of the slot-machines in New York City. Henceforth the New Yorkers will have to do their gambling on the Stock Exchange.

The discussion of the NRA and the small business man seems to have degenerated into a contest between Crackdown Johnson and Mr. Darrow for the batting championship of America.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

(By Frank P. Litschert

This is commencement time in the affairs of the nation. All over the country young men and young women by the score are closing their school careers and preparing to step out into the world, to show the older folks how it ought to be done. Usually the commencement day orator is free with his advice to the ambitious young graduates. Most of the advice, of course, good, although a great deal of it will not be followed.

It may surprise the readers of this little article to know that the writer, if he were called on to give commencement day advice, would have as the cause of his special concern, not the patient plodding student who has worked his way slowly through his school life, often barely "getting by", but those few who, quicker to learn, have sailed along without apparent effort. The youngster who has been compelled to quit school, before graduating and go to work, and the other youngster who has had to work hard in school to make the grade and to graduate, do not need any special advice. They will get along in the world somehow, because they have found the meaning of hard work, whether it be mental or physical. The college graduate who really needs advice and support is the one who has sailed through his school life without any effort, apparently absorbing learning through some mysterious process unknown to the "common herd."

This "mental marvel" and we find them in every school, is the one who will probably need help after he gets out of school. He is often told by the commencement orators that when he graduates he will find the competition much stiffer in the outside world because he will have to go up against other graduates, just as bright as he is. But that will not be his principal handicap. He could hold his own with the other "mental marvels" because he is one of them. But the fellows who will give him real trouble are the mental plodders who have advanced by extended patient effort. They know how to fight and how to work. They can "take it" out in the world, very often where the so-called "brightest boy in school" cannot. He has not learned the value of hard work, because of the ease with which he has slid through school. If he is not careful, therefore, he is very liable to be treated with the uncomfortable sight of the plodders and workers going around him in the face for success.

If you will turn back your memory, for the moment, to the biographies of the great men of whom you have read, you will remember that very few of them were regarded as mental prodigies in their youth. Most of them were not at the head of the class, but half way down, or perhaps nearer the foot. They have because they have character, the strength and the perseverance to overcome obstacles, where the fellow who lacks such determination may have fallen by the wayside, even though possessing a nimbler wit. After all, ninety per cent of genius is hard work. There are many literary and scientific lights wasting their time wisecracking on the street corner, because they lacked those essential requirements for genius—mental and physical industry.

So our advice to the 1934 graduate is: if you have had to work hard to get a passing mark in your classes, don't worry. You will know how to work hard and how to overcome obstacles, when you get out in the world. But if you are one of those "fortunate youngsters" who has slid by on your wits and mental attainments, now is the time to begin praying for perservance and dogged determination. No matter how brilliant you are these elements, along with character, are necessary for real success. Just "bein the brightest boy in school" is not enough.

A Quarrel in the Family

Arthur Schronpenhauer, the philosophical exponent of pessimism, once sought to illustrate his theory that "all life is war" by the alleged strange conduct of the bull-dog ant of Australia. He said: "But the bull-dog ant of Australia affords us the most extraordinary example of this kind, for if it is cut in two, a battle begins between the head and the tail. The head seizes the tail with its teeth, and the tail defends itself bravely by stinging the head; the battle may last for half an hour until they die or are dragged away by other ants."

In view of the caustic report of the National Recovery Review Board, appointed by the President and headed by Clarence Darrow, which might be regarded as the tail of the NRA, in point of time at least, and in further view of the bitter and castigating reply of General Johnson, head of the NRA, the average citizen, confused by the mass of documentary evidence, charges and counter charges, may well begin to wonder whether or not the Blue Eagle is about to emulate the tactics of the Australian bull-ant before mentioned. Certainly these two official parts of the NRA are not adding any to the efficiency or health of the National Recovery Act itself. Mr. Darrow and his committee in their report charge that the codes of the NRA are nourishing monopoly rather than preventing it, and that if the present tendency continues the small business man will be crushed. Gen. Johnson comes back with the charge that the report is "superficial, intemperate and inaccurate," that it has not been written in good faith. Mr. Richberg, general counsel for the NRA, siding in with General Johnson, states that the Darrow report was written by a noted Socialist who advocates complete control of business.

It is true that the Darrow report rings in a socialistic tone and expresses the opinion that no system of control of business by the government can succeed until we have production for use instead of for profit. This is the old socialistic doctrine. But this opinion on socialism does not do away with the real issue. The president appointed the review board to ascertain whether the codes were operating to the benefit of big business at the expense of small business. That is the real question, and it cannot be thrust aside by a discussion as to whether we can succeed in our NRA program unless we go all the way toward socialism, and its proposal to do away with the profit system entirely. Either the codes are hurting the small business man or they are not. The Review Board says they are and the question cannot be shunted aside by calling somebody a "philosophical anarchist."

Critics of the NRA, when the New Deal was put into effect, were of the opinion that business in a great nation like America was too complicated to be run by the government, even with the assistance of the brain trust. Certainly it cannot be run successfully by an NRA administration which is divided within itself whose review board cannot agree with its administrative head. We beg leave again to call attention to Herr Schropenhauer's story of the Australian bull-ant.

A Puzzled Farmer

Word comes in quite frequently that many farmers are puzzled over various phases of the New Deal and don't know just what to make of it. The most common complaint is that it has raised the price of things the farmer has to buy more than he gets for what he has to sell. A correspondent of the Chicago Daily News, traveling over Indiana, quotes a Hoosier farmer on the subject as follows:

"I'm afraid we'll be worse off than we were when this all started. The AAA and NRA don't work out together. We are getting less money for what we sell and paying more for what we buy.

"For instance, last fall I started looking around for a car to replace the one I have driven for five years. A dealer offered to take my old car and $400 cash for a new one. I held off, thinking maybe I'd get a better bargain this spring.

"Well, I've still got the old car. The NRA stepped in and told that dealer how much he could give me for my old car, and he wants $560 difference now. I got a wheat reduction check for $94 this spring from the AAA, but the NRA wants $160 more from me for a new car."

It is not to be wondered that this farmer is puzzled a little over the new economy which is designed to pull him out of the slough of despond and back on the road to prosperity again. A great many people who claim to be real economists have been unable to figure it all out.

Federal Joke Expensive

The joke on the federal Department of Agriculture is that for years it has been spending many millions of dollars to eradicate the boll weevil when, had the pest been left alone to reduce the cotton crop and raise prices, it might have made the expenditure of $163,000,000 to recompose cotton growers for the plowing up of some of their cotton and the proposed tax on production of over 10,000,000 bales unnecessary.

Notwithstanding the plowing up of millions of acres of growing cotton last year the crop was 13,000,000 bales, on top of a carry over of 11,000,000 bales. Had the federal agriculturists saved their money and let the kindly boll weevil operate it might not only have saved the cotton growers the task of destroying a part of their growing crop but have brought production down to 10,000,000 bales.

This, however, is not the only joke that the department of agriculture has played on itself. It has spent millions in telling farmers how to increase their production of various crops and now it is paying them to reduce them—at the expense of consumers or taxpayers or both.

Some years ago there came a wail from Florida that the Mediterranean fruit fly was runining the citrus fruit crop. The federal bug experts responded with alarcity and Congress appropriated $7,000,000 to nip the pest at the start. Now hte Florida senators are appealing for an appropriation of $7,000,000 to recompose the fruit growers for the damage done to them, and one of the Florida senators has declared there might not have been any Mediterranean fruit fly in Florida at all.

But if the Department of Agriculture is frequently playing such jokes on itself, it may not be a joking matter for taxpayers.

"Brass rail" drinking has now been made legal in New York State and the old bar is back again. But according to the drinker's code you can put only one foot on the brass rail at a time.

Well, the things which have happened at Washington in the past year made the political platforms of 1932 read like ancient history.

MAN IN THE MOON

Looks Over All—Overlooks None

A Constructive Program

Col. Bibb Graves spoke at the courthouse last Saturday afternoon, and quite a few Chilton County people heard him. During his speech, the Colonel stated that the newspapers of Alabama have been waging a smoke screen batle, trying, as far as possible, to keep the minds of the voters away from the problems at hand and needing immediate attention, and directing them to the "wasteful" Graves administration four years ago. Now, I have followed The Montgomery Advertiser's campaign for Dixon pretty closely all this year, and, I am inclined to agree with Mr. Graves. I must admit, too, that I expected Graves to rake Dixon over the coals, judging by the reports The Advertiser has been giving of Graves' speeches. But this expected back-biting talk was especially conspicuous by its absence. Instead, he placed perfectly timed bombs under each plank of the Dixon platform and exploded this platform to a nicety. Making sure to leave personalities out of his talk, (which "clicked" with his hearers,) Col. Graves merely took up the Dixon platform, plank by plank, and compared it with his own, in every instance. He showed perfectly Mr. Dixon's lack of promise of any immediate relief on any of our important state questions, and then showed his own policies, together with a sensible, easily understood program and workable ideas of how he intends to bring about this relief. He offered a sensible tax program, which will not include a sales tax, (and that's something to be thankful for), but will include a corporation tax, thereby "hitching up the big mules to pull the load," to use the exact words of Mr. Graves. He went further to explode the "short ballot" theory, in that the officers for the six places Mr. Dixon wants to make appointive have already been selected for the next four years. Besides that, Mr. Graves says he wants Alabama voters to elect their officers. That is their inalienable right, and he wants them to keep that right. Mr. Graves is very optimistic, too. In closing, he said: "I'm in this old game until the last whistle. I have the old ball tucked under my arm, I'm 35,000 votes ahead, I see nothing between me and the goal line, and, believe me, they will have one great time of it trying to catch me." Personally, I don't see that either of these candidates are so hot, but I believe Col. Graves has the best platform. The question is: Can he carry it out? However, if Col Graves is elected, and goes about the work of effecting the measures in the way he laid out, I see nothing to keep him from carrying it out. Col. Graves promises a fair and just tax schedule, exemption from tax of all homesteads up to $2,000, full school terms, an equitable and fair sliding schedule for automobile tags, and other like measures. Just as a wild prediction, I would guess that Graves will carry Chilton by about two to one.

We're Lucky

Yes, sir, for once, our people here in America are lucky. It's all about this radio business. Of course we have to listen to a lot of bunk of one kind and another in order to get a little music and the like, but just listen to the plight of the Europeans. Over there across the pond they have about forty-'leven countries all crowded up against each other, about like sardines. All these years they have had hard enough time trying to keep each other on the right side of the line fence, and it has caused all the wars. But now the radio has multiplied their worries. For instance Austria and Holland and a few of the other countries over there, whose people all speak about the same language, do not like Mr. Hitler. He keeps all these officials in hot water with their people. Of course they will not allow him nor his henchmen in their countries to talk with their people, so Mr. Hitler just "goes on the air" and tells them all he wants to tell them. This is just one instance, and there are several more like it. It has Europe just about like a powder barrel, ready to be touched off. Here in America, we are so far away that our people can't get all this through their sets, and if they could, not one out of ten could understand the language, unless it be from England. And then, thank goodness, the English are not so liable to try to start something against us. There is nothing the European governments can do about it but prohibit their people listening to these talks, and then they can't enforce that. But Europeans wouldn't be happy if they couldn't have a nice new war every few years, judging from history, anyway. So, if nothing else, maybe this new situation will make for bigger and better and longer wars. Maybe that will suit hem, but not us. They're welcome to their situation, and the pleasure is all ours. We're lucky.

Crossing

I suppose we might liken the operation of our country, and the business of getting back to prosperity, to an automobile on its way to another city on a road which crosses a railroad. There are two back seat drivers, and another passenger who says nothing. One of these "back seat drivers" thinks we are traveling too slow and wants the rear driver to step on the gas. The other thinks we are trying to go too fast and that we may get hit at the crossing, or burn a bearing, or something. The silent passenger merely sits and hopes we get there. He doesn't care whether we go fast or slow, just so the race with a train at the crossing is not a tie; in that case he imagines somebody might get hurt. Now, here in this country, some people think the national officials are going too slow—are not spending fast enough to bring back prosperity—they want somebody to step on the gas. Others think we are trying to go too fast—that we will burn up the country's money supply and credit. They are afraid, too, that we may have a collision at the crossing, in the way of national riot and rebellion, and then they know everybody will be hurt. They want the brakes applied. They had rather get back to prosperity late than never. The third class merely sits and hopes, and says nothing. They care not if we get there early or late, just so we get there, and they don't seem to have interest enough in the whole affair to offer their suggestions as to the best methods, and have no energy to expend in helping the cause.

Liberty Hedgers

For the past few years the farmers of the Southern states have been receiving quite a little money from the sale of old-field loblolly pine for the making of paper. A few mills have been built here in the South to manufacture this paper. Not long ago a convention of Southern newspaper representatives drew up a tentative plan to aid in this paper manufacture. But now, the "brain trust" has entered into the matter and have turned thumbs down on the program. They say it must not be done, and the reason they give shows to a nicety just how un-American this brain trust really is. Here is a direct quotation from their "ultimatum" on the subject: "The manufacture of newspaper stock must not be allowed in the United States, because this would cut down the imports from other countries. Nothing must be done to lessen our imports. We must buy all we can from our neighbors of the world." I ask, in the name of all that is patriotically American, does this favor the Americans or the foreigners? In effect, they tell us that we must not favor Americans, when it will mean buying less from foreign countries. Just at this time, every nation on the face of the earth is doing its best to buy as little as possible from America, and yet our precious brain trust tells us that we must take this slap in the face as a love pat, and sacrifice the interests of our own people in order to help other countries. What a policy! And yet this merely shows another instance where the brain trust, a so-called American body, is doing everything in its power to hamper America and her people to help other nations. I submit that this is conclusive proof that the "brain trust" is nothing but a group of crack-pot theorists and traitors, whose every act has been one of treason to the country they are supposed to represent, and a stench in the nostrils of every liberty loving American.

Swallowing the Frog

Have you ever watched a snake swallow a frog? I have seen a snake swallow a frog twice as big as his own head. It's a pretty big job, but the snake takes it by degrees, and after an hour or so, the old frog is swallowed. First he just catches the toes. The old frog may squeal a lot but it does him no good. After a little while, the snake gives a little twist and the frog goes down a little. The snake gives another twist, and then another and another, and each time the frog goes down further. After a while, with one big twist the snake takes Mr. Frog all the way in, and he is a goner. Have you ever stopped to think how this illustration lines up with the way the AAA is working on farmers? Last year, representatives of the AAA were sent out to ASK you to sign up and plow up cotton. They took you by the toes, then. This year they have told you that you MUST sign up, or else you would get no bonus on cotton you borrowed money from the government on. They took you in up to the hips then. Just another twist or two and they will be telling you when you can sell your cotton and who to sell it to, and from whom you can buy your fertilizer, and then you'll be swallowed. They're telling you this year just how many pounds you can have ginned, and if you have any more ginned you'll pay all it is worth as a penalty. The same thing is being done to other farmers in other parts of the country. The corn, wheat, and hog raisers of this country are being told how much they can raise. The government is also telling coal mine operators what they must pay workers, what they can sell their products for, and how much they can mine. Automobile dealers are told how much they can allow on trade-ins. The old frog is just about swallowed, and if he doesn't kick out and tear the snake's lip, it won't be long, now. "Every day I hear people say: "This country is going to get in a hell of a fix"—if it isn't in a hell of a fix now, then hell must surely be something bad.—Man in the Moon.

What Men Have Fought For

For centuries men have fought for liberty. Many have bled and died for it. Human progress has been a long struggle for it and a series of its triumps.

In this country it is embodied in the Constitution and the Bill or Rights—a government of the people by the people for the people in theory and to a greater extent in fact in this country than in any other. Only limited powers are delegated to the federal government and those not delegated are reserved to the states and the people.

None is so rash as to hold that liberty is not worth the struggle to gain it. Only recently in our own country has it been seriously proposed to yield it for government control.

There is little reason to believe that in this country people would fight to lose the liberty as they have fought to gain it. It is difficult to imagine that men would fight, bleed and die for the theories of a brain trust.

The Man on the Corner

Some Sights He Saw— and Some He Saw Not

"Daddy Fox" has passed beyond the vale. The curtain fell upon the drama of his earthly life last Sunday afternoon. Peace to his ashes. He lived and moved among us for twenty years, and he made himself a force for good to the community. His life was cheerful, and he scattered laughs and sunshine everywhere he went. Clanton has lost one of her best citizens.

Charley Reynolds, of Birmingham, is in Clanton this week. I notice he is smoking a Charley Dawes pipe. "That means something to the political situation," a friend remarked to me. I don't know whether he referred to the pipe or to Charley's presence here. However, there is nothing, however inconsequential, that is not given political meaning these warm days.

The Chilton County Board of Review, composed of the County Commissioners, has been in session this week, hearing appeals for reduction of tax valuations. I hear it said a number of reductions were granted.

County Farm Agent Fant, and Home Agent, Miss Pardue, are turning over in their minds the subject of a county-wide picnic again this year. The place to have it is the moot question now. Popwell Woods is gone. The axe has laid waste the most beautiful picnic spot near here. Suggestion has been made of the Bruce Grove north of Clanton. I hope we have the picnic.

Thinking of the county picnic, the picture of Cohen Stapp stole across the panel. About ten minutes later a horn honked at me, and there was none other than Cohen himself. When we have our picnic, I want to nominate Stapp to make a speech. And I want to whisper him the suggestion that he make the same speech he made at the Coosa County picnic last year. He did better than Lister Hill. Honest, he did, and anybody will admit that is going some for speech-making.

Uncle Jake Plier is now busy marketing peaches. He has some fine fruit on the streets every day now. Mr. Plier has been one of our most successful fruit growers for many years.

This Thursday afternoon summer holidays begin today, and will continue through June, July and August. All places of business in Clanton, except drug stores and barber shops will be closed.

Baseball game is announced for this afternoon at High School Park. Clanton will play Prattville. Game starts at 3:30 o'clock. Let us hope the mnagement of our team will be able to schedule a game for every Thursday afternoon holiday. No use to go fishing. So bring on the next best amusement, baseball.

Automobile prices took a decided drop last Saturday. Dick Hayes is shouting the Chevrolet recession and George Polk echoes with "me too" for Plymouth. They are telling all about it in their ads this week.

Presley Cochran and Mell Martin went to Elba last Friday to attend the funeral of Virgil Elmore's mother. Presley assisted Ernest Childs in the conduct of the funeral and Mell acted as a pallbearer. All the friends of Mr. Elmore extend their sympathy to him in the loss of his mother.

Mr. Elmore tells me the interesting fact that B. Guy Smith, formerly a lawyer in Clanton, is now pastor of the Methodist Church at Elba. B. Guy established a scrapping good record as a lawyer here.

Mr. C. Fenn Jones is being mentioned by many as a prospective candidate for Mayor of Clanton. He is the man for the place, and I shall join the large number of other citizens in support of him.

Dave Norris, of Mt. Creek and Montgomery, mostly Montgomery these days, was a visitor to Clanton Wednesday. Mr. Norris has been in Montgomery several years, engaged in the coal business. He reports he is getting on very satisfactorily.

The city council met Tuesday night in regular session. Some important matters were passed over without disposition on account of the absence of Mayor Smith, who was detained by business in Montgomery.

CROP CONTROL AND DROUTH

The agricultural division of the Brain Trust is still in competition with Mother Nature in the crop reduction race. According to dispatches from Washington, the AAA has spent nearly fifty-three millions in crop reduction in those sections of the country where drought is withering the crops. In other words, this great sum has been expended so far this year in the fifteen drouth states to induce the farmers to cut their wheat crop.

But the end is not yet. Although the drouth is continuing and estimates of this year's wheat crop are being reduced, an additional $21,000,000 is being rushed into the drouth territory to pay farmers who have lived up to their contract in reducing wheat acreage. At the same time, it is added, checks are being rushed to farmers in the corn belt who agreed to reduce their corn production. A big portion of such corn which has been planted in the drouth territory now bids fair to shrivel in the dust.

There have been some rains in portions of the winter wheat belt, although the crop, it is said, will be much smaller than the May 1 estimate of the government indicated. The critical situation now, however, is in the spring wheat states where the wheat was only recently sowed. The drouth there is continuing and the damage from lack of rain is being increased by dust storms. In this area, according to a Washington dispatch to the Chicago Tribune, the AAA is spending over $18,000,000 in a fifteen per cent acreage reduction campaign.

There has been no change in the plan because of the drouth and the farm experts at Washington do not seem to be perturbed by any fear that there may be an actual crop shortage. The money poured out will, of course, be of benefit to the farmers who are receiving it, although Dame Nature has obviated the necessity of any artificial reduction of acreage this year. All of which goes to show that when it comes to crop regulation, old Mother Nature beats any Brain Trust that was ever organized.

Usually the fellow who says he doesn't care anything about money is one who hasn't had to do without it.

Final Campaign Statement of

L. H. REYNOLDS

Republican Candidate for Probate Judge of Chilton County

In the Primary of June 12, 1934

To the Republican voters of Chilton County:

Next Tuesday, June 12, is the date of the second primary, and I would like to make my appeal to the Republican voters for your vote on this date. When I announced for judge of probate last January, I felt that the people knew my record while in office and I did not trouble the voters by making a personal appeal to them, but confined my campaign to public speakings. In the first primary I received 1,149 votes, being a majority of 205 votes over Mr. Mims, the next highest opponent. I felt then that a majority of the voters having voluntarily, and without any undue pressure, voted for me, it was my duty to see as many of the voters personally as I could in the limited time, and with the duties of the office upon me. At this time I want to express my appreciation to those who voted for me, and also for the splendid spirit and interest that my supporters have taken in my behalf.

Late at night before the first primary several cars were sent over the county to strew untrue charges against Mr. Dennis and myself, and I want to now warn the voters not to be misled by any such campaign methods and charges that a candidate may not have a chance to answer. The Republican party has always stood for openness and fairness and I am sure that the voters of the county will resent such tactics.

I have one plank in my platform, and that is, "the greatest service to the people." I believe the record I have made in this office will prove that I have always had the people's interest first. When I went in office in 1917, Chilton County was at the bottom among the other counties of the state. On April 1st, 1934, as shown by a report in the Birmingham News, Chilton County, out of a list of fifty counties in Alabama, stood second to the top. I am glad to say that our county is considered one of the best in the state and I am sure that all Republicans are proud of this fact.

I want to remark at this point that in order to keep this county Republican we must maintain its high standard and we must keep our party one of honesty and a party that is accomplishing something for the people. I have always stood for the strictest economy in all of the financial affairs of the county, because the more economically the affairs of the county can be operated, the greater the saving to the taxpayers. The county's total indebtedness is $81,000 and if the people honor me with this office for the next six years, it shall be my determination to pay up this debt entirely and for my last term of office to leave the county not only second to the top, but at the very top of all caunties of Alabama. If I can help in making Chilton County, a Republican county, stand above all the Democratic counties of Alabama, I feel that my life as a Republican and my service to the people of the county will not have been in vain.

The only charge, so far that has come to me, against nominating me again is that I have had the office too long. I submit to the voters in answer to this the fact that the people have honored me with this office and that I have remained in office as proof that I have conducted the affairs of he office properly and in a manner satisfactory to the voters.

I submit to the voters that I have not only performed my official duties, but that I have strived in every way possible to help and serve the people of the county. Whenever our people have been stricken with storms and depressions or other adversities of any kind, the records will show that I have given of my time and money to relieve suffering and distress. This county has received $284,000.00 of relief money to furnish employment and relief to the people of the county and practically one-half of my time in the past year has been given to this cause.

A party will exist just as long as its officials, whom the party elect, can be of honest service to the people, and whenever any official ceases to be of honest service to the people, then we might expect to vote this official out of office. We Republicans had better meet the issues and fight it out in our primary and do the right thing here, than to fight this issue out with the Democrats next November, because a loss then to the Democrats will be a great blow to our party. One of the county commissioners, Mr. J. C. Atchison, particularly during this campaign, has criticized me severely for holding up some of his and his overseers' claims. Reports have come to me that he spent a great deal of his time and that of his overseers in campaigning against me.

I have been reliably informed that he stated if he could elect his probate judge, he would get his claims passed. In defense of myself I felt it was my privilege to publish his and his overseers claims for which I have recently failed to write warrants. His claim and those of his overseers were for $302 and $25 for labor. No answer was made to this in last week's issue of the Union-Banner. My information is that his defense for this is that he was working RFC people. I am sorry that no public explanation has been made of this. In fairness to the voters of the county, this should have appeared in last week's issue of the Union-Banner. When a matter like this is brought to light through the press, if the parties responsible want the truth known, they should be willing to publicly make it known and not do it in a secret and udermining way.

One of the overseers, Mr. Frank Giles, brought to my office the following list of RFC people, which he said had worked on the public roads in Beat 15, the list as follows:

"Maplesville, Alabama. We, the undersigned men did work on road for Frank Giles willingly. Days 2, W. W. Headley; days 2, Ernest Sansom; days 2, W. G. Deason; days 1, Dewey Deason; days 2, Grady Lenoir; days 2, W. F. Anderson; days 1½, J. D. Williams; days, 1½ T. R. Scott; days 1, Jesse Headley; days 2½, Clay Hayes; days 2½, Joe Fisher; days 3, C. C. Headley; days 2½, O. Y. Sims; days ½, J. R. Scott; days 1, H. L. Traywick; days 1, M. M. Ratliff; days 1, James T. Deason; days 1½, Johnminor; days 1½K. G. Minor; days 1½S. S. Sansom; days 2, G. C. Culp; days 1½, Fonza Smith."

If these men worked on the public roads, no information has been furnished to me or the Commissioners Court of the day, month or year that these men were worked. I might say that I asked Mr. Giles for this specific information and he said he did not know the day nor the month that the men worked for him on the public roads. It will be observed that the statement above furnishes no information whatever of the date that these parties are supposed to have worked. I am informed by some citizens from the western part of the county that Mr. Atchison's overseers are getting up statements from men supposed to have worked under these overseers on the public road, but that the statement does not show the day, month or year that these men worked.

I am informed that the men, whose names Mr. Giles filed with me, worked for the RFC last fall, but have not worked any this year. The RFC men Mr. Giles claimed to have worked were not subject to work since November, 1933, and Mr. Giles in the claim filed and published by me in the Union-Banner claims to have worked the men from April 3rd to May 10, 1934. The law makes the judge of probate responsible for all illegal claims paid and I want to make this promise to the people that if I am elected that so far as I know, I will write no warrants for any claims unless it is my opinion that the same is legal. If I have refused to write warrants passed by the Court of County Commissioners which I should write, the person who has the claim, may in an inexpensive and speedy way mandamus me to write his claim. I have from time to time invited this procedure and would be glad that these matters would be settled in the courts.

I also mentioned in the Union-Banner two weeks ago the way the gasoline of the county was handled, but no defense of this was made in last week's issue of the Union-Banner. I understand some handbills were handed out by Mr. W. H. Gillespie, Dick Heath and some others in and around the courthouse, which statements were unsigned and which is strictly in violation of the law, and these hand bills porport to show that more gasoline was used in the year 1932 than the year 1933. I have had the gasoline records carefully rechecked in the office of the judge of probate, which records shows in the year 1932, the county used 64,806 gallons of gasoline and from the first of March, 1933 to May 19, 1934, the county bought 121,357 gallons of gasoline. The tickets filed in this office shows the amount of gasoline delivered to different road machines to be only 63,901 gallons, leaving a shortage and unaccounted for 57,456 gallons of gasoline. There is no record so far as I am able to find as to what was done with this gasoline. I invite every voter in the county to call around to my office if they so desire, and see these records, or any other record that they might care to see in the office of the judge of probate.

I have never believed in a secret campaign and any candidate or person going to the voters secretly and privately making charges against a candidate is to be condemned. All charges worthy of notice should be brought out publicly in order that the people might know the truth and the person accused have the right to answer his accuser. It has come to my notice that Sheriff W. H. Gillespie has been going throughout the length and breadth of this county insinuating things against me. Week before last I invited him to come out in the open and state his charges publicly, if any he had, in order that I might have the chance to answer them, but Mr. Gillespie to this day has failed to do this. I am a Republican official, just as Mr. Gillespie, and I may say in passing that I voted for him for Sheriff, but under his own statement he did not vote for me when I was nominated by the Republican party in 1928. I am sure that the greater majority of our voters do not endorse and condone the methods of Mr. Gillespie in this campaign.

As stated above, if our party is to be successful in Nov., we must fight out our differences in the primary and nominate our best and strongest candidates and present a solid front against the Democrats in November. If we cannot ourselves expose graft and dishonesty we may rest assured that the Democrats in the campaign this fall will bring this issue to the front. If we ourselves stamp this out in the primary on June 12th, we will be in a much stronger position in our fight this fall. I have never endorsed graft or corruption in public office, let it be Republican or Democrat, and neither do I expect to in the future and I will expose it if I am able, wherever it may arise. It is a time for the voters to use serious consideration, both for your political future and also for the financial future of Chilton County, and when you have done this I shall be satisfied. It is no secret that we are going to have one of the hardest battles against the Democrats this fall that Chilton County has ever had and we must prepare ourselves now for this fight. I am not asking the Republicans of Chilton County to make me judge of probate solely that I may draw the salary attached to the office, and any official who has no higher ambition when he seeks an office than to draw the salary or to benefit himself personally, will make you a very poor official. It is not a question of whether the office will help the candidate, but it is a question of whether the candidate can best serve the people and the county.

Before I announced many people requested me to announce because they stated that under the trying times that my experience in office and my connection with the relief work was needed at this time and I announced with the view and purpose of helping and aiding the people and county wherever I might. I feel that with the experience I have had in the county's affairs and in public life I can be of benefit to the people in the future. I have had many experiences also in political battles and especially battles against the Democrats of Chilton County and with my official record clear, I feel I can present for you, as your candidate for judge of probate, a solid front against your enemies next November.

Yours for the success of the party.—L. H. Reynolds.

J. N. SCOTT ENDORSES J. Z. MIMS

Editor Union-Banner:

I have not had anything to say through your good old paper during this campaign, but feel like I ought to say something before the close. I want to say all of our candidates are good men; but I am especially endorsing Mr. J. Z. Mims for Probate Judge, and Mr. J. E. Daniel for Superintendent of Education. The reason I endorse these two is because their nomination will mean victory in November.

I have nothing against Brother Bean, but give us a new man that is qualified and is young. Mr. Daniel is up-to-date in teaching, and I think is worthy of our consideration.

I am not going to criticize anyone, but leave the matter in the hands of the great judge who is over and above all, and will deal out justice to all. I endorse Mr. Mims for Probate Judge because I think he is deserving. He has been true to his party, and his record is clean, and this is his first time to offer for judge.

Let us think well on June 12. Yours for unity and success of the Republican party. — J. N. Scott, Jemison, Ala.

The Story of the Bible Told in Pictures

Cast Out of Paradise.—When Adam and Eve, disregarding God's commands, had eaten of the fruit of the tree of knowledge their eyes were opened, and they knew that they were naked. When they heard the voice of the Lord God they hid from his sight. And when God questioned them Adam told how Eve had given him the fruit, and Eve in turn blamed the serpent who had beguiled her. God cursed the serpent, condemning it to travel on its belly all the days of its life. He cast man and woman out of the Garden of Eden, condemning the man to the tilling of the ground whence he came and the woman to the bearing of children. I. P. Kennedy On County Business

Editor Union-Banner:

Since you carried an article in a recent issue of your paper written by Judge Reynolds in which he mentioned the commissioners court employing a clerk, some claims passed by the commissioners court that he could not legally write a warrant for and his desire to always save the taxpayers money. I wish to make some statements to the people of Chilton County through your paper.

I was employed by the Commissioners Court as clerk. Their authority for doing so was Gen. Acts 1927, page 391 and also numerous opinions by the attorney general's office and none of the opinions have been changed. Mrs. Arant was employed as clerk prior to me under and by the same authority.

Judge Reynolds refused to issue me warrants for my claims, claiming he was without authority to issue a warrant for them. He did not issue me a warrant on the turned down claims until I quit the job. Then for some reason he could pay them. Why could he pay them then? The former clerk drew money for her work. Does it make any difference who draws the money as to whether it is legal and a saving of the taxpayers money?

The former clerk drew money and I presume did work such as recording commissioners court minutes and other office work which the probate judge was already being paid for. Is paying for anything twice a saving of the taxpayers money?

I wish to commend Mr. J. N. Dennis for being open and letting the people know where he stands.—Thanks, Irving P. Kennedy.

J. M. Willis On Ballot Sacredness

To the Ladies and Gentlemen of Chilton County:

As I hardly ever have anything to say to the public through the papers, I would kindly ask the editor of the paper for permission to say a few words. Our primary of May the first is passed and the successful candidates of that election will soon have their names presented to the voters to select our ticket for this fall.

Permit me to say a few words about the sacredness of the ballot and just what the ballot has meant and will mean to this county. The ballot is something more than a mere strip of paper with a list of names. There are certain principles in each man whose name appears on the ballot.

When we make a cross mark in front of the candidate's name, that means or should mean that we agree with the principles he advocates. Evrey legal voter should seriously consider the principles of each candidate for he in turn will or should cast a vote for the principles he advocates.

Another important question to consider about any candidate is, whether he is sincere in the principles he's advocating or whether he is merely trying to get votes. We find in the political field numbers of people using their influence for certain candidates of which I have no criticism to make, so long as they appeal to the voter's reason, but when men go out with marked ballots and appeal to the voters with money with his and to their prejudice in order to elect certain men to office, I feel that the voters should resent their action.

Let me insist that the voters analyze this type of politician and see if they are not working to some selfish end. See if they are not already on the county payroll, or in some way seeking special favors.

The type of citizen that earnestly contends for the man whom he thinks will render the best services is to be appreciated but the type that works under cover, makes false accusations and puts out propaganda the night or day before the election is the type to be dreaded, and should be completely ignored.

A government for the people, of the people and by the people is set up and maintained through or by the voting system. The people cast their vote for certain men to be officials. The officials, or most of them, in turn, attend to the peoples' business; also through the voting system. When we vote for a probate judge or commissioner, it should be for men who will cast their vote to the best interest of all the people.

The Superintendent and members of the Board of Education should be well considered, for they are responsible for the education of our youth and have at their disposition large sums of the peoples' money.

More stress and thought should be given to the selection of our law makers, for it is up to them to say what we shall and shall not do or how much tax we shall pay and how much freedom we may have.

There is more than one qualification an official should carry, but the main one, is, being willing to do that which is right and to the best interest of all and not to a favored few.

This country has come to where it is through the voting system, and if we ever expect to reach the high standards of living and justice to all, we must have honest officials to cast honest votes.

When we go to the polls to elect men to do business for us let us weigh them in the balances of justice and then cast our vote accordingly. — Yours for just and honest voting everywhere.—J. M. Willis.

Dennis For Mims For Probate Judge

Editor Union-Banner:

Please allow me to say that I do not believe that the voters of our party need anyone to tell them how to vote and I would not try to influence any voter to vote against their judgment, but in response to numerous inquiries, I beg to say that it is my judgment that it is to the best interest of our party to nominate Mr. J. Z. Mims to lead the Republican party to success in November.

Yours truly,

J. N. DENNIS.

NEW DEAL FAILS TO WIN THE FAVOR OF MINISTERS

Ten direct attacks were aimed at the New Deal by young Southern ministers at a three-day conference last week at Monteagle, Tenn., after certain phases of the program had met with approval of the religious group.

"We approve of the objectives of the New Deal, in so far as they seek to abolish poverty, end child labor, recognize the right of the workers to bargain collectively, move in the direction of planned economy and provide a more equitable distribution of wealth," said the findings of the conference.

The Tennessee Valley Authority was listed as an example of planned economy.

"We also consider that the influence of the New Deal in creating a mental background destructive of the previous individualism is a gain," said the report.

However, the young ministers rapped at the following 10 phases of the New Deal:

1. The new Deal is not adequately dealing with the problem of unemployment.
2. It does not provide sufficient relief to the unemployed.
3. Its codes do not give a living wage.
4. The present codes are only slightly enforced.
5. Under the New Deal no thoroughgoing economic planning is possible.
6. It has failed to give the workers adequate protection in bargaining.
7. It discriminates unjustifiably in the wages of northern and southern workers.
8. The operation of the Agricultural Adjustment Association is generally unsound and has led to the dispossession of share croppers in the South.
9. It attempts to deal with poverty in the midst of plenty by destroying plenty.
10. Economic imperialism continues, leading inevitably to war.

"We call upon church groups" said the report of the conference, to make the principle of brotherhood concrete in the relationship between races, especially in the economic area."

The group reported it had "not agreed as to the means by which the new society which we desire is to be achieved."

"We do not believe that absolute non-resistance nor complete reliance on force can attain the end we seek," they declared.

Stewart Meacham, assistant minister of the Independent Presbyterian church, and Graham Lacy, of the Second Presbyterian church, were members of the executive committee from Birmingham who aided in preparing the findings of the conference.

Discussions were led by Prof. Reinhold Niebuhr and Rev. Charles Webber, of the Union Theological Seminary, New York, and Howard Kester, secretary of the committee on Economic and Racial Justice, Nashville.

ELMORE ANGLERS IN SEA BASS CONTEST

Elmore county fishermen are out to establish a new record for rockfish, or striped sea bass, taken from the Coosa river. On April 27 Bob Greer, of Wetumpka, hooked a couple of these big fellows just east of the Bibb Graves bridge, one weighing 29 pounds and the other 23 pounds.

Then along came Bud Fent, of Holtville, on May 7, and hauled one out on a trot line, just below Lock 18, that weighed 33 pounds. Since the stories of these catches have spread the banks of the Coosa are lined with fishermen from sun-up to sun-down, each hoping that he will catch a bigger one. Several weighing from 14 to 19 pounds have been taken.

The sea bass being caught in the Coosa this year are said to be larger than ever before. The first one caught there was in 1931 and Warden Morgan Loyd of Wetumpka estimates that approximately $100 worth of lures have been lost by Elmore County anglers since then, in attempting to drag them out of the river.

For a time they didn't know what kind of fish was breaking their lines and galloping off with their lures, and only when they began to use stronger lines and lures did they find out. One fellow's pole was broken in two places and he finally had to release the stub he held to keep from being dragged into the water himself.

Those who have caught sea bass say it generally takes from 30 to 40 minutes to pull them in and by that time, the fisherman is as near exhausted as the fish. The striped sea bass is the largest and one of the best of the American anadromous spiny-rayed fish, and each year at this season, seeks fresh water streams to spawn. They have been found as far north in this state as Muscle Shoals.

This species ascends streams along the entire Atlantic coast and has been introduced successfully on the Pacific Coast. Striped bass weighing 60 or 75 pounds are not uncommon, and occasionally their weight exceeds 100 pounds.

This fish is said to be very fractious during the spawning season, and is famed as a fighter. When the female fish are in spawning condition the male fish gather around them in great numbers, sometimes 20, 30 or even 50 of them. In the vicinities where they spawn, frequent reddening of the waters is reported to be caused by the gashes made by the fish finning one another in their attempt to get near the spawning females. The striped bass is rather rare in the Gulf of Mexico and is most common between Cape May and Cape Cod and on the North Carolina coast. As a food-fish the striped bass is one of the very best; as a game fish there are few better. — Walton Nimrod, in Alabama Game and Fish News.

I wish to commend Mr. J. N. Dennis for his public endorsement of Mr. J. Z. Mims for our next Probate Judge. I feel that Mr. Dennis has the interest of the Republican party at heart and I, too, feel that it would be to the best interest of the Republican party and the people of Chilton County to nominate and elect Mr. Mims as Probate Judge.—J. GROVER A. BICE

Candidate for Office of Circuit Clerk of Chilton County

Subject to the Action of the Republican Primary of June 12th

Voters of Chilton County:

I am making this last appeal to you for your vote for Circuit Clerk on next Tuesday.

I have furnished you with a recommendation from the business men of Thorsby, to show you my character, qualification and ability to serve the general public.

I received 275 votes in Beat 9, my home Beat, in the May 1st primary, this recommendation I wish you to take into consideration.

My friends, consider these and other facts which have been brought to your attention during this campaign.

You have a job to give out. You have two men asking for this place. Ask yourself which man needs this job most.

Assuming that Mr. Harris and I are equally qualified for this place take into consideration that Mr. Harris is a good school teacher, a fact which assures him employment. I belong to the unemployed class.

If your boy was in this race with a man who was assured employment, how would you vote? Consider all things and vote your convictions.

Yours sincerely,

GROVER A. BICE.

J. E. EASTERLING DEFENDING HIMSELF IN HANDLING THE GAS FOR CHILTON COUNTY

Judge Reynolds stated the way the gas was handled that there was no record of it so he could keep up with it. I want to let the people know that I have a record of it at home any time the court wants it. It is ready for them to see at any time they would like to have it run up. Judge Reynolds tried to make it appear to people that gas is just wasted all over the county. But the records show that in 1932 gas and oil cost $5,401.38, and in 1933, gas and oil cost only $3,856.79. And as you all know, that the county had to furnish all the C. W. A. gravel trucks with gas and oil, and there were somewhere about 30 of them and one caterpillar for two months. After furnishing extra gas and oil for these, the cost was $1,544.59 less in 1933 than it was in 1932.

From these facts I am sure you would see that I have not wasted Chilton County gas and oil. Neither has it been given to any person for his personal use. But under my management, the cost of gas and oil in a year was $1,544.59 less than it was under the management that preceded mine. Yours very truly,—J.E. Easterling.

PLYMOUTH REDUCES PRICES

According to George C. Polk, sales manager for Polk Bros. Motor Co., Plymouth annonnces substantial priee reduction on all model Plymouth cars, amounting to as much as $45.00 on some models.

According to Mr. Polk, this reduction is made possible by Plymouth's continous record breaking sales, month after month. By April 30th, 145,909 brand new 1934 Plymouth cars were on their way to happy Plymouth owners. An increase of 177 per cent over the first four months of 1933. Latest complete registeration figures show sales to retail buyers keeping well abreast of shipments. In the first quarter of 1933 Plymouth secured 13.1 per cent of total motor car sales. This was boosted to 17.4 per cent in the first quarter of 1934.

Mr. Polk states that Plymouth is America's engineered low-priced car, and that this reduction makes prices virtually identical with the very lowest priced car on the market. Their adv., showing the amount of price reduction through the entire line will be found elsewhere in this issue.

ENDORSES J. E. COBB

Editor Union-Banner:

Please allow me to say a few words through your paper in regard to Mr. Cobb, candidate for commissioner in the first district. As many know, Mr. Cobb has served us one term and I think he has made us one of the best commissioners that has ever been put in office. His ability to build roads is unquestionable and he has taken very much interest in other business matters of the county, which we all know concerns us as voters and taxpayers.

Mr. Cobb is a likable man to deal with and his everyday social life makes us feel proud that he lives in our community.

We cannot have a successful party and expect to exist very long if we fight each other in our own party. We should pull together now and still pull a little harder in November. Now, asking you again to consider Mr. Cobb when you go to the polls next Tuesday. Cast a vote in his favor and I'm sure you won't regret it.

Yours for the success of the Republican party.—Golda Gothard.

SOUTHWEST CHILTON

Miss Willie D. Barnes has been quite a lot of help to those having strawberries to can. She brought her pressure cooker to the Winters home and canned berries both for pies and preserves. She taught me how to use the cooker, and also left it with me to use. On another day Mrs. W. M. O'Neal was invited to come and pick berries and Miss Barnes brought her pressure cooker and we had a real canning for Mrs. O'Neal.

We are in hopes that we will be able to have Miss Barnes to assist us with our canning this summer.

Mrs. W. S. Osburn has been quite sick, but we are glad to report that she is better.

Mr. and Mrs. Fonza Green visited Mrs. Green's parents Sunday, Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Harris.

We are glad to report that Mrs. J. W. Letcher of Plantersville, well-known in Chilton County, is improving at the Baptist Hospital at Selma after a serious operation for gall stone and appendicitis.

I want to express my thanks and appreciation to Mr. J. C. Atchison and his efficient corps of men for the road they are building in this part of the county. They are widening the road, making it possible for any two vehicles to pass anywhere along the road, which has never been possible since the road has been in use. This is the first time in my life the road has really been worked and I have been traveling over this part of Chilton County road almost one half a century. I can speak for the people of this part of the county and say, "We are all grateful to these men for the good road they are building for us."—Mrs. C. C. Gay, Sr.

ENDORSES W. L. SANDERS

To the Voters of Chilton County:

The primary election of June the 12th will soon be here and the voters will select our ticket for the general election this fall. We should be careful to select the best men on our ticket so the ticket will be easy to elect this fall.

Every candidate's record will be placed before the people, and by it he will stand or fall. I want to say that Mr. Sanders, candidate for Representative, has a record that will stand the test. His services as a member of the County Board of Education is outstanding and is without criticism as far as I have heard. He has proved himself a servant of the people by complying with their wishes as far as he was able.

There is one thing that Mr. Sanders did I think the people should appreciate, and that is making the election of the County Superintendent by popular vote. We know that he was not a Representative in the Legislature but he drew up the bill that is on the statute books today, making the county superintendent elected by the people.

Had it not been for the services of Mr. Sanders, the people of this county would not have the opportunity of casting their vote for these men that are seeking this office.

I am sure Mr. Bean and Mr. Daniel appreciate the manner or way we now have of electing the Superintendent of Education. If you like to vote for the Superintendent I believe you will like to vote for the man that worked that you might have this opportunity.

Mr. Sanders is a man that thinks and works for the interest of all. He is not afraid to express his views and to face his record at any time, and I believe he can defend himself against any unjust accusation.

If you will cast your vote for him I believe you will not regret it. Yours truly, G. C. Jones.

ALL-DAY HOLINESS MEETING

There will be an all day holiness meeting at Bro. Lee Crowson's the third Sunday in June, if the Lord is willing. Everybody is invited to come and feel welcome and bring dinner and spend the day.

Mr. Crowson lives 1 mile south of Jemison on the highway at Pine Hill Cemetery. The meeting will be out in the open air at Bro. Lee's house.—R. L. Sturdivant.

W. T. Bean Says Wants Fair Show

To the Republican Voters of Chilton County:

I hardly deem it necessary that I make another appeal to the voters of the county, and I would not if it were not for the fact that it his come to me from very reliable sources that plans are being made (but not by my opponent) to wait until the last day before the election to spread a rumor that I do not meet the legal qualifications to hold the office of county superintendent of education. As stated in last week's Union-Banner I have met every legal qualification and have filed every paper that is required by law. I am positive of this and three of the best lawyers of Clanton also declare that I have met every qualification. May I also say that my special college training for this special work is as high as that of anyone's who has asked for this position.

I ask the voters to beware of any false propaganda that may be circulated on the last day and night before the election. This campaign has been on for several months, and everyone has had ample time to bring any information before the people. No honest man will wait until the last minute to scatter any kind of propaganda. I mention this only because in the past there has been dirty work done against me and other candidates on the night before the election.

May I say as my last word in print before this primary that I consider myself butchered in politics in my defeat last year, which was unavoidable with the party demoralized. I wish to again call attention that in the election last June there were almost eight hundred Republicans behind with their poll tax and less than one fourth of this number of Democrats behind with their poll tax. I will say again that I do not believe that there was a Republican in the county who could have been elected last June. I was just a victim of circumstances in that election. That defeat was humiliating to me and my friends. Now that the party is strong I am again pleading with the Republicans to give me a chance by nominating me at the polls on the 12th day of June to redeem myself in the eyes of the people of Chilton County.

However should I be defeated in this primary, I will remain loyal to the Republican party and will do my bit toward seeing that every man who is nominated by the Republicans on June the twelfth is elected in November.

I want to ask every Republican in Chilton County to give my candidacy a close consideration, considering my qualifications, my experience in general, and my loyalty to the Republican party. Then if you find that I am capable of filling this office, and I merit your approval otherwise, I most earnestly solicit your vote and influence.

I want to take this means of expressing my warmest appreciation to my many friends who have worked in my behalf in a personal way and to those who have been interested enough to write to the paper in my behalf.—Very sincerely, W. T. Bean.

ENDORSES W. T. BEAN

Editor Union-Banner:

Please allow me space in your paper to say a few things in behalf of Mr. W. T. Bean, as a candidate for the office of County Superintendent of Education.

First, I wish to heartily endorse every word in the letter written by Mr. O. H. McDowell endorsing Mr. Bean for said office, and to every Republican voter who did not read this letter by Mr. McDowell, I urge you to do so. You will find Mr. McDowell's letter on the last page of the Union-Banner of May 31st. I ask you to lay all prejudice aside and read this letter for what it is worth to the Republican party and to the county as a whole.

Personally, I know Mr. Bean to be just the man that Mr. McDowell has described him to be and I want to publicly add my name to the loyal frinends and supporters of Mr. Bean.

During the number of years that Mr. Bean was principal of Thorsby public school, I had the privilege of making a very personal acquaintance with him, not only as a teacher, but as a man.

I found him to be a man of strict morals and integrity, one who has every characteristic of a perfect gentleman, a man who is open in his convictions and one who carries out every financial affair to an itemized account.

At the end of his school in Thorsby he usually furnished every patron with an itemized statement of every penny of incidental or any other money taken in by the school and of every penny expended for the school.

What we need is men to fill our county offices who will give strict accounts of every penny intrusted to their care. Not only this, but Mr. Bean has had experience as county superintendent and as teacher and knows just what it means or takes to have first class schools. As a parent, Mr. Bean will work for the best interest of the children and the parents as well. Those who do not have children to send to school, think lightly of the many hardships parents have in sending their children to school.

To all Republican voters, I urge you to support Mr. Bean, because he is loyal to his party. He is loyal to his friends. I feel sure that if you do support him in the primary of June the 12th that he will carry the general election without any trouble and if elected in November you will never have cause to regret that you supported him.—Sincerely, Ernest E. Porter.

Dr. and Mrs. E. E. Upchurch went to Springfield, Tennessee last week end to see Mr. and Mrs. Walter Bentley. The new store of Mr. Bentley at Springfield was opened Saturday with prospects of a good business future.

H. A. HARRIS

Candidate for Clerk of the Circuit Court of Chilton County, Subject to the Action of the Republican Primary June 12th

o

To the Republican Voters of Chilton County:

Permit me to make this, my last appeal to you for your support in the Republican Primary June 12. I have tried to see and talk with each of you in person during the two campaigns, and if I have failed to see you, I want to assure you it was not done intentionally, and that I will greatly appreciate your vote and influence in my behalf.

It is true, as my opponent charged, that I served the county as Sheriff one term, 1015 to 1919. The office of Sheriff carries no fixed salary, but is on a fee basis, and all expenses of the office must be paid by the Sheriff. During my term the duties and expenses of the office were very heavy, because of added duties pertaining to the World War. My administration as Sheriff is a matter of record, and I ask you to consider it.

It is also true that I did not serve in the army. At that time I had a wife and four small children to support, and was not in the age limit. But I did my part in every way possible. I was loyal and patriotic and did everything the government asked me to do. I was ready and willing to answer any call to the service of my country.

Also, my opponent failed to tell you that he has held an appointive office as Postmaster at Thorsby for about twelve years, which will more than offset any one term as Sheriff of the county.

In the first primary on May 1st, I led my opponents by a good margin, even though I had three good men against me.

These are facts I ask you to consider in making your choice. It is my desire and ambition to serve you as Circuit Clerk, and I am asking you for your vote and influence to help me realize this desire.

In conclusion, I urge each of you to go to the election on June 12 and vote your choice for the various offices, and then all line up behind the entire ticket and elect our Republican nominees by a safe majority in November.

Again soliciting your vote and influence, and promising, as before, honest and efficient service, and fair and impartial treatment to all, I am,

Respectfully,

H. A. HARRIS.

J. E. DANIEL

Candidate for Superintendent of Education of Chilton County, Subject to the Action of the Republican Primary, June 12

o

Dear Friends:

It is fitting for me to say a few words to you at this time.

First of all, I wish to thank you again for the vote you gave me in the first primary. It was very gratifying indeed. I had very little time to devote to canvassing for the first primary. Since school has closed, it has been my pleasure to meet many people. I did my best to see all the Republican voters in the communities I have visited. If I missed seeing anyone it was not my intention to do so. I wish to thank the people in the communities I have visited for the cordial welcome given me.

This is the first time I have asked the people for any office. I come to you free of any entanglements of the past. Long before I finished high school I decided that I would support the Republican party.

I have prepared myself for the work of Superintendent. It has been my pleasure to study the work in three of the best Universities in the South. My friends, my election will not be an experiment.

I have conducted my campaign on a high, ethical plane. I do not wish to fight my battles any other way. I do not hold anything against anyone. I know I am not anyone's enemy, and if I have any enemy, I do not know of it.

I sincerely invite your investigation as to my character, my record as a student, and as a teacher.

I will deeply appreciate your vote.

Sincerely yours,

JOSEPH E. DANIEL.

PLETCHER—PILGRIMS REST

Sunday school at Pilgrims Rest next Sunday morning at 10:00 o'clock. Superintendent Anderson will be in charge. A rule which he intends to adopt is: that he will begin services on time; so if you want to get the most out of the services remember 10:00 o'clock sharp.

Lets all cooperate with our superintendent and make Pilgrims Rest Sunday school one of the best.

Rev. E. A. Norris of Verbena will preach or us next Saturday night and Sunday. Everyone is cordially invited to attend.

The singing society of this place meets every first Sunday afternoon. We had a small crowd last Sunday, a few visitors were welcomed. Come again.

Community club will meet with Mrs. J. T. Abbott next Friday afternoon at two o'clock. Miss Ruth Pardue will demonstrate jelly and preserve making. Every lady in this community is urged to attend. The 4-H Club girls will meet with us.

There will be an all day singing at Pilgrims Rest the First Sunday in July. Program will be announced later.

Our B. Y. P. U. is still picking up, but more room for improvement yet. If the parents of our boys and girls would only cooperate we could render a more acceptable service o the Lord. How about it, mothers and fathers? Are you interested enough in the fine boy and girl to come out next Sunday night.

ENDORSES J. Z. MIMS

To the voters of Chilton County:

I want to ask for enough space to say just a few words in regard to Mr. J. Z. Mims. I have known him all my life. He has been a perfect, honest, honorable man to do the thing that is right. He always knows you and is always ready to serve you any way you ask him to.

Voters, let's put Mr. Mims over the top the 12th of June. I am sure he will make a good judge. He has made good every place we have put him. A lot of us young voters about 30 years of age have never seen but one probate judge. Let's give Mr. Mims our votes. I am sure we will not regret it.

Mr. Mims is a Christian man, always ready to help in his church affairs, so we ought to put him over with a large vote. I believe he will do so by the county affairs. I think the people will make a great mistake not to vote for him. Wake up, folks, let's build up our party. Don't forget Mr. J. Z. Mims on the 12th for he is the man.—S. B. Williams.

Messrs. Will and Frank Mullins returned to their home in Mobile Monday.

ENDORSES J. E. DANIEL

Editor Union-Banner:

May I have space in your paper to say a few words in regard to the candidacy of J. E. Daniel, who is now asking for the position as County Superintendent of Education?

I think we have one of the best men of the state asking to serve us as County Superintendent. Mr. Daniel has had two years of special training in this line of work. He is a graduate of the University of Alabama. He not only has the training but has taught in the schools of this county and knows what it takes for a parent to send his boy or girl to school. Mr. Daniel has been a hard working fellow. He has worked for twenty cents an hour, digging stumps, raking leaves and washing windows to get to go to school. I believe you would get full value for every dollar that he spent.

Just visit some of the schools where Mr. Daniel has taught and notice the improvements that he has made. I have been in school under Mr. Daniel. He is one of the best teachers that has ever taught me. He did not show partiality to anyone. I do not believe we would be experimenting by nominating and electing Mr. Daniel.

There would be no use for a man to prepare himself for a special kind of work if he was not given a chance Young voters it is indeed a pleasure for me to recommend Mr. Daniel to you. I am proud that I can cast my first vote or a man like Elly Daniel to lead and advance us in our schools. I just hope you will go to the polls on June the 12th and nominate a man that we can elect in November, as there will be strong competition in the general election. Thank you.—Emanuel Cooper.

WOMAN VOTER WANTS BICE

Voters of Chilton County:

I just want to say a few words about nominating a man for Circuit Clerk.

We have two good men to choose between. But here is the thing to study. Mr. Bice has been out of a job for several months and you folks know how hard it is now to get one. He has a litle invalid girl about 8 years old. And another one about six years old. He is one of the best men in our community, and is in every way capable of filling the clerk's office efficiently and courteously. I know he is as courteous and willing to help the poorest as he is the wealthy.

Now voters, let's consider these things when we go to the polls on June 12, and every voter should go and vote.

Mr. Bice took care of his aged father in his old days, a thing that speaks for itself.

Now voters, Mr. Bice went "over the top" in "no man's land" and fought to the finish for us, and helped win the world war, while we were here safe. Now let's put him "over the top" in his own land he helped to save for us.

Show this week's Union-Banner to your friends and neighbors who do not take it and talk this over with them.—Yours truly, Mrs. Hester Ann Merchant.

ENDORSES J. E. COBB

Editor Union-Banner:

Allow me space for a few words in regard to our candidates for commissioner in the first district.

It seems that some think that Mr. Cobb should not be considered in the June primary because he didn't receive the highest vote in the primary of May 1st in his district. Now you know that I was one of the defeated candidates for commissioner in the First District. and I want you to know that I am not sore about being defeated, and am not fighting Mr. Bean, but I like to see men treated fair. We don't know where Mr. Shaw's, Mr. Conway's and my strength will go. I am sure that Mr. Bean will not get it all, neither will Mr. Cobb get it all.

It is true that Mr. Shaw and Mr. Bean received more votes than Mr. Cobb did in this district, but it is also facts that neither of them received one third of the votes cast in this district, and we can't say that Mr. Cobb being the third man from the top that the majority will be opposed to him in the run-off.

I don't say that Mr. Cobb has made no mistakes. We all make them, but sometimes we profit by our mistakes. The ones before him made them. I believe Mr. Cobb meant to be fair with the people. I've never worked for a better or more straight-forward man, and he has not promised me anything.

I want to say right here there has not been any promises between me and Mr. Cobb at all. I am not a politic cian, and am trying to play no politics but would like for our candidates to get a square deal and see our folks do their own thinking. I didn't think I would have anything to say after my defeat but changed my mind and not seeing things like some others do, thought I would give my views on the matter. Let's figure a little ourselves and think things out seriously then vote for the best interest of the people and our county.

Thanking you in advance for the space and I thank the voters again for their support in the primary of May 1st.—I remain as ever, A. Perry Robinson.

COLLINS CHAPEL CEMETERY CLEANING SATURDAY, JUNE 9

To the Voters of Chilton County:

Next Tuesday, June the 12, you will go to the polls and cast your vote for the candidates where you think will serve the people best.

I am interested in getting good men for every office. But here is one man in which I am deeply interested and ask the voters to give him their careful consideration.

Mr. Sanders, candidate for representative, is the man I am asking the people to support.

I have known him ever since his boyhood days. His respect for himself and others has won for him the friendship of not only his community but with all whom he comes in contact.

Mr. Sanders's ability as a leader in his community has gained the confidence of his fellowmen. His community is behind him in this election. Mr. Sanders is always ready to make a sacrifice for his school, his neighbors and anything that is for the upbuilding of his community and county.

I feel proud that his community has a man of this type to recommend to the voters of Chilton County. If you elect Mr. Sanders to the legislature you can feel sure that you will have a representative who is in sympathy with the laboring man.—Yours truly, Henry G. Jones.

W. G. SHAW MAKES LAST APPEAL TO THE VOTERS

To the Republican Voters of Chilton County:

As we come to the run-off primary on next Tuesday, I want to make a last appeal to the voters in other parts of the county to give your careful consideration to the race for commissioner in the First District. I think it has already been made clear who the people of the First District want for Commissioner.

I want you people in the other Districts to remember that two years from now you will be placed in the same position we of the First District are in now. You will be electing your Commissioner, and we will have the chance to vote in the race just as you have a chance now to vote on our commissioner.

I warn you to watch carefully the things that may be published in the last issue of the paper, or circulated in the last days before the primary. Remember the vote as it was cast in the first primary in the First district, and if you can help us nominae the man whom the people of the First District want for Commissioner, we will appreciate your assistance in doing so.

I want the Republican voters to be honest and fair, and give due consideration to all interests, and help us nominate the man who will be the best Commissioner for the First District and for the whole county.—Respectfully, W. G. Shaw.

County Farm Agent's Notes

Compiled by J. W. Fant, County Farm Demonstration Agent for Chilton County

WALKER ORCHARD IS GOOD DEMONSTRATION

Auburn, Ala.—J. H. Blackwell, who owns and operates a 3-horse farm near Parrish in Walker County, has demonstrated that both apples and peaches can be produced successfully in that section of Alabama. Julian Brown, extension horticulturist of Auburn, has visited the orchard and is very favorably impressed with it.

Mr. Blackwell now has 480 apple and 50 peach trees of bearing age, in addition to 1,850 apple trees and 608 peach trees under bearing age. His investment, including land, amounts to $4,000 and the value of the orchard is placed at $10,000.

Sales in 1933 amounted to $1,020. Products used at home were valued at $150; total of $1,170. His expenses except labor, were $143.48. Adding $240 as interest on his investment brought expenses up to $383.45, being a net labor income of $786.55 with only one-fourth of the orchard bearing.

The 480 trees averaged approximately 4 bushels each. One tree produced 17½ bushels of marketable apples.

Mr. Blackwell bought his original trees but has since raised all that he has used, doing his own budding and grafting. This has been a demonstration ordchard from its beginning. He followed the county agent's instructions with one exception. He failed to apply nitrate of soda to the trees in the spring as his county agent advised. This was a big mistake, he admits, as the size and quality of the fruit was greatly reduced.

HOW TO MAKE CLEAN MILK IS EXPLAINED

Auburn, Ala.—Sanitation of cows, milking sheds or barns, and the utmost care in handling milk are fundamental factors in the production of good-quality milk, says A. D. Burke, head professor of dairying at the Alabama Polytechnic Institute.

"Clean milk is basically important in the production of any type of dairy products, whether it be the sale of whole milk or the many forms of products for which milk is used," he added. "Quality depends on sanitation."

Dirt gets into milk from dirty cows, dirty milk sheds or barn lots, from dusty feed and bedding, from careless milkers who milk with dirty or wet hands, and from improperly cleaned utensils, he explained.

Clean healthy cows may be maintained by having them inspected at regular intervals and clipping the long hairs from the udder, flanks, belly, and switch of the tail. Cows should be brushed before each milking, using a currycomb when necessary. The udder should be wiped with a damp cloth prior to each milking.

A large percentage of bacteria in milk comes from the body of the cow. One particle of manure weighing only one twenty-eighth of an ounce may contain 50 million germs and carry them into the milk pail if it is dislodged from the body of a dirty cow. Certain of these bacteria may cause human diseases.

Professor Burke urges the use of concrete or other impervious material for floors of milking sheds. Manure should be removed at least 150 feet from the barn before milking. The barn should be clean, well lighted and ventilated, and the interior should be white washed. Pigs, chickens, and other animals should be kept out of the milk shed.

The five essential factors for economical pork production are (1) well bred hogs, (2) large litters, (3) proper management, (4) plenty of well-balanced home grown feed, and (5) a succession of pasture crops.

PLAN TO PROVIDE WINTER FEED

There is an old saying to the effect that it is impossible to starve profit into cattle. Many of us have tried to do this during the past winter and have found how true this statement really is. With low priced beef and dairy products the only economical method of feeding is to use an abundance of roughage and a limited amount of grain. All beef cattle producers and dairymen with five or more cows will find silage the most economical form of roughage to produce, now that it is no longer necessary to build expensive upright silos.

From now until the middle of May is the time to plant sufficient silage to have at least two tons for every cow on the farm. Texas Seeded Ribbon Cane Sorghum is recommended as it is almost equal to corn in feeding value and you can safely figure on producing from 8 to 10 tons per acre with a favorable season. Bothom land with plenty of available moisture is recommended for this crop. Barnyard manure is excellent to use as a fertilizer if available, or 200-300 pounds of nitrogenous fertilizer applied at the time of second cultivation can be used. Approximately one peck of seed per acre will be required if you plant in 3½ foot rows. Cultivate like corn but do not thin much as tonnage is what you need in making silage.

We will furnish you instructions for making and filling a trench silo later in the summer but you must first produce something to put in it. We want a minimum of 25 new silos in this county this fall and want you to do your part by planting the necessary sorghum now and getting several of your neighbors to do likewise.

If you need additional information, I will be glad to furnish it upon request.—J. W. Fant, County Agent.

GULF PARK DEVELOPMENT IN BALDWIN COUNTY NOW

Montgomery, Ala., June 5. — Gulf State Park on the ocean front south of Foley in Baldwin County is to become the scene of active developments starting immediately, according to a statement issued by Col. Page S. Bunker, Alabama State Forester, who is also Director of the State Park System. This project, according to Col. Bunker, carries the official designation of SP-6 in the records of the state and federal governments. An advance guard from a C.C.C. company will begin operations about June 5. The balance of the company will arrive from a camp in North Alabama where they have been engaged during the winter and spring on what was intended as a six months' work period but which required additional time to bring to a suitable close.

The Gulf State Park is unique in that it has not only ocean frontage but also contains within its boundaries a large fresh water lake. The park work will add greatly to the development of Alabama's beach region. The work projected includes 5 miles of telephone line, 2½ miles of fire breaks, 100 acres of general clean-up of woodland areas, 5½ miles of truck trails, 8½ miles of foot trails, 20 acres of public camp ground improvement, 7 camp ground buildings, 2 water systems, 800 feet of water line, 520 feet of waste disposal piping, one picnic shelter, two piers, 1 caretaker's house, 6½ miles of fence, 400 acres of tree and shrubbery planting, 10 acres of tree and plant disease control, 40 acres of poisonous plant eradication, 21 miles lineal survey and 700 acres of topographic survey.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Page and Miss Peggy Page spent the past week end on a visit with relatives in Nashville and McMinnville, Tennessee.

FANT QUOTES LETTER FROM THE LEADER OF RODENT CONTROL

To County Agents:

In the present government proposal to retire submarginal lands from production an opportunity is provided which may enable you to directly assist both farmers and sportsmen of your county.

Under this proposal large areas of lands that are now being cultivated unprofitable will be purchased and set aside for bird and game refuges and other purposes just as soon as they can be carefully examined and found suitable. Bird and game refuges acquired in this way will be devoted to the restoration of wild life and to game management with a view to giving all who so desire the opportunity to hunt, fish or to enjoy other forms of outdoor recreation. Lands now contributing to surpluses will thus be made to yield something for which there is an ever increasing demand.

The first step of the program is for the government to get carefully considered and accurate information about the proposed areas in order to facilitate the acquisition of suitable tracts. If one or more such areas are to be located in your county, it will require that they be described and recommended promptly. It will be appreciated if you will see that this is done. You are the one best qualified to determine the areas in your county that should be classed as submarginal. It is suggested that you confer with the men in your county most interested in game development and best qualified to give sound advice on this matter.

In order to qualify as a wild life restoration area the land must comply with the following specifications:

1. Submarginal.
2. At least 40 per cent now in cultivation.
3. Yield insufficient for adequate living standards.
4. Crops contributing to market surplus.
5. Under game management the soil may be restored and erosion and other destructive tendencies retarded.
6. A game crop may be produced of sufficient value to justify its allocation to game uses.
7. Such areas may in general run from 3,000 to 35,000 acres or more—Yours truly, Roy Moore, Leader of Rodent Control, State College, Mississippi.

People who are interested in this project and know of land that might comply with the above specifications, see the County Agent for details.

BRIEF RURAL ITEMS

Burning off land is one good way to eradicate profits. Trees cannot flee from fire but must stand and take it, says extension forester Lyle Brown of Auburn.

When the hatching season is over, the flock is changed from a breeding flock to a laying flock, and only fresh, infertile eggs are desired by the trade. Therefore, pen the rooster.

A plentiful supply of fresh, clean water is essential to pullet development. Over 50 per cent of the bird's body is water and full development will be retarded where an ample supply is not available.

Cows which produce two gallons of milk daily should be fed grain even on good pasture. One pound of grain to each 3½ pounds of milk will help keep up more profitable production.

To prevent spoiling, eggs should be kept in storage where the temperature does not go below 29 degrees or above 69. These are the freezing and germination points. For average farm conditions the storage temperature should range somewhere between 35 and 55 degrees.

J. Mell Martin and Rev. R. P. Cochran went to Elba last Friday to attend the funeral of Mr. V. J. Elmore's mother.

Mr. and Mrs. F. D. Green, of Lay Dam are spending their vacation this week on a visit with relatives at Audalusia and Columbia.

Lesson for June 10

JESUS ON THE CROSS

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 27:33-50.

GOLDEN TEXT—Looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith, who for the joy that was set before him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God. Hebrews 12:2.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Dying for Us.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Giving His Life for Us.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Jesus Suffering on the Cross.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Calvary.

In a real sense the grand climax of the six months' lessons is reached in this one. It is not a matter of learning the lessons taught by a great teacher, or imitating the examples of a great, good man, but of apprehending the atonement made by the world's Redeemer. He was made to be sin for us that we might be made the righteousness of God in him (II Cor. 5:21).

I. The Place of Crucifixion (vv. 33, 34).

They led him away to Golgotha, a hill north of Jerusalem, resembling a skull. He was crucified without the gate (Heb. 13:12). At first he was compelled to bear his own cross (John 19:17), but when physical weakness made it impossible for him to continue, they compelled Simon the Cyrenean to bear it for him (v. 32).

II. Gambling for the Clothes of the Lord (vv. 35, 36).

It was the custom for the soldiers who had charge of the crucifixion to receive the garments of the one crucified. We have here a fulfillment of Psalm 22:18, "They parted my garments among them, and cast lots upon my vesture." What sacrilege for them to gamble for his seamless robe under the very cross where he was dying. If they had but eyes to see they could have beheld a robe of righteousness being provided in his death to cover their sinful nakedness.

III. The Accusation (v. 37).

It was customary to place over the victim on the cross his name and crime. This superscription was placed over Jesus by Pilate to vex the Jews. He was their king in absolute truth. They had long looked for him and now when he had come, this is the kind of treatment they gave him. Though they rejected him and placed a crown of thorns upon his head, the throne of his father David is his by right of the unfailing covenant of God to David (II Sam. 7:8-16).

IV. Two Malefactors Crucified With Him (v. 38).

We are not told who they were. Perhaps they belonged to the band of Barabbas. This again was a fulfillment of the Scriptures. "He was numbered with the transgressors" (Isa. 53:12).

V. The Dying Saviour Reviled (vv. 39-44).

He was reviled by the passers-by, the chief priests, the scribes, the elders and the very malefactors who were crucified with him. In their mockery they unwittingly spake great truths.

1. "He saved others, himself he cannot save" (v. 42). This jest was meant to show the absurdity of Jesus' claims, but it demonstrated them and showed the reason for his suffering. He could not save himself and others so he chose to give himself to save others.

2. "If he be the king of Israel let him now come down from the cross" (v. 42). His refusal to abandon the cross established his rightful claims. The devil offered him the kingdoms of the world if he would escape the cross (Matt. 4:8-10). The very fact that he did not abandon the cross proves that he was what he claimed to be, for it was unto the cross that he came.

3. "He trusted in God; let him deliver him now, if he will have him" (v. 43). His refusal to abandon the cross was to the full delight and satisfaction of God. His obedience unto death was the sacrifice which met God's full approval.

VI. The Death of Christ (vv. 45-50).

Who is sufficient to comment upon this tragedy. Let us contemplate it in adoration and wonder. So shocking was this crime that nature threw around the Son of God a shroud that the godless company could not gaze upon him. Darkness was upon the land at noonday. This darkness was the outer sign of that which hung over the Lord. He became sin for the world and the world's sin hid God's face from him. God forsook him, turned from him who had taken the sinner's place. God was dealing with sin on the innocent substitute. When the price of sin was paid he cried out with a loud voice showing that he still had vitality; that his death was not from exhaustion but by his sovereign will. He yielded up his spirit to God.

Honorable Way

We need not borrow the tools of Satan to win the victories for Jesus. Any honorable end can be reached in an honorable way. God sets no goal which has to be won by insincerity and indirection.

Where Strength Lies

"I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills." The vision of God unseals the lips of man. Herein lies strength for conflict with the common enemy of the praying world known as wandering thoughts.

STANDARD SIX NEW CHEVROLET

Chevrolet Saturday announced "the world's lowest price six-cylinder car" with the introduction of the new improved 1934 Standard Six models, supplementing the Master Chevrolet models previously presented.

Two closed and two open models comprise the new improved Standard line. They are the sport roadster, phaeton, coupe and two-door sedan. The new cars, says the Chevrolet Motor Car's announcement, thus list under any other six on the market, and $85 to $95 under corresponding models of the Master Chevrolets.

The new cars are replete with major improvements designed to achieve better performance, riding qualities, comfort and appearance. Both chassis and body have been completely redesigned in keeping with the latest advances in engineering and styling.

Roadability, and especially stability, have been enhanced through the adoption of a wider chassis frame and more widely spaced leaf springs front and rear, in conjunction with a longer front axle and increased tread of the front wheels. These chassis improvements have permitted the use of big roomy bodies having maximum width and ample leg room.

In the power plant, smoothness, economy and flexibility have been improved through a thorough revision of the inlet and exhaust systems, with higher compression, and a refined valve and tappet mechanism including a redesigned camshaft.

The new models share with the Master series such appearance features as sleek, flowing lines, deep fenders hugging the tires, long hood with horizontal lourves, and steeply inclined radiator grills. Numerous interior refinements similarly enhance the style and finish of the passenger compartments.

The exterior has been generally redesigned to add to style and utility. Deep front fenders, extending far over the tires, conceal unsightly chassis parts, with only a shallow "valley" remaining between the fenders and hood. Front fenders are formed to extend to the center of the car under the radiator, eliminating the separate radiator splash guard. Fender skirts have been given sharp, graceful contours, making them appear fit closely to the tires. Edges of the fenders have turned in flanges, for extra stiffness.

The re-styled front-end ensemble includes new designs for the hood and radiator grille. The hood is unusually long, and has three horizontal lourves. Front fenders, radiator and head lamps are supported as a unit on a stabilized mounting of improved design, insulated from the frame by a single centrally located rubber cushion. Running boards blend smoothly into the fenders and are finished with a longer rubber mat, extending farther toward the rear.

A most pleasing appearance has been gained in the instrument panel. It is wide at the center, the lower edge sweeping upward toward the end in a graceful curve. The instrument group is enclosed in an embossed elliptical bead, flanked by depressed panels. The steering wheel is 17 inches in diameter.

Closed car models are equipped with improved Fisher no-draft ventilation, and with a reversed cowl ventilator, opening toward the rear, similar to the arrangement of the Master models.

ENDORSES W. T. BEAN

To the Voters of Chilton County:

We want to ask for enough space to say just a few words about Mr. W. T. Bean, who is a candidate for the office of county superintendent of education. We have known him for over twenty years, and have always found him to be perfectly honest and honorable, and a man willing to do the right thing.

From what we have heard people in various communities say, he was a very successful teacher and superintendent of education. We have never heard anyone criticize his management of that office. We believe that we got more schooling for the dollar while he was superintendent, than we have ever had since.

What good reason can anyone give for being against Mr. Bean? We believe that he has every needed qualification to make him fitted for that office. He is an experienced teacher and an experienced superintendent, a good business man, and a man who has enough energy to look after his job. When he was superintendent before he visited every school in the county several times each year we are told by many.

Mr. Bean is one of the best educational and political speakers in the county. He has always been ready to give his time to work for his party or any good cause. We feel that the Republican party would be ungrateful to him to let him go down in defeat since he has done so much work for the party and for education. We don't have a doubt about him being elected, but we want to be sure of it. We feel that if he should be defeated, and if we were asked why, we would have to say that it was because he is a good honest man and a good business man, and a man who has made good everywhere that he has been tried.

If there ever was a man entitled to have a nomination Mr. Bean certainly is. And we want to ask the people who do not know him as well as we do to find out more of him and help us to make him the next superintendent of education. Mr. Bean is a married man with a family. He has raised some children. We believe a man that has children of his own will know the love of a child better than a man can that has none of his own.

So, we believe Mr. Bean will take more interest in other children than he would if he didn't have any of his own. We have voted for him every time that he has asked for an office, and as long as he conducts himself as he has, we intend to vote for him. We have had dealings with him in several ways and we have found him to be straight, honest and an upright man.—S. B. Williams, O. Gray, T. E. Gray, Mrs. Mary Williams, Mrs. Alice Gray, Mrs. Janie Hines, Mrs. Lena Gray, Ozar Gray, R. H. Hines.

W. L. Sanders Makes Appeal

To the Voters of Chilton County:

Next Tuesday you will again go to the polls and cast your ballot for the various candidates. I feel that you are going to select men whom you think will serve the people best and can win the battle this fall.

Behind every candidate lies a record which will be brought before the people in the general election. Will the record of each of the nominees be such that can be honestly defended? If so, the ticket will be safe in November. I wish to restate that my record as an official is open.

Every vote that I have cast is on record in the superintendent's office. If you are interested, the books are open. See if you can find where I have tried to place some of my people or even a special friend on the county payroll. See how many days I have worked and then see how many days for which I have received pay. The record shows that I have worked more days than for which I have received pay.

From the report submitted to the Economy League, it seems that all legislators drew pay for more days than they worked; also drew more per day than the Constitution allowed. This same report shows that the legislature in the regular sessoin of January 13th to July 25th, 1931, had 361 clerks, doorkeepers, janitors and other employees at a cost of $172,811.00. The expense of both extra sessions were equal in proportion to that of the regular session.

Taxpayers, this is a matter of record. Does it deserve consideration? Do you approve of it? It is your burden. What are you going to do?

I don't believe the people endorse a group who will charge them almost a half million dollars for increasing their tax burden. Three sessions of the legislature in this administration, and what were the results? More taxes, of course.

And now comes the cry, "Lower taxes!" What's the trouble? Election day is just ahead. If I had served the people for eight years in the legislature and just now came to the realization that the common people are being bled to death by graft, extortion and high taxes, I should be afraid they would judge the future by the past.

If elected to the legislature I shall not only preach economy but will practice it as well. I have no people or special friends to place on the payroll. I would favor a law prohibiting any member of the legislature from placing any of his people on the state's payroll.

I noticed my opponent advocates a three dollar minimum car tag. I feel that since we pay such high gas tax that hree dollars should be the maximum for A tags and others in proportion. I feel that my experience as a taxpayer and laborer enables me to know the problems of the working class.

My vote for or against any law will be based on common sense and justice. Should I be elected to serve you I shall try to do what the people want done. Your interest is my interest. Your choice will be my choice.

I earnestly solicit your vote and influence.—Yours truly, W. L. Sanders.

Alka-Seltzer

The New Pain-Relieving, Alkalizing, Effervescent Tablet

Watch it bubble up, then drink it. You will be amazed at the almost instant relief.

It is called Alka-Seltzer because it makes a sparkling alkaline drink, and as it contains an analgesic (Acetyl-Salicylate) it first relieves the pain of everyday ailments and then by restoring the alkaline balance corrects the cause when due to excess acid.

After trying many brands of medicines—so-called relief for gas, and all of them a failure, I gave up hopes. By chance I tried Alka-Seltzer—I am more than satisfied. Geo. Bennett, New York, N. Y.

DOCTOR'S ANSWERS To Questions

By P. C. Cripps, M. D.

Q. I get attacks of indigestion and the gas presses up around my heart, I belch gas frequently and I have a burning sensation in my chest. What can I do to help this condition?—"Anxious."

Ans.—Usually such cases are benefited by strict diet of vegetables or milk. A good tonic like Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, is used by many people and has my greatest confidence. To be had at any drug store.

T. Perry Gore Of 2nd District

To the Republican Voters of Chilton County:

I would like to make this my appeal peal to the Republican voters for their vote next Tuesday for County Commissioner for the Second District.

I was a candidate for this office four years ago and ran next to the highest. I want to say that I have always stood for and helped the Republican party whenever I could, and helped elect Mr. J. M. Mims, who defeated me in the primary four years ago. I have tried to see as many voters as possible but to those whom I have not seen and who may not be personally ecquainted with me, I ask you to investigate me and my home and my business ability. I want to say further that if I am nominated and elected to this office that I will stand for the couny's affairs being conducted just as strict and economical as I have tried to conduct my own business and I want to tell the voters frankly that if I am elected I will not go into office with a grudge against any county official.

against any county official and I will not try to punish anyone politically but will cooperate to the best of my ability and as far as the County's best interest is concerned with all other officials. In the first place our county cannot continue and do well unless officials do this, and in the next place the Republican party is doomed to defeat unless there is more cooperation.

I want every voter to know that I am against graft and corruption in the Commissioners Court, or elsewhere. and I want to make this solemn and binding promise to all the people that if I am nominated and elected, no overseer, or even Commissioner's bills or any other bills that are not legal will be passed by me, and I shall stand for the taxpayers getting a dollar received for a dollar spent.

If we as Republicans do not stamp out dishonesty in our ranks then our party will be stamped out next November, and we should nominate men whose records and connections on this issue are absolutely above suspicion. The quicker we meet this issue and settle it the better for our county and our party.

It is also being reported over the county that the county's gasoline is being used for private automobiles and in many other ways that is illegal and no proper record is being kept of the way this gasoline is being used, and I want to make this further binding promise to the people that if I am elected I will do my best in seeing that every gallon of gasoline that is used be used for the county's good and in the way the law provides and that a proper record will be kept in order that every taxpayer may see just how this gasoline is being used.

I invite every voter to investigate my past life, my business standing, and my political life and cast your vote freely for the best interest of our county and our party, and your verdict will be mine.—Yours very truly, T. Perry Gore.

BORROWING YOUR NEIGHBOR'S TELEPHONE

By T. E. Harris, MANAGER

SOUTHERN BELL Telephone and Telegraph Co.

Neighbors may borrow for years and remain friendly, so long as each is careful to promptly return, in full measure, that which is borrowed. But let one get careless and forget to return items borrowed; then loss of friendship is almost certain to result.

If we haven't a lawn mower, for example, and continue borrowing our neighbor's, he is soon likely to feel that he is being imposed on. And so it is when we make a practice of borrowing the use of our neighbor's telephone. Every time we do it, we are borrowing something we can't return, and soon our accommodating neighbor grows weary of the one-sided arrangement. He may not say anything to us for fear of hurting our feelings, but he is wondering, since it is apparent that we need a telephone, why we don't get one of our own. If we continue this telephone borrowing, we will probably force him to intimate that it isn't convenient to have us running in to use his telephone, or else to avoid trouble he may remove his telephone.

When people start borrowing the use of a neighbor's telephone, they don't intend to impose on him. They just don't stop to think how much they may be inconveniencing their neighbor. They apparently forget the important fact that when they borrow a telephone they assume an obligation they can't pay back, and that just won't work. But why run the risk of inconveniencing friendly neighbors and possibly losing their friendship, when you can have a telephone of your own for only a few pennies a day? Call the telephone business office and order yours now.

TWO KILLINGS IN COUNTY TUESDAY

One Man is Killed at Mineral Springs; Another at Mt. Creek

The bodies of two men lay in the parlors of Clanton funeral homes; two other men were held in jail on charges of slaying them—and tragedy hovered over four homes in Chilton County Tuesday night, as a result of two slayings that occurred within less than two hours Tuesday afternoon.

Charlie Glass, 28-year-old sawmill worker, died enroute to the Central Alabama Hospital, where he was being taken for treatment, after he had suffered several severe stabs and cuts in his mid-section during an alleged altercation with Arthur Varden over the election at Mineral Springs. Glass died at about 3:30 o'clock, which is said to have been approximately twenty minutes after he had been cut to the ground by young Varden.

Charlie Henderson, 32, met his death at the hands of his brother, William Henderson, who is said to have fired a 32 calibre bullet into his chest during an argument at the Henderson store in Mountain Creek late Tuesday afternoon. For some time the two brothers had been on unfriendly terms, according to neighbors, and the shooting is said to have occurred when Charlie went into the store where his brother was working to discuss a misunderstanding which Charlie's wife and William were said to have had Monday.

Following the shot, which took effect in Charlie's chest in the region of the heart, he is said to have run about fifteen steps before falling dead on the front porch of the store. The friends of the family stated that for some time William's mind had not been normal. He was recently released from Bryce's Hospital in Tuscaloosa, and it is said that he has had ill feeling toward his brother since that time because he believed Charlie was responsible for him being sent to the Tuscaloosa institution.

Both Varden and William Henderson are being held in the county jail in Clanton, awaiting investigation.

Varden came into Clanton and surrendered to Sheriff W. H. Gillespie several hours after the cutting of Glass. It was not learned whether he made any statement in regard to the matter. Henderson was arrested by V. B. Champion, special deputy at Verbena.

Glass is survived by his mother, Mrs. Ada Glass, and one sister, Miss Verlie Glass. The body was prepared at Martin & Sons, and buried Wednesday morning.

Henderson is survived by his widow; three sisters, Miss Mary Henderson, Miss Jettylene Henderson, of Mt. Creek, and Mrs. Irma Woodley, of Montgomery; three brothers, William, Oliver and Tom, all of Mt. Creek, and his mother, Mrs. T. J. Henderson, also of Mt. Creek. The Henderson family has operated a mercantile business in Mt. Creek for more than twenty years.

Glass was brought into Clanton by Martin Gore, Clyde Ellison, and J. B. Sammons. They said that he was unable to talk from the time they picked him up until he died between Clanton and the hospital. Glass was the sole support of his widowed mother and sister, according to neighbors of the family.

Varden has been married about four months.

University, Ala., June 12.—A survey of the financial problems of 18 representative Alabama counties recently conducted by the Bureau of Business Research of the University of Alabama has revealed a general disregard of the most elementary principles of governmental finance, writes Prof. C. H. Knight of the school of commerce in the June issue of the "University Business News."

"In spite of a law, inadequate though it may be, requiring that each county board shall adopt a budget system for the conduct of the affairs of the county little attention is given to this important phase of the work. In some counties the only provision made is a division between the various board members of available funds for road and bridge purposes on an equal proration basis with no regard whatever given to the size, population, number of miles of roadways of the different types or the particular needs of the locality constituting the constituency of the elected member. This, of course, has resulted in much waste and inefficiency in administering these expenditures of the county."

Prof. Knight states that little or no thought is given to systematic financial planning. The majority of the counties operate on the fee basis, thus excluding a large portion of the operating expenses from the budget. In many counties no records are kept of receipts and disbursements other than the original receipt, if any, which is issued and the original warrants.

Published reports, required by law, are in some cases utterly ignored, the writer says. In other cases they are made up by preparing an itemized list of all claims approved or all warrants issued. This, in some cases, required the whole issue of the local newspaper. Some counties have no record whatever of outstanding indebtedness and the majority of the counties give no recognition to current claims outstanding.

The survey of Bureau of Business Research revealed also that the large majority of the counties were faced with a constantly decreasing revenue available for general operations. This decrease ranged from 2.89 per cent in one county to 34.16 per cent in another. The decrease was due mainly and almost without exception to a decrease in the revenue from the general property tax which is, of course, the principal source of revenue for a majority of the counties.

Two counties realized an increase in the amount of revenue from this source. However, this was due to an unusual condition, that of reapportionment of certain public utility properties. The results also show a constant decrease in revenue from courts, business licenses, and auto licenses. These decreases were partially offset by an increase in the proceeds of the state gasoline taxes which showed an average increase over the three-year period of approximately 18 per cent.

Prof. Knight states that in one of the counties studied he found the government being operated on a cash basis. This county maintains accurate cost record, plans operations in advance and as a result has no outstanding indebtedness of any kind.

All counties studied have sustained a decrease in assessed valuation of real and personal property over the three-year period. These decreases ranged from 11.75 per cent to 41.22 per cent.

The survey also found that numbers of the counties are faced with maturing bond issues of large amounts with no funds available for retirement. Nor is the market for new bonds particularly favorable.

"The mast practical solution for this problem at the present time seems to be the exchange of new maturity issues, preferably of the serial type, for the old through contact with the investors."

The Story of the Bible Told in Pictures

The Birth of Cain and Abel.—When God had cast out Adam and Eve for their sin, and closed the Garden of Eden to them, they were forced to toil for their food. "Cursed is the ground for thy sake; in sorrow shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life; thorns also and thistles shall it bring forth to thee; and thou shalt eat the herb of the field; In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken; for dust thou art, and unto dust thou return."—Gen. 3: 17-19. The later fulfillment of this curse is portrayed by the artist in the background of this picture. The world's first family pictured in the foreground includes Cain and Abel, the two sons of Adam and Eve, whose births are recorded in Gen. 4: 1-2. One of a series of Bible pictures by Merian, Seventeenth century engraver.

Time Lost is Money Lost

It costs money to be sick. You see it directly if your pay envelope is short. You lose out on some important work if you live on a farm or if you are one of the few who are not docked for lost time. You can't afford to show up on the job unless you are feeling fit. The boss wants results—not excuses.

How many times do Gas on Stomach, Headache, Sour Stomach, "That Tired Feeling," That "Morning After" Feeling, Neuralgic, Rheumatic, Sciatic, Muscular or Periodic Pains keep you at home or interfere with your doing a full day's work?

All these troubles are caused or made worse by too much acid in your body. To correct this condition take

ALKA-SELTZER

The New Pain Relieving, Alkalizing, Effervescent Tablet.

It is called Alka-Seltzer because it makes a sparkling alkaline drink, and as it contains an analgesic (Acetyl-Salicylate) it first relieves the pain of everyday ailments and then by restoring the alkaline balance corrects the cause when due to excess acid. Alka-Seltzer is pleasant to take, harmless, non-laxative.

Why don't you try it? Get a drink at your drug store soda fountain for a nickel. Buy a package for home use.

PLETCHER—PILGRIMS REST

Rev. E. A. Norris of Verbena delivered two mighty good sermons to our people last week end. The subject for Sunday was "God's Man in God's Place."

A number of our people attended the singing at Big Springs Sunday afternoon.

Sunday school next Sunday morning at 10 o'clock. We should have a much larger attendance than we have had in the past.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Patrick and Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Marlar of Billingsley and Mr. A. N. Hall of Kansas City, Mo., were guests of Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Chandler Sunday afternoon. Mr. Hall came out here to attend the funeral of his mother, Mrs. R. G. Hall, who was buried at Indian Grave church Saturday morning at 9:30.

We hear that a music school is being organized at the Vermont schoolhouse. If true, I am sure some of our young people will want to attend.

Mr. Dave Chandler of this community is raising Irish potatoes for the market. He has already sold one truck load in Selma recently at a very fair price, and has another truck load ready for this week. Farmers should raise more saleable products for the market.

Farmers around here have their eyes turned toward Clanton looking for their cotton checks. Autauga County has theirs already.

Miss Lena Mims of Birmingham, formerly of Clanton, and friend, Miss Evelyn Ronew, left Birmingham Sunday for an extended trip East. Their first stop will be Atlanta. From there they will go to Baltimore, Md., but will spend most of their time in New York City. Everyone will remember Miss Lena Mims as being the charming daughter of Mrs. Mattie Mims of this city.

Misses Dorothy Waite and Pauline Hogan left Monday for Montevallo, where they will attend summer school.

COMPLEXION SALLOW

"I felt tired and worn out constantly, had lost much weight, my complexion was sallow and my appetite poor. I gradually grew weaker. But Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription reached my weak spots," said Mrs. M. E. Jackson of 562 So. Washington Ave., Mobile, Ala. "I grew better in every way and have enjoyed wonderful health since."

JEMISON

Another Sunday has passed here and happily because of the services here. The singing was a grand success. There was a great host of people here and every one seemed to enjoy the day. There were a great many from other places, among whom were Mr. Charley Oden, Mr. Devaughn who formerly taught a singing school here a few years ago. Rev. Goodgame and Rev. George Threadgill, a student of Howard, who preached here Sunday evening, and a wonderful sermon it was from so young a man, but the young can serve the Lord just the same as the old. We certainly thank the people for their wonderful conduct here Sunday, and we also thank the Oak Grove quartet for their service. We think they are wonderful boys. May God bless them in their wonderful work.

Mrs. Clower's grandchildren of Birmingham spent last week with her.

Mrs. Philip Franklin had as her guests last week her stepmother, sister and little children from Florida, and as her week end guest her sister, Mrs. Cox, from Birmingham.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Davenport spent Sunday with relatives here.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Dawson and little son, Jimmy, and Mr. Dalton Champion spent a while with their aunts, the Misses Champion, Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Algie Crumpton have as their week end guests their cousin, Miss Eloise Lucas, and a friend, Miss Gladys Sebert of Dry Valley.

Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Champion and little sons, Alfred and Albert of Cedar Grove visited their uncle and family, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Champion and sons, Dalton and Sanders.

Mrs. Etheridge, formerly Miss Nellie Ward, was among the crowd Sunday.

There was a shower given in honor of Mrs. Erskin Martin at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Wright, Saturday p.m. The decorations were carried out in pink and white with white cake and pink lemonade for refreshments. The guests were Mrs. Dalton Chapman, Miss Grace Wells, Mrs. Luther Ward, Mrs. Astro Wright, Mrs. Clarence Marcus, Misses Dulcie, Delia and Effie Champion. Miss Effie Champion presided over the bride's book. There were many nice presents. They were drawn to the bride by her little nephew, Aldene Marcus, in a little wagon beautifully decorated with white and pink.

Little Ramon Waldrop, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hughey Waldrop, happened to a very sad accident last Sunday afternoon. He was playing with an old feed cutter and almost cut three of his finders off. They carried him to the hospital but at this writing we do not know the results.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Woodley are feeble these days, and also Mrs. Emmette Miskelley. We hope by next writing that we can write more favorable news about them.

THE RISEN LORD AND THE GREAT COMMISSION

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 28:1-20.

GOLDEN TEXT—Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost; teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world.—Matthew 28:19, 20.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Living Again.

JUNIOR TOPIC—The Conqueror's Marching Orders.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Our Marching Orders.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Great Commission.

I. The Empty Sepulcher (vv. 1-7).

1. The earthquake (vv. 1-4). This occurred when the glorious angel descended from heaven to roll the stone away from the tomb. This work of the angel was not to allow Jesus to escape but to show that the tomb was empty. Christ needed not even the help of the glorious angel for he came forth from the grave by his own power as the seal of his atoning work on the cross (Rom. 1:4). The open tomb and the angels sitting upon the stone with calm dignity is a graphic picture of Christ's triumph over the devil; and the terror of the keepers is a sample of what all of Christ's enemies shall one day experience when he comes in glory to reign as king.

2. The angel's message to the women (vv. 5-7).

a. "Fear not" (v. 5). While the enemies had occasion to fear, these women who loved the Lord received good news from the empty tomb. The Lord will not leave those who follow him and love him in suspense and dread. The empty tomb puts an end forever to all doubts and fears. It is evidence that the question of sin has been dealt with and that God is satisfied and eternal victory is secured. Let every teacher endeavor to show the importance of the fact that the tomb was empty, for it shows that we have a living Saviour. The resurrection of Christ should be the major theme of those who give out the Christian message.

b. "Come, see" (v. 6). The angel told the women that the Lord had risen and invited them to see the place where he lay. The reason he invited them to come was that he desired them to make sure about the facts. He remained with his disciples forty days giving them many infallible proofs of his resurrection (Acts 1:3).

c. "Go quickly" (v. 7). Having seen for themselves their responsibility was to go and tell the message. It is important to be convinced of facts. Experience is necessary before testimony. They were to go quickly to the disciples with the message that the Lord would go before and meet them.

II. The Risen Lord Meets the Women (vv. 8-10).

The women quickly obeyed the command of the angel and were running to bring word to the disciples. Jesus met them on the way. All who go quickly with his message, the Lord will meet on the way. When they saw Jesus, that he was really the Lord they worshiped him.

III. Paying Money to Circulate a Lie (vv. 7-15).

That Jesus arose from the dead could not even be denied by the Sanhedrin. They saw only one way out of the difficulty; that was to bribe the keepers to tell a lie. They had paid money for his betrayal; now they paid more money to circulate a lie about his resurrection. Money not only induces people to lie, but it even muzzles the mouths of some teachers and preachers.

IV. The King's Great Commission (vv. 16-20).

1. The royal authority (vv. 16-18). By virtue of his divine authority he issued this command to the disciples. Only as the disciples realize the authority of the Lord will they go out to proclaim his message.

2. The content of the commission (vv. 19, 20).

a. Go teach all nations. This is the first and primary business of the disciples, and is a present obligation.

b. Baptize them in the name of the triune God. It is proper that those who have become disciples of the Lord should receive the rite which signifies that relationship to him.

c. Teach them to observe all Christ's commandments (v. 20). Christ's disciples should be taught obedience to all his commandments.

3. The available power (v. 20). The guarantee of the success of the missionary enterprise is Christ's abiding presence.

Righteousness

Righteousness is incomplete unless its final and highest expression be love. But holy love is stern. It is satisfied with nothing less than the sanctification of its object, such love will never spare the loved.

Do It Now!

If the wish is wakened in our soul to be ever in his presence, let us go to him this moment, and ask him what to do, and how to feel, believing that he is more ready to hear than we to pray.

Miss Myrtle Farley went to Birmingham Monday.

On the SINCLAIR P.D. FLY FARM

Sinclair raises 1,000,000 insects each year to test the kill-power of Sinclair P. D. insect spray

The Sinclair Fly Farm at East Chicago is one of the most unique institutions in the world—and practically the only one of its kind in America. For it is here that Sinclair, every year, raises more than a million flies to test the killing power of Sinclair P. D. insect spray. Every batch of Sinclair P. D. manufactured must kill 1,000 flies under conditions more difficult than those in your own home. Five-day-old flies are used in these tests—as five-day-old flies are harder to kill than any other household insect. If Sinclair P. D. can kill healthy Fly Farm flies it is sure to kill any fly, mosquito, bedbug, roach or silverfish in your home. Ask for Sinclair P. D., the death-tested insect spray—it's harmless, stainless and sweet with the clean odor of cedar.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

(By Frank P. Litschert

One of the most important political developments of the year has gotten by with camparatively little newspaper comment. That it the organization of the Progressive Party by the LaFollette group in Wisconsin. But this movement, if it spreads beyond the Badger State lines, is apt to be one of considerable moment in American politics, temporarily at least. It is a new departure for the LaFollettes. During nearly all of his career the elder LaFollette ran as a Republican, although very often he did not support the established policies of the party. The younger LaFollettes up to this time have followed a similar policy.

Now the politicians are asking, just what will be the political effect of this new venture on the part of the LaFollettes in organizing a new party? At first thought it might seem that his movement would be disastrous to the Republicans. Wisconsin progressives have always borne the Republican label and so have most of the other progressive leaders in the Western states. But a little serious reflection leaves room for doubt as to the political soundness of such conclusion. One has only to go back in political history and look at the facts. The last third party movement, sponsored by the elder Senator LaFollette, came in 1924 when the Progressive ticket of LaFollette and Wheeler was in the field. When the movement first got under way it gave the Republican leaders a first class case of jitters. A great many of them didn't know what would happen and were inclined to give the West up as a lost cause in the 1924 election. But, strange to say, it worked in reverse. Instead of helping the Democrats, as was feared, the Progressive movement almost wiped out he Democratic party in a number of Western states. The reason was this: a great many Democrats with radical leanings followed LaFollette and Wheeler, thus cutting from the support of John W. Davis, the Dmocratic candidate. Then many Democrats of conservative tendencies, fearing the growth of the radical movement, left heir party and voted for Coolidge, because they thought he had the best chance to stop the third party movement and prevent the throwing of the election into the national House of Representatives. Thus the Democrats were trimmed two ways.

Of course this is not convincing proof that the some thing would happen again, but it shows at least that third party movements often have results exactly opposite from those which seem apparent at first glance. That the Democrats realize this is evidenced by the fact that many of the politically minded leaders of the party do not look at this LaFollette movement with any great favor. They won many of the so-called progressive states in the 1932 election for the first time in a generation. They have built up what they regard is pretty good Democratic organizations in these states and, with the help of the progressives they weaned away from the Republicans in 1932, they have hoped to keep many of these states on the Democratic bandwagon. But a third party movement, if it grows in vigor, may defeat this plan. While the progressives may not go back into the Republican camp, they will for the time being be isolated, which will give the Republicans an advantage in many of these Western states.

Just another thought in closing: President Roosevelt has been trying to keep the liberals of the West in the Democratic camp by giving them ample recognition. Then why all this desire for a third party? The answer is that pseudo-liberalism has a tendency to grow into radicalism. And what the American radical thinks as "the left" today he regards as "the right" tomorrow. The more he gets, the more he wants, and many of his ilk are now saying that the policy of the administration is not "liberal" enough. Another illustration of the truth of this statement may be found in the present political situation in Minnesota. In that state the radical "Farmer Labor" party is now engaged in an intra-party fight. Many of the leaders no longer regard Senator Shipstead as "radical" enough to suit their purposes. They are denouncing him as "conservative" and asking for the nomination of a candidate for the United States senatorship, from farther down the line to the left. Radicalism has a way of growing by feeding on itself. It moves steadily toward the left.

COLBY ON REGIMENTATION

Now that the course of the administration forces, with the aid of some of the so-called non-partisan liberals, seems to be marked out along the line of regimentation, a great many political observers are wondering what is to become of the old-fashioned so-called Cleveland Democrats who, though small in number compared to the whole, have always had an influence very great in the councils of their party.

It a noteworthy fact that the party of Jefferson, which has traditionally favored states rights and rugged individualism, should now be pointing the way to a more powerful federalism than the nation has ever known. But one by one the so-called old-fashined Democrats are lifting their voices in opposition to regimentation of the individual. One of the latest to do so was Bainbridge Colby, Secretary of State under President Wilson. In an address before the Economic Club in New York City, Mr. Colby called atention to the fact that his party is one "which throughout our history has jealously resisted every undue extension of government function at the expense of the individual's liberty" and he added that "I feel entitled to ascertain what has happened to my party, that its present leaders should be so intent on crushing every sentiment and garroting every principle, regarded heretofore as characterizing the Democratic party."

Continuing and dwelling on the present trend in government, Mr. Colby added: "Consider for a moment what has taken place in a little over a twelvemonth. The federal government has been empowered: To control the production and distribution of all agricultural products; to control the production and distribution of substantially all other articles moving in commerce; to regulate the business of banking to the exclusion of the states; to regulate and control the issuance, distribution and sale of securities; to fix the civil rights and liberties of persons engaged in the sale of all articles moving in interstate commerce or whose sale is solicited by means of interstate communication or through the mails.

"A vast bureaucracy has been called into being and fastened upon us without our realizing it, much less authorizing it. It makes a Democrat thoughtful to behold such a transformation of the United States of America. Almost overnight it has been brougt to pass. Gradually it has dawned upon the country, and it is now quite plain that recovery was only partially the aim of the administration. A great part of its interest has been in radical instiutional overturn and the new-modeling of the state.

"Thus measures which were to meet an emergency, we are now told, are to be permanent. Other measures, which were to promote recovery but have had quite the opposit result, are now justified as reforms, regardless of their consequences. The guarantees of the Constitution are dismissed lightly as if they were irrelevances of the present-day life of America. The basic principles of the Constitution, we are told, must be somehow got around. In our long history there have been recurring periods when our institutions have seemed to be in peril. There have been periods of great anxiety for the Constitution, periods when the people have been apprehensive as to what the courts might do.

"But if one will review the history of past crises, it will be seen how splendidly the Constitution has met each one, and how faithfully our highest courts has discharged its duty as the Constitution's guardian as well as its interpreter. It is the most American thing about America. Darkness shall not envelope it."

THE LESSON ITALY TEACHES

What are the consequences of a "planned economy" such as certain members of the brain trust seek for the United States?

No more cogent summing up of its actual results can be found than that of Col. Frank Knox, Chicago newspaper publisher, outlining the situation in Italy today. He found that in Italy planned economy has:

Destroyed every vestige of popular parliamentary government. Killed all freedom of speech, freedom of press and of assembly and the right of petition. Made taxation without representation country-wide, for the poor as for the rich. Made labor compulsory and strangled private capital investments. Taken all voice from industry and labor. Fixed earnings for labor and industry by government edict. Increased the national debt to an almost unbearable total.

The most dangerous situation created by this tremendous centralization of government in Italy, Colonel Knox finds to be the staggering increase in debt. Studied from another standpoint, this means that the dictator, Mussolini, has been maintaining the government, and himself, by huge government expenlitures.

The national debt of the country has advanced in five years from 11,000,000,000 to 150,000,000,000 lire. And whereas in 1928 the national budget was in excellent shape with income 555,000,000 over and above expenses, the 1933 budget revealed a deficit of 3,663,000,000 lire.

In other words, the country has to do as one man says; and his orders are plunging the nation into a morass of debt instead of bringing it to a "balanced economy." Instead of a permanent restoration of Italian prosperity, the country is evading actual bankruptcy merely by mortgaging an uncertain future.

In the United States, as in Italy, we must learn that a country cannot spend itself into prosperity; that bureaucracy is a sorry substitute for strong and free self-government. —Syracuse Post-Standard.

MAN IN THE MOON

Looks Over All—Overlooks None

"Smilin' Tom"

Have you seen "Smilin' Tom?" If not, then you have some fun due you. Tom is mostly head, has a red face, has a hole in his head, and his head is full of water. His hair is green, and what hair it is. Up until a few days ago he didn't have any hair, but somebody planted some grass seed on his head. Now the seed have sprouted and Tom has a full growth of green hair. I think Mr. W. D. Spigener is Tom's creator, and at present he is at his office in the courthouse, where any and all may see and have a laugh at him. Go to see him. He's quite interesting.

Fair Play

It does one good to realie every once in a while that there is such a thing as honesty and fairness still in existence. I saw a pretty fair example of it last Saturday afternoon. As you may know, "Raz" Langston does most of the umpiring at Clanton's baseball games, and, by the way, makes a good job of it. I don't suppose anyone has ever accused "Raz" of unfairness, but, if they have, I am convinced to the contrary. "Raz" lives at Jemison, and last Saturday the locals took on the Jemison team for a game. Naturally, he would want his home team to win. But that was not the worst of it. He had a son on that team, who was to do the pitching. I reckon "Raz" is pretty fond of that boy. And that makes a tight lay-out—umpiring a game for his home team who were playing away from home, and his own son pitching. If "Raz" had wanted to be unfair he had the best chance in the world, and I consider the game an acid test of his fairness. Young Langston pitched a good game, but lost, not so much due to his own lack of ability as to the lack of support. I have heard several who were directly back of the plate who say that the umpiring was on the square. He didn't give the kid anything, nor did he try to show any false pretension by bearing down on him—he was just calling them where he saw them. There is such a thing as fairness, and "Raz" gave Clanton a fine example of it.

The Kidnapping Racket

A business isn't called by that name any more. Now it is known as a racket. Any one of the most vicious rackets in the world right now is the kidnapping racket. Any day you pick up your paper you can read of kidnapings. They range all the way from babies to old men, and young children seem the most in danger. A banker said a few days ago, that the penalty for being known as wealthy now is to live in constant fear that some member of your family will be kidnaped. But that is not the worst. If the law should get close on the heels of the kidnappers, they do not release their victims, but kill them. It seems that people who are rich enough to be in danger of kidnappers have found a way to help themselves, for a time. They take a boat and go to Europe. Law authorities are frantic trying to figure some way to beat the racket, even bringing the department of justice in, but little good has been done. And every time a kidnapper gets away with his job and collects a big ransom, it is a sign for renewed kidnaping. Some states are even putting in compulsory death sentences for convicted kidnappers, and this may be the solution, for these states are showing a decrease in this special crime.

Recovery, or—?

During the last few years much has been said about recovery and how to bring it back to us. Now, an eminent authority at Washington gives his idea of the matter, after a year and a half of Democratic rule. He has this to say. "The officials at Washington are in a quandary about what to do next to hasten recovery. They have brought out their bag of tricks, and none of them have been very effective. One after another of their pet theories have failed. The main reason that recovery has not come back is because the officials have gone about the matter wrong. They have not tried to bring recovery back—they have triedto take us to it. And in so doing, they have taken the wrong road. Instead of trying to save and put the nation and its people on its feet again they have tried to spend their way back. To any sensible person this method is in error. We have improved along some lines, and in some we are in worse shape than we were at the beginning. To be fair, what improvement we have made has been IN SPITE of the official measures rather than BECAUSE of them. To prove this, I cite other nations of the world. The depression has been world-wide. We have been through one of the wildest spending sprees in the history of the world. It is a wonder our national credit has not already broken down, and left us flatter than before. If the present program is kept up, this can be the only result. In other nations they have not had money to spend in this way, so they have had to study up some other method. And strange to say, they are further—much further—on the way to recovery than we are. What this nation needs is more brains and less money."

Harmony in the Ranks

If you believe all is peace and harmony among the big shots up Washington way, forget it, for such is not the case. To read the Southern Democratic papers you would believe that everything goes as slick as a button between the president and the congressmen. Give an ear: Not long ago a bunch of Congressmen were together discussing party harmony, etc., when one of them ventured that there might be more harmony, and that very few, if any, agreed with the ideas and theories of the brain trust. Another said that he could think of seven or eight, but when another asked somebody to name just one, nobody could do it. That is the low down on the matter. I believe the majority if the congress can work in harmony with the president, himself, but they naturally resent having their places taken by the college professors, although it is their own doing. The president is a big man, with some good ideas, and every time he has deviated from the straight and narrow way of careful administration of the nation's affairs, it has been at the instance of this brain trust. The quicker we are rid of the theorists, the better off we will be.—Man in the Moon.

Ice cream workers struck in Washington, D. C., the other day. No doubt they objected to working on sundaes.

IMPORTS FROM CANADA

More foreign trade is in sight on the basis of tariff concessions, according to Maxwell S. Stewart, who writes on the subject for the Foreign Policy Association under the caption "Tariff Bargaining Under the New Deal."

Mr. Stewart thinks that we can increase our exports by making tariff concessions on imports, under the tariff bargaining bill now before Congress. He cites the cast of Canada by way of illustration, as a country to which we can make concessions without greatly injuring our own industries, and adds: "A large share of Canada's timber exports, for example, are of a different grade from the United States product, and to a lesser extent the same is true of its exports to the country of wheat, potatoes and some other commodities. Then he suggests that "concessions might also be made up to certain quantities, on such items as dairy products, cattle and potatoes."

American farmers, who have been worried with falling proces and over-production during the past few years, will probably be a little dubious about Mr. Stewart's statement to the effect that Canadian products, such as wheat and potatoes are of a different grade than those produced in the United States. It will be difficult to show him that a bushel of potatoes brought into the United States from Canada will not replace a bushel of American potatoes in domestic consumption, or that a bushel of Canadian wheat, if ground into flour, will not do the same to a bushel of American wheat. And at the time when the American dairy industry is in sore straits—in such sore straits that the government seems to be unable to extricate it—our dairy farmers will not look with any degree of favor on the importation of Canadian butter and cheese in an effort to help American exporters.

We have considerable doubt whether the President himself will negotiate any reciprocity pact with Canada designed to admit Canadian argicultural products. Certainly he will not if he retains the political sagacity which has blessed him up to this time, and has any recollection of what happened, politically in this country, several years ago, when a reciprocity agreement affecting Canadian grains was proposed in this country.

Mr. Stewart also makes this significant statement: "Tariff changes of any type, if they are effective, involve a redistribution of national income which may be far-reaching in scope. The very existence of such powers makes the tariff determining agency subject to trmendous pressure from groups seeking either to defend or enlarge their claims on the nation's wealth. Years of experience have demonstrated the inability of Congress to resist such pressure. The more specific interests of the protected industries invariably have outweighed the less tangible interests of exporters and consumers, and the only safeguard against this tendency lies in the possibility of balancing off rival economic groups, so as to permit consideration of the larger issues of public welfare. Thus by dramatizing the gains to be obtained by the exporters as a group, the bargaining method may contribute substantially towards an equalization of political pressure."

In other words, popular opinion against admitting the products of cheap European and Asiatic labor into our country, to compete with American goods, is so strong that the exporters and the New York importers cannot soften it, and Congress reflecting the will of American industry will not open the flood gates. So tariff-making must be taken out of the hands of Congress!

UNCLE SAM ABROAD

Senator Reed, in his masterly speech before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, referred to the Carnegie and Bok endowments. Carnegie was a Scotchman and Bok was a Dutchman. Both left money for propaganda to interest Uncle Sam in world affairs. Carnegie died in 1919 and his propaganda has been going on for fifteen years. Bok only died recently and his money has not had a chance to do much mischief.

It would not be fair to say that the Carnegie propaganda was the only factor that induced Uncle Sam to take a trip abroad and become interested in European affairs. But it did a lot to swell the hands-across-the-sea chorus. That was a very expensive trip for Uncle Sam. A very sad trip. He will be lucky if, within a century, he pays all the bills that he incurred.

The Carnegie foundation is not contributing toward the payment of these bills. Au contraire, as the French say, it is urging Uncle Sam to take another trip. Because, unless Uncle Sam keeps traveling abroad, there is no justification for the Foundation's existence. Hands-across-the-sea is an excellent, pithy, benevolent and altruistis motto — as long as all the hands do not reach for Uncle Sam's pocket.

We wish all our multimillionaires a long, long life. But if they insist on dying and want to invest their surplus millions in an enduring monument to their name, they can do no better than to create a foundation that will keep Uncle Sam at home.—Washington, D. C. Herald.

It is expected that the embargo against the shipment of arms to Bolivia and Paraguay will be completed by the time the war is over.

Some Sights He Saw— and Some He Saw Not

This is the calm after the storm. Some are complaining of a headache. The dope was upset considerably in several instances by the results that came in after Tuesday's voting. For every sorrow there is a joy. In fact, the joys are in the majority.

I prefer to talk about fishing. Red Sherrod reports a fine trip he made to the Gulf last week with Nat Bentley and Earnie Hansen. They put up at Bill Morrill's, and caught lots of fish. Earnie got a fish hook stuck in his head as Red was casting out his bait.

Mr. and Mrs. John Hollis delightfully entertained the Kiwanis Club of Clanton at the Mitchell Dam Club House Monday night. The program was for All Kiwanis Night, and was carried out according to a schedule that was being enacted at the same hour by all clubs in the United States and Canada, and at the International Convention in Toronto.

Universal regret is expressed over the fact that two killings were recorded in Chilton County Tuesday. One of them is said to have been the result of an election argument. This is doubtful. More than likely the trouble started prior to election day. Killings are regrettable for any cause.

Will the Thursday closing agreement among the merchants stick? Some dissatisfaction has been expressed because a few are said to have violated the rule. It looks like our merchants surely ought to be able to stay together in this matter. The spirit of fair play will make it work out all right.

A. B. Jones, of Plantersville, was in Clanton Wednesday to find out how the election went.

CORRUPTING THE BALLOT BOX

Who knows a formula by which honesty in elections may be attained? Who can stop vote-buying?

Who can stop cheating when the votes are being counted?

Who knows a way to get election corruptionists convicted?

In Alabama, for instance, one difficulty is that the people are too poor to install costly election machines such as are used in some of the wealthier states; but Alabama could abolish absentee voting, even though such action would be an injustice and an inconvenience to large numbers of citizens who are compelled to be away from home on business on election day. It has already occurred to The Advertiser that it might be wise to change the penalty for vote-selling from a fine to dis-franchisement, this to be done upon the theory that it would be easier to get convictions than now. Severe penalties deter juries in many instances. Convictions are more important than penalties. Lawless men should be stigmatized. This is important.

It is depressing to realize that in Alabama votes in large numbers can be bought over the counter in every county. It is common knowledge that votes are bought over the counter in every election in which corruptionists care to do their stuff. Vote-buying is a deep-seated vice in Alabama today. What can we do about it.—Montgomery Advertiser.

THE FIGHT AGAINST MILITARY TRAINING

We have perused with interest the attitude of the editor of The Dartmouth regarding the Union's stand on military colleges.

Like many others, this is not a subject that can be dismissed with a few words of ridicule that only serve to confuse the issue. The Dartmouth's discussion is a good example of the essential fallacy of the pacifist position.

Now let it be understood at the start that the advocates of military preparedness desire war as little as the pacifists. The difference is that they regard adequate means of self-protection as a necessary result of conditions as they exist. War is not a cause but an effect. The cause of the world's fear, anxiety, and confusion is that lawlessness does exist; that greed, jealousy, hate and disregard for others' rights are at work in our midst. And so far we have been able to devise no means of holding these factors in check but force.

We have had an illustration of late of the futility of attempting to achieve peace simply by denouncing war. For fifteen years the League of Nations has been trying to end war by securing pledges not to fight. And today the forces of disruption are as strong as they have ever been. In South America a senseless massacre is going on between two small nations, that everyone has been helpless to check.

There is a more serious side to this matter. One wonders if the spread of pacifism in this country and the rising protest against military preparedness indicate a growing softness among the youth of today. Are we losing the courage and fortitude to stand up and defend ourselves and our rights? Is our virility ebbing away so that the stalwart virtues of our fathers, who made this nation great, no longer remain in their sons? Has patriotism become something only to be remembered and eulogized among us? If so, one does not need to look far ahead to see the handwriting on the wall.—Manchester Union.

Bill Armstrong entertained about thirty of his boy and girl friends at a birthday party Tuesday night of last week. Reports say that the young people had a mighty fine time at the party.

Dr. Frank E. Jenkins Died Last Thursday

A telegram was received here Thursday from Miss Helen C. Jenkins from LaGrange, Georgia, announcing the death of her father, Dr. Frank E. Jenkins. For almost half a century Dr. Jenkins has been actively and prominently identified with the religious and the educational work of his church, the Congregational, in the southeast. He was, for a time, pastor of a church at Decatur, Alabama. While pastor for several years of Central Church, at Atlanta, he became much interested in the organization of, what is now, well known as Piedmont College and later he served that college for many years as its president.

He was active in the organization of Atlanta Theological Seminary, and was for many years president of its board of trustees. For twenty-five years he has been president of the board of trustees of Thorsby Institute. His last visit to Thorsby was to attend the funeral of Rev. Joseph E. Each, who was vice president of the same board.

Dr. Jenkins's death leaves the board without either a president or vice president. (Rev. J. W. Jones is vice president elect.) Dr. Jenkins has devoted himself recently to work in behalf of two educational institutions, one at Wadley, Alabama, and one at Bowden, Georgia.

To Dr. Jenkins's whole hearted devotion to his work may be attributed his death. He died "In the harness." He would have preferred it so. If he had been content to quit work five years ago when he was seventy-five he might easily have lived to be ninety. But he preferred five years of hard work to fifteen years in an arm chair. Thousands rise up to call him blessed.

He was buried in LaGrange, Ga., last Friday evening. Many ministers had a part in the burial services. Among them, Pres. Newell, of Piedmont College, Dr. Ensminger of Bimingham and Mr. Butler of Thorsby. Mr. M. J. Soberg and Mr. H. R. Maddox, of Thorsby, attended the services.

Dr. Jenkins was in his eiyhtieth year. He leaves surviving, his wife, and his only child, Miss Helen C. Jenkins, principal of Thorsby Institute. Miss Jenkins's many Thorsby friends extend their sympathy.

The Clanton Baseball Club of 1934 has been organized, with Marvin Marcus as manager. Several good baseball players are on the roster, and prospects for a winning team are good.

Clanton-Prattville

Clanton opened the season last Thursday afternoon against Prattville, defeating them 7 to 0. Both teams banged out 8 hits each, but Watkins bore down in the pinches, and backed perfectly afield, never allowed a man to reach third base. Clanton's 8 hits included 3 doubles, one each by Simms, Hayes and Eubanks. Eubanks led the Clanton attack with a double and a single, and Mayo led for Prattville with three singles.

Clanton-Jemison

On Saturday afternoon Clanton conquered Jemison, 8 to 2. Langston, a youngster, was on the mound for Jemison, giving a creditable performance, but received rotten support. Beasley, a new comer, pitched for Clanton, and although a bit wild at first, settled down to pitch a good game. In this game Hayes and Blood led with the stick for Clanton with three hits each, one of Hayes' being a double.

500 TVA REFRIGERATORS ARE SOLD IN TWO DAYS

Birmingham, Ala., June 8.—After being granted the right to sell Electric Home and Farm Authority appliances because its rates were found by TVA to be "reasonable enough to make the use of the appliances feasible for the family of modest income," Alabama Power Company today announced that it had sold its available supply of 500 TVA model refrigerators within two days.

The company selling the refrigerators, which are priced at $79.75 and may be financed at low terms on the EHFA finance plan, on June 6th. These TVA model appliances may be sold in communities where electric rates are sufficiently low as to have won the approval of the Tennessee Valley Authority. The rates of Alabama Power Company have been granted this official approval, and the appliances may be sold by it, or other dealers authorized by EHFA anywhere in Alabama where the company provides retail electric service.

Ranges and water heaters will be sold in the same way and the rapid movement of the refrigerators indicates that the low cost and easy terms of these EHFA appliances, along with the low state-wide promotional rates of Alabama Power Company, will result in the electrification of many homes in the state not heretofore enjoying electric service.

BOB JONES COMMENTS ON HERE AND HEREAFTER.

We have had recently on the Chapel platform of Bob Jones College three missionaries. One was from India, one from Mexico, and one from Africa. They were scholars and gentlemen. They had poise and culture. They had a light in their eye that we seldom find in the eye of the average man. They had sacrificed and suffered but they were happy. I remember that the Bible says, "Life consisteth not in abundance of things which one possesseth." Happiness is not the result of getting. It comes from giving.

When I was a boy I used to hear the story of missionaries going to foreign fields and I felt like weeping for them. I don't feel that way any more. I have seen missionaries in foreign lands. They are the happiest people I know. This is especially true of the real, old-time orthodox missionaries. That reminds me. Rumors have come from foreign fields, which are distressing. Modernism has been getting into the missionary program of some of our churches. I never understood why any Christian would want to give his money to carry modernism to the heathen and pagan world.

The command of Jesus was direct, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." It is all right to build hospitals and schools but that is not the main business of the missionary. The missionary is supposed to tell a good news story. This story is "God loves men and Jesus Christ died for them. There is salvation for men everywhere in the name of Jesus Christ our Lord."

"Have you a seminary in the section of the foreign field where you are working?" a friend asked a missionary recently. The missionary smiled. "I meet a heathen and I teach him John 3:16. 'For God so loved the world that He gave His only Begotten Son that whosoever believeth on him should not perish, but have everlasting life.' I tell this man that I will be out of town for a day or two and while I am gone I want him to teach John 3:16 to everybody he sees. That is the only seminary I have." That is all the seminary necessary to save people. John 3:15 is the only message a lost world needs to be saved.

FOREST NURSERY AT CAPACITY

Montgomery.—The state forest nursery anticipates for the 1934-35 planting season the production of the largest quantity of tree seedlings in its history, says Col. Page S. Bunker, state forester. In the past, limited financial resources have precluded production of a quantity greater than several hundred thousand trees per year. Although the operating budget has continued to decrease, with the seed collected by the Civilian Conservation Corps and adequate labor furnished at varying intervals by the R. F.C., C.W.A., and E.C.W., it is expected that at last sufficient seedlings will be produced to meet the needs of private landowners as well as fill the requirements of the extensive planting program which is proposed for the numerous state parks and state forests.

In addition to the seed collected locally, 200 pounds of Black Locust seed were secured from the federal government for growing seedlings to be planted at the erosion control projects in connection with the fixation of gulleys. The available seed bed space at the state forest nursery had been utilized to the extent that only two-thirds of the seed could be sown. The remainder will be planted in prepared seed beds at one of the E.C.W. erosion control camps from whence it will be transplanted to the field projects next winter and spring.

The state forest nursery is located in the western part of Alabama, three miles south of Livingston, directly on the paved highway which goes from Livingston to York. Those who are interested in plant propagation as applied to the growing forest tree seedlings will find a visit to the project to be enlightening and instructive.

County Farm Agent's Notes

Compiled by J. W. Fant, County Farm Demonstration Agent for Chilton County

CASH PAYMENTS GO TO COTTON GROWERS

Auburn, Ala., June 10.—Cash payments to cotton producers who have co-operated in the cotton acreage reduction program are being distributed rapidly throughout the State, it was reported here at the headquarters of the Extension Service of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute.

To date 38,699 producers have received from the office of county agents checks aggregating $1,233,207, Dr. L. N. Duncan, Extension Service director said.

Total payments this spring to the 135,492 Alabama cotton growers who signed conracts is expected to be up close to $4,000,000. The signers will receive two other checks, one this fall and a third next winter, bringing the grand total to more than $10,000,000.

News releases from Washington say that rental checks to farmers co-operating in the 1934 cotton adjustment program have reached a volume for the South representing more than half a million dollars per day, as a majority of the contracts have now been received from the counties and are being examined and approved for payment as rapidly as possible.

The work of determining county allotments and developing methods of procedure under the Bankhead Act is nearing completion, and it is expected that allotments will be announced in the near future. "We are anxious to announce allotments," said Cully A. Cobb, chief of the cotton section, "but want to be sure that every county receives its fair portion of the state allotment, and thus a great amount of checking and rechecking is necessary."

FARM NEWS IN BRIEF

Hatcherymen pay $15,000,000 for the eggs they use, 6,250 carloads of them. This price represents a premium of $6,000,000 over the price of regular market eggs, according to the national commercial breeders and hatchers coordinating committee.

Four hundred leading indusrial corporations cleared aggregate net income last year of $558,000,000, in contrast with only $69,000,000 in the previous year, an analysis of annual statements by the Standard Statistics Company shows. As in the previous year, these companies, as a whole, continued to pay out more in dividends than they earned, although disbursements to stockholders were reduced.

April of 1923 farmers got $4.81 of the consumers' monthly bill of $14.68 for 14 important feeds. April of 1934 farmers got $6.41 of the $17.14 spent for the same foods.

WINTER LEGUMES INCREASED

Since 1918 the farmers have been planting winter legumes each year. The amount has increased from 1535 pounds in 1918 to 6,030,733 pounds in 1933.

The amount planted in Chilton County has increased from 8,000 lbs. in 1928 to 153,966 pounds in 1932. In 1933 Chilton County farmers planted only 82,200 pounds, so far as we are able to learn. The dry weather during planting season last fall probably had lots to do with this decrease.

With all the increase in planting there was only about 3% of the cultivated land planted to winter legumes last fall in the State. This means that we have lots of land starving and leaching away due to lack of winter cover crops.

Every farmer should be thinking about and planning his cover crop program for this fall. Don't wait until planting time to do your planning.

This is a good time of the year to begin checking on the results of winter legumes. Ask your neighbor who planted some oats and vetch last fall how he likes his hay crop. Check up on the corn and cotton planted after vetch and peas. Keep your eye on the results. Watch this crop and see how it compares with the crops planted where no winter legume was turned under.

INSECTS

There is considerable complaint coming to me about insects of different kinds.

The cabbage worm is doing lots of damage now. This worm is easily controlled if you get the poison on the cabbage before the worm eats its way into the cabbage.

Use any kind of arsenical.

Arsenate of lead, arsenate of calcium, or arsenate of magnesium. Either of these poisons at the rate of 1 part arsenate to 5 parts of hydrated lime, applied as a dust, will help to control the cabbage worm.

Watch for the potato beetle on the tomatoes. The same treatment given above will control this insect.

PREACHING AT MT. PLEASANT

Rev. Davis Durbin will preach at Mt. Pleasant next Sunday at eleven o'clock. Sunday school will be at ten o'clock.

Everybody is invited to attend the services.

County Engineer, Tom Arledge, is working on development of a device to attach to blades of the county road graders, which he says, will enable the machines to do at one operation, work that has heretofore required two trips.

Electric Service and TAXES

LAST year the Total Taxes and licenses paid by Alabama Power Company amounted to $2,144,881.44 or an average of $21.51 for each customer being served with electricity at the end of the year.

36,500 customers, or 36.6% of the total served, paid less than $21.51 for their total electric service, thus failing to pay to the company an amount equal to the average tax bill per customer for 1933.

Last Sunday the children, grandchildren, great grandchildren and a few close relatives of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Conway gave them somewhat of a surprise home coming. Early Sunday company began to arrive by car and truck and soon the house was filled to overflowing, each one bringing a huge basket of good things to eat. Soon the crowd settled down in groups here and there and indulged in reminenscences, each trying to tell something more laughable than the other and occasionally some one would bring out something that used to be very painful when we thought about the stern disciplinary measures that father Conway used to employ, he being one of the old type that believed with all his might the Bible and most especially the part that says "spare the rod and spoil the child," so it was generally conceded that father never wanted any spoiled children.

At noon two trucks were backed together and the good things to eat put on these trucks were enough to remind us of a king's feast; except we had no wine.

The serene happiness of everyone present was shown throughout the day by the smiles and laughter on every side.

Last Sunday's celebration, though typical of other such days in recent years the sentiment felt on this occasion was to some extent greater than previous meetings due to the fact of the counsel and good advice of aging parents and that as we grow in years we grow in knowledge and ere long we must learn that it is the intangible things in life that count most.

Late in the afternoon happy good byes were said, all wishing to have many other such celebrations.—One of the boys, A. A. Conway.

GAME AND FISH NEWS

Mobile, Ala., June 12.—A corps of 50 "salesmen" have set out to sell Alabama's sixth annual deep sea fishing rodeo to the city of Mobile before calling upon other cities to participate in the big fishing contest.

Under the guidance of Harry Crawford, Mobile business man, 13 teams have been dispatched to raise $2,000 in Mobile through the sale of rodeo memberships which will go to defray the expenses of advertising the rodeo to the outside world.

A part of the broad advertising program will be the mailing of 10,000 rodeo folders describing by word and picture the great sport in store for American anglers on August 27, 28, and 29 in the gulf waters surrounding Dauphin Island, which is 30 miles southwest of Mobile.

L. G. Adams, president of the rodeo association, said that, other than the new finance committee, the rodeo would function under the same committee chairmen as in the past. He reported numerous parties already have made boat reservations, both at Bayou LaBatre and in Mobile, and that all signs point to a record attendance this summer.

Tarpon, the prize game fish of the rodeo, already have been sighted in Mobile Bay and one Mobile angler lost an 80-pounder after a 30-minute tussle. Large schools of tarpon visit the feeding grounds near Mobile each August and the rodeo is timed to meet the invasion at its height.

The rodeo association is a non-profit organization and was created for the purpose of informing the anglers of America that the advantages of Alabama's coastal waters for fishing are unsurpassed anywhere on the American coast. The rodeo annually attracts between 300 and 500 persons from every part of the country.

CEMETERY CLEANING

On Friday, June 15, we are going to clean off Jones and Mullins cemetery. Those who are interested, please come and bring tools.—Lenzie Ellison.

A premium of 21 points or $1.05 per bale for 15-16 and 59 points or $2.95 per bale for in staple, over 7-8 staple, middling white cotton, was quoted on central markets for May 26, according to Division of Cotton Marketing, Bureau of Agricultural Economics, Atlanta, Ga.

A $5,000,000 corporation has just been formed in Great Britain with the object of erecting and operating a chain of distillation plants for the production of gasoline from coal, according to London press item, made public by the Commerce Department. The scheme is the culmination of over three years' experimental work in a plant on the Cannock Chase coal field and gasoline has been produced from coal at his plant and marketed since last September at the rate of 1,000 gallons a day.

FARMER USES TIMBER AS HIS RETIREMENT FUND

Timber as a cash crop is one of the most profitable enterprises on the farm of C. C. Hudson of Randolph county, Alabama. Thirty years ago Mr. Hudson's fields were so badly washed and gullied that he discontinued to cultivate it. Within two years this field was seeded from pines growing on an adjoining area. Now some of the larger pine trees on the 25 acres measure 14 inches to 16 inches in diameter and stand 75 feet high. There is a good stand of timber and the reforestation has stopped gullying and washing.

County Agent L. M. Hollingsworth and Lyle Brown, extension forester of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute, who went through the timber, calculated to be increasing at the rate of 527 board feet per acre per year.

The land on which this timber is growing is Piedmont clay soil, which is susceptible to serious washing and loss of fertility. The trees have made it a profitable field.

Mr. Hudson states that 75 per cent of the money he paid for his farm came from timber products. He considers his 25 acres of timber as a bank account which, after 20 years, will be equivalent to a real bank account.

The experience of Mr. Hudson is pointed to by Mr. Brown as an object lesson for other farmers, since there are thousands of acres now being cultivated at a loss in Alabama that is suitable only for growing timber.

Henry P. Fletcher Is Named To Head Republican Party

Party Plans New Deal of Its Own; Picks Diplomat as Committee Chairman.

Chicago, June 6.—Henry P. Fletcher of Pennsylvania, a diplomat by career, Wednesday night become field general of a campaign by the Republican party to win back political supremacy with a new deal of its own.

Fletcher was elecaed party chairman by the G. O. P. national committee today, shortly after the commitee announced that the party, in the Fall congressional campaigns, would stand for a program of social reforms, while hammering at "government domination."

His selection to succeed Everett Sanders, of Indiana, who resigned the post Wednesday, brought both cheers and criticism from the party's leading office holders in Washington.

The new platform, issued as the basis on which the party will ask for votes in the Fall congressional races, declared for a "liberal and progressive spirit," and made the party stand on social legislation to end pressing economic problems.

Fletcher immediately left his Greencastle, Penn., home for Chicago, to meet the executive committee and dictated the following: "I accept the chairmanship of the Republican National Committee, and heartily subscribe to the statement of principles adopted by the committee.

"I shall welcome the advice and assistance of all who are willing to work for Republican success. I am ready to go to work at once.

Of the 92 votes cast Fletcher received 67 and John D. M. Hamilton from Kansas received 25. Hamilton immediately moved the election be made unanimous. Before the balloting started the committee dispatched a telegram to former President Herbert Hoover, reading:

"The Republican National Committee in meeting assembled, sends you most cordial greeting and reiterates its appreciation of your devotion to our country's best interests and your substantial contribution to the upholding and advancement of American ideals of government. We express the earnest hope that you may be spared for many years to enjoy the well-earned gratitude of your countrymen."

The commitee denied that the message amounted to a farewell or a leave-taking, insisting it was a conventional gesture of courtesy and held no concealed significance. The new platform declared the country had been "backward in social legislation" and announced that the party was determined to meet he problems of unemployment, of impoverished old age, and of depressions in general. But it called the present recovery program "dictatorial," declaring American institutions were in danger of being engulfed by an all-powerful central government, and accused the Democrats of reckless spending and risky inflation.

As for business, the new platform said: "We believe in individual initiative and the maintenance of competition," but added parenthetically that competition should be "checked by government regulation." Two blows were aimed at the administration program on money matters: "The administration has committed the country to a program which unless checked will lead to the chaos of unlimited inflation." As to the gold policy, with its attendant effect upon the "gold contract" in bonds, the statement cried "repudiation," and said: "We insist that there shall be no further repudiation of solemn obligations of the government."

A redistribution of party power, according to rumor, was under consideration as a manner of restoring harmony, with the selection of one or more young Westerners to be vice-chairmen and aids in the party management.

Walter S. Hallahan of West Virginia was rewarded with a place on the executive commitee. Hamilton was also made party counsel.

The new organization is supposed to have the backing of Hoover and his friends, but did not signify the party's intention to run Hoover for president again in 1936, the commiteemen said. There have been denials that Hoover attempted to influence the election of a chairman. One report, indeed, was that he thought a Middle Western man most suitable for the post.

PRETTY WEDDING SOLEMNIZED AT COOPERS THURSDAY NIGHT

The marriage of Mr. Robert B. Johnson of Jemison to Miss Bertie Grant of Cooper, at Chestnut Creek Baptist church on Thursday night, June 7, was of unusual interest, because of the prominence of the two young people. The arrangements for the nuptial rites were very carefully and artistically made.

The large altar was centered with an embankment of ferns, topped with twenty-one lighted candles. Mrs. P. M. Pitts of Clanton took her place at the piano, and promptly at 8 o'clock produced the accompaniment for Mr. Pitts to sing "Roses" and "All For You." The ushers, Phillip Nelson and Grady Miner, carried out their parts very fittingly. First flower girl was a sister of the bride, Miss Marjorie Grant, who carried a pretty bouquet of white lilies. The second was little Miss Louise Grant, niece of the bride, who strew rose petals in the path. By this time the minister, Rev. Ellisor, of Verbena, had entered from the rear and occupied his stand in the center of the altar.

The bride, dressed in lovely white net, entered on the arm of her brother, Lee Grant, who gave her in marriage. The groom entered with his brother, Mr. Jack Johnson. Rev. Ellisor very impressively administered the sacred rites, using the ring ceremony, and at the close, dismissed the gathering with prayer.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Luther T. Grant of Coopers, and has been teaching in Chilton county for the past two years. Mr. Johnson is also a teacher of prominence, having been principal of some of the leading junior high schools of the county.

After a brief wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Johnson will make their home at Jemison. They expect to be in Birmingham a greater part of the summer attending college.

Soldiers Plan To Have Stag Party

American Legion to Give Barbecue at Gore's Pond in Near Future

To the Ex-Service Men of Chilton County:

At the last meeting of the Chilton County Post No. 6, a committee was appointed to make arrangements to have a chicken barbecue on some future time and the committee was authorized to secure a speaker to discuss veteran's legislation in all of its phases pertaining to, especially the new change in the laws affecting ex-service men's compensation and benefits.

As chairman of this committee, I have received a reply of my letter from Major W. M. Weston, our state service commissioner, stating that he will be with us on this occasion on Friday, 22nd day of June.

While the Chilton County Post No. 6 is sponsoring this meeting every ex-service man, regardless of whether he is a member of the American Legion or not, is cordially invited to meet with us at Gore's Pond on the Lay Dam Road about two and one-half miles east of Clanton at five p.m. The only requirements and expenses will be that each man is requested, either on Thursday, June 21, or up until two p.m. on Friday 22, to deliver one dressed, frying size chicken to Wade's Ice Plant in the Town of Clanton, at this time getting a receipt for your chicken at the ice plant and this will be your admission to partake of that and other good eats that will be furnished after the speaking. We have decided that this will be purely a stag affair, and earnestly hope that all ex-service men will be present on this occasion.

The chickens will be taken from Wade's Ice Plant at 2 p.m. on the date of the meeting, Friday the 22nd day of this month, out to the pond and barbecued.

This is a wonderful opportunity not only to get first hand information pertaining to the legal rights of all World War veterans, but it is also a wonderful opportunity to learn and know one another as buddies. It is the committee's sincere desire that every ex-service man appoint himself as a committee of one to see that every ex-service man is advised of this occasion and avail himself of the opportunity to enjoy the good time in store for us.

Talk it up, buddies, in your community, and meet us at five p.m. at Gore's Pond on the Lock 12 highway. Remember the date. — Respectfully yours, Percy M. Pitts, chairman of committee.

FORD SALES GAINING SPEED

"Ford car sales are still gaining speed and leading the field," said Rip Burnett, of Clanton Motors, in a statement given out Monday of this week. Mr. Burnett backed up his declaration by quoting the following figures of Detroit Wayne County registrations of new cars for the month of May:

Ford passenger cars	4,950
First competitor	1,143
Second competitor	720

Continuing his statement, Mr. Burnett said: "These figures prove that Ford's product has the stamina to take it with the rest, and is judged the best.

"Detroiters know their cars. Leadership in Wayne County is the result of the general public being educated motor-wise. We say general public, as investigation shows that only ten per cent of the sales noted were to Ford employees."

SELMA ROAD ADVERTISED FOR BIDS ON PAVING

T. V. A. PROGRAM DRAWS ATTACK

Coal and Ice Industries File Objections in Federal Court

Representatives of the coal and ice industries in Alabama today filed suits in federal court in Birmingham in an attempt to prevent the Tennessee Valley Authority and its Electric Home and Farm Authority from competing with them.

The suits also are directed against the Alabama Power Company, because of its alleged acceptance of the TVA electrical appliance sale program and its utility property to the TVA.

Three directors of the authority also are named as defendants and their interpretation of the extent and purposes of the TVA program is caustically attacked.

While the suits are directed principally against the EHFA appliance program, the TVA's right to engage in the operation of electric utilities also is challenged.

President Roosevelt himself is criticized in the suits for issuing an executive order under which EHFA was set up. The executive order "lacked constitutional validity," the plaintiffs charge.

Filed by the law firm of Cabaniss and Johnston, the suits aver that the ice and coal industries in the state are threatened with "irraparable injury or annihilation." The TVA program will displace 20,000 workers in the coal industry in Alabama, the suits allege.

Twenty-five ice companies and 23 coal companies joined in bringing the issue into court. Both bills vigorously attack the legality of the TVA program of hydro-electric power construction and utility operation as a competitive experiment. They insist that the authority should limit itsactivity to the construction of dams to aid navigation and effect flood control and to expenditures for nitrates and other war materials. The court is asked to issue an injunction restraining the defendants not only from going ahead with the EHFA appliance sale program but also preventing the construction of new hydro-electric units in the Muscle Shoals district.

Proposed hydro-electric plants at the six new dams in the Tennessee valley program are intended solely for illegal utility competition, the plaintiffs claim.

The plan of David E. Lilienthal, one of the TVA directors, for the EHFA sale of electric refrigerators, stoves and other electric equipment is to be financed with public funds illegally diverted from recovery appropriations in a program which has no relation to recovery, the bills contend.

Tart references to this alleged misuse of recovery funds are contained in the bills. Statements made by Mr. Lilienthal, Harcourt A. Morgan and chairman Arthur E. Morgan, TVA directors, are assailed. The admission of the authority chairman before the house appropriations committee that the coal industry would necessarily suffer from the TVA program is stressed.

Directors' statements are declared to be acknowledgements that the authority is engaged in a program of competitive utility operation and has plans to spend a possible $100,000,000 for the purchase of public utility systems.

The plaintiffs explain that social features of the TVA program are not attacked. "The speerhead of the attack is the plan of the authority to build hydro-electric plants at the new dams and to enter into a vast utility program in order to show up the weaknesses of state regulated utility operation," the plaintiffs' attorneys said.

E. J. DUNN, 62 SHOT HIMSELF

Suicide In Montgomery Is A Brother of Mrs. N. A. Kicker

D. J. Dunn, 62, of 23 Clitheral Avenue, Montgomery, a conductor for the Louisville and Nashville Railroad for 42 years, Monday night left his family at the dinner table, walked into a garage at the rear of the home and shot himself to death. His action was attributed by friends to despondency over failing health.

Although he had remained active, it was said that Mr. Dunn's health had begun to fail about six months ago. Worry over his condition, it was thought, led him to commit suicide.

Other than being prominent in railroad circles, Mr. Dunn was a steward and trustee of the Dexter Avenue Methodist Church, and he had scores of friends in Montgomery and throughout Alabama.

Funeral plans were in charge of T. F. Leak and Son.

Surviving are two daughters, Misses Ruth and Louise Dunn, both of whom are employes of the State Supreme Court; one son, David Earl Dunn; three grandchildren, Isabel, Patricia and David Earl Dunn, Jr., all of Montgomery; two brothers, W. S. Dunn, of McComb, Miss., and T. R. Dunn, of Georgiania; and one sister, Mrs. Sally J. Kicker, of Clanton.

ALLEGED KIDNAPER ARRESTED HERE LAST TUESDAY NIGHT

A man alleged to have kidnaped two boys in Bessemer was taken off a freight train here Tuesday night by night policemen Browder and Nivens and Deputies Lewis Gillespie and Ellis Ellison, accompanied by another Jefferson County officer. By instructions of Sheriff Hawkins, the prisoner was returned to Birmingham.

It was stated that officers in Calera recovered the two boys who had been kidnaped, taking them off the frieight train as they were being carried by their abductor. The man escaped the Calera officers, and was captured when the train reached Clanton.

MARRIED IN DADEVILLE

Mr. Dovard Teel, of Clanton, was married to Miss Gladys Willis of Dadeville at Dadeville Wednesday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock, the ceremony being performed by a Dadeville minister.

Mr. Teel is a promising young business man of Clanton, the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Walter Teel. He, together with his brother, J. L., are operators of the Teel Service Station, dispensers of Standard gas and oil. They have been operating the business for the past six or seven years.

The bride is the charming daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Willis of Dadeville. The Willis family lived at Reynolds Swimming Pool, on the highway north of Lomax five or six years ago, and while here made a large circle of friends.

After a brief wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Teel will be at their home on East Second Avenue South, Clanton.

FORWARD TO VICTORY!

The Republican primary in Chilton County is over. It got purty hot, but it will cool off since the voters have expressed themselves upon the men and the issues involved. The best thing we can recommend is that we forget everything about the primary campaign but the nominees, and prepare ourselves to move forward to victory for the Republican ticket in November.

We are yet in that period of uncertainty which follows primary elections. Some are expressing their sentiments, prematurely, perhaps, and without due deliberation. Others are witholding expressions for reasons which they will more than likely discard in due time. It will not be long until the true course will be chartered, and it will be, we predict, a united and fairly harmonious determination of enough Republicans to assure the election of our ticket in November.

There is but one feasible and reasonable course for Republicans to take, and that is to support the nominees of the party in November. We have nominated a ticket that is about equally representative of all groups and interests in our party. The nominations were made by the people themselves.

There is some talk that so and so will not support so and so. We can see no justification for such talk nor actions. If Judge Reynolds had won the nomination, he and his friends would be insisting that the Mims followers support the ticket in November. That would be natural and right. Now, since the shoe is on the other foot, and Mims is nominated, he and his friends have a perfect right to command the support of the Reynolds voters. Likewise, it may be argued in the case of every other candidate who was nominated or defeated.

The Union-Banner is not in a mood to argue with the expressed will of the majority of the Republican voters. We are ready to insist that Republicans all rally to our nominees and elect them in November.

DEFEAT OF JUDGE REYNOLDS

The widespread sentiment of the people to "turn out the ins," had a very forceful and significant application in Chilton County last week when the majority of the Republican voters told Judge L. H. Reynolds to "take a back seat," and give his place to J. Z. Mims. This means that next January will bring to an end the occupancy of the Probate office by Judge Reynolds, after a long period of public service that has distinguished him as a man and an official of extraordinary ability, not alone in Chilton County, but throughout Alabama.

The public career of Judge Reynolds has been characterized both by the long time he has held office, and by the many accomplishments that will stand as a monument to his ability in future years. He has been Probate Judge for a longer time than any other man has ever held the office.

Beginning his career in the public service with the old Farmers Alliance in the early nineties, L. H. Reynolds exhibited qualities of leadership and a ready grasp of public questions that were destined to carry him well on his long and successful career.

In the year 1898 he was elected to public office for the first time when he was chosen to represent the people of Chilton County in the Legislature of Alabama. Likewise, he was the choice of the people of the county to represent them in the Constitutional Convention, 1901.

His first term as Probate Judge began in January, 1905, and extended to January, 1911, when he was succeeded by Judge E. B. Deason. Judge Reynolds was the nominee of the Republican party to succeed himself as Probate Judge in the campaign of 1910, when he was defeated by Judge Deason, the Democratic nominee. His open and aggressive championship of the statewide prohibition amendment in the famous campaign of 1909 is said to have contributed to the defeat of Judge Reynolds in the campaign which followed in 1910.

After being out of the public service for six years Judge Reynolds was again the nominee of the Republican party for Probate Judge in 1916, when he was again elected. He took over the office from the hands of Judge Deason in January, 1917, and has continued therein up to the present time.

The political and official career of Judge Reynolds has been the mainstay of the Republican party of Chilton County. He has encountered the most aggressive and sometimes bitter attacks from political opponents, but has always succeeded in coming out on top, so to speak. His political enemies have never been able to turn him down. It remained for the people of his own party on last Tuesday to say he had served them long enough, and to choose another to take his place. This was the only objection that could be lodged against him. His defeat was in no wise a repudiation of nor a reflection upon his official record.

Those close to Judge Reynolds know that he did not want to run again this year. He preferred rather to retire from politics and public life, and take it easy in his remaining years. But such a large following of his friends in the Republican party thought it best that he continue his leadership that he yielded to their demands and submitted the question to the people.

When the people had spoken, it was found that a majority favored his retirement. Some observers have ventured to say that the age and physical condition of Judge Reynolds appears to justify the verdict of the people in selecting another to shoulder the duties of the Probate office and the titular leadership of the Republican party.

When his career is terminated his sun will set illuminating with a golden glow a long, honorable, and useful public service that has meant more to his county and its people than any other man.

Others have promised that they will try to do as much and as well in public office as Judge Reynolds has done. Perhaps they can and will, but it will be universally admitted that it is a big job for anyone to undertake. One who has such hopes is "hitching his wagon to a star."

Whatever may be said now, Judge Reynolds is Chilton County's hero. He has served well, and richly deserves the high place of confidence, respect and esteem he enjoys. No one can ever take that priceless heritage away from him.

COUNTY PICNIC SET FOR JULY 26

Bruce's Grove Will Be Selected As Location For Annual Outing

A tentative date of Thursday, July 26th, has been set by County Agent J. W. Fant, as the time for the annual county-wide picnic at Clanton. It is most likely that Bruce's Grove, one mile north of Clanton, will be selected as the place for holding the picnic this year.

Mr. Fant stated Tuesday that he has inspected the Bruce place and finds that it will be satisfactory for the occasion. The location is only a short distance from the Birmingham Highway, and is easily accessible by two roads that connect with the pavement.

A fine program of speakers and entertainment is being contemplated by Mr. Fant. Arrangements are under way to have a brass band to furnish music, and a loud speaker to carry the proceedings all over the vicinity.

As in past years, there will be barbecue which everyone who wants it can buy to supplement the basket lunches which may be brought from home. The Kiwanis and Pilot Clubs of Clanton, the city and county authorities, all will cooperate in making the occasion a delightful event for everybody.

Clyde Smith, of Birmingham, was arrested by federal officers Tuesday on the highway about ten miles north of Clanton, as he was proceeding toward Birmingham with a Buick car loaded with fine imported liquors.

Officers stated that he had two cases of expensive dry gin and three cases of Sweepstakes whiskey. Sheriff Gillespie and his deputies brought the car and liquor back to Clanton, and Smith was carried to Birmingham by the Federal men. He will be returned to Chilton County to make bond.

Miss Annie Lowe is taking a summer course at Ooltewah, Tenn., in an S. D. A. College.

GLASS KILLING NOT RESULT OF ELECTION

Last week it was stated in The Union-Banner that the fracas between Charlie Glass and Arthur Varden, in which Glass was stabbed to death, was the result of a quarrel over the election. We have been informed that this report was a mistake, and the fight was not about the election at all. We are glad to make this correction.

Taylor's Store Is Being Remodeled

New Front Will Be Built and Another Department Added

Work was started Tuesday morning by a crew of carpenters on execution of plans for remodeling and improving the store building occupied by the Taylor Dry Goods Company.

According to Mr. A. E. Reagan, manager, the new plans call for enlarging the present storehouse so as to include an addition in the rear which will be used as a distinct department for ladies ready-to-wear.

Another feature of proposed improvements will be the arrangement of a shoe department, which will be the most complete and up-to-date of anything of its kind in Clanton.

The front of the building will be built over along new and more modern lines so as to afford a most attractive display of merchandise. Every facility of the store will be improved and beautified, thus affording a better service to customers in every way.

"We feel that our customers are entitled to the very best in merchandise and service," said the management of the Taylor store, "and therefore we concluded to carry out plans of improvement which we have been turning over in our minds for some time past."

MISSION SCHOOL THREE DAYS HERE

Will Be At Baptist Church in Clanton On July the 10, 11 and 12

It is not too early to turn to the calendar and mark July 10, 11 and 12 as special dates to be held open for the Mission Institute, which is to be at Clanton Baptist church on those days. This is a joint affair, Chilton and Unity Association participating equally. Therefore, every church in the two associations should be represented.

It is also a family affair. Classes and entertainment will be provided for every age. Every preacher pastoring a church in either association is urged to be present. Both men and women, boys and girls, children from the age of three to grandparents of any age, are cordially invited. Splendid speakers and teachers have already been secured. Later the complete program will be printed.

This article is to remind you to make ready. Pastors, do not arrange to be holding a revival those days; church officers, plan to secure trucks or buses if your folks do not have many ways to come; W. M. S. presidents and members of the executive of W. M. U., be certain to attend the joint executive board to be held for both associations at Clanton, Friday, June 22, that plans may be made together. This is very important. The meeting opens at 10:30, each one brings her own box lunch; will probably close by two or two-thirty.

Plan to make this institute your family treat for the summer. You and your family will be better and happier Christians if you attend the whole three days. Plan to do that.—Mrs. S. J. Ezell, director.

To the Ex-Service Men of Chilton County:

At the last meeting of the Chilton County Post No. 6, a committee was appointed to make arrangements to have a chicken barbecue on some future time and the committee was authorized to secure a speaker to discuss veteran's legislation in all of its phases pertaining to, especially the new change in the laws affecting ex-service men's compensation and benefits.

As chairman of this committee, I have received a reply of my letter from Major W. M. Weston, our state service commissioner, stating that he will be with us on this occasion on Friday, 22nd day of June.

While the Chilton County Post No. 6 is sponsoring this meeting every ex-service man, regardless of whether he is a member of the American Legion or not, is cordially invited to meet with us at Gore's Pond on the Lay Dam Road about two and one-half miles east of Clanton at five p.m. The only requirements and expenses will be that each man is requested, either on Thursday, June 21, or up until two p.m. on Friday 22, to deliver one dressed, frying size chicken to Wade's Ice Plant in the Town of Clanton, at this time getting a receipt for your chicken at the ice plant and this will be your admission to partake of that and other good eats that will be furnished after the speaking. We have decided that this will be purely a stag affair, and earnestly hope that all ex-service men will be present on this occasion.

The chickens will be taken from Wade's Ice Plant at 2 p.m. on the date of the meeting, Friday the 22nd day of this month, out to the pond and barbecued.

This is a wonderful opportunity not only to get first hand information pertaining to the legal rights of all World War veterans, but it is also a wonderful opportunity to learn and know one another as buddies. It is the committee's sincere desire that every ex-service man appoint himself as a committee of one to see that every ex-service man is advised of this occasion and avail himself of the opportunity to enjoy the good time in store for us.

Talk it up, buddies, in your community, and meet us at five p.m. at Gore's Pond on the Lock 12 highway. Remember the date. — Respectfully yours, Percy M. Pitts, chairman of committee.

Free Education Need Of Nation

University, Ala., June 18. — If we have any devotion to the idea of democracy, if we believe that it inherently offers a surer means to human progress and happiness, then we will insist even more vigorously as did Washington a century ago that education be a matter of first importance, Dr. John K. Norton, professor of education, Columbia University, told an assembly of the University of Alabama Summer School Monday morning. "Furthermore, we will see to it that in purpose and scope education meets the demands of the twentieth century.

"Washington, Jefferson and Madison recognized that a democratic government is no more possible without free education than is life without food. The last century and a half has amply demonstrated this fact," the speaker declared. "No nation in which a substantial percentage of the people are ignorant and illiterate has succeeded in setting up a truly democratic government. In fact recent events warn us by what a slender thread the democratic way of government holds its place even in illiterate nations. Italy and Germany have succumbed to fascism; and there are those even in France and England, who maintain that group intelligence as it operates under democracy cannot successfully cope with the problems which the twentieth century has created. Every year re-emphasizes the fact that genuine democracy is impossible in the absence of free and widely diffused education."

Prof. Norton pointed out that it is becoming increasingly clear that our tremendously complex and inter-dependent economic system will not run of itself. He stated that careful planning and intelligent cooperation are the prize of economic security in a nation such as ours and that there are only two possible auspices under which this planning and collectivistic action can be carried on: under the control of the people as a whole, or under the dictatorship of a small group answerable only to themselves.

After discussing the march of civilization during the past 100 years, the New York educator said that the job of educating for intelligent citizenship is a far more difficult one than it was a century ago. "Hence the school must do a far better job if we are to continue our democratic government, conserve those areas of liberty which are important, and at the same time, carry on those cooperative activities which are essential if civilization is to avoid collapse.

"Our forefathers knew the kind of school appropriate to the conditions existing in the nineteenth century. . . In that century the three R school was sufficient for the common man, but it was necessary to have that much. Recognition of this fact gave our forefathers the courage, in spite of all obstacles and the heavy sacrifices involved, to establish the first free democratic system of education which the world had ever seen.

"It is no longer necessary to fight for the principle of some free education. That battle was won by the rugged pioneers who swept down the Ohio and across the plains to build a school house in every clearing.

"We find ourselves facing new conditions in the twentieth century. The common man can no longer capitalize the opportunity of democracy and achieve happiness through the rudimentary education advantages that sufficed a century ago."

Dr. Norton predicted that before this century closes the schools will provide facilities for meeting educational needs connected with vocational life. He said that the trend is definitely in the direction of giving all youths some type of vocational training—vocational guidance programs, based upon factual knowledge and the best possible predictions of the demand for workers of various types, vocational, vocational training programes in which the school and industry will intelligently cooperate in providing sound theoretical and practical vocational education, these are among the things which were not needed a century ago. They are badly needed, and during the decades which lie ahead must be suitably cared for by the public school.

Dr. Norton said in conclusion that our courage in creating a school that will meet the current demands will determine the role which education will play in the future in fulfilling the hope of the American dream of equal opportunity for life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

ICE CREAM SUPPER AT COOPER

There will be an ice cream supper at Cooper on Saturday night, June 23, for the benefit of the ball club. Everyone is invited.—Carl Vinson.

SUNDAY DINNER SUGGESTIONS

By ANN PAGE

WEATHER is entitled to its important place in conversation because on weather depends our food supply. At present several of our staples are threatened by the drought throughout the Mississippi basin, including grains, for flour and cattle feeding, meat, butter and eggs.

Fruits and vegetables from the east and west coasts and the far south are, however, plentiful and many of them very cheap. Beans, peas, spinach, onions, beets, carrots and cabbage are the outstanding vegetable bargains. Bananas, pineapple and cantaloupes are the outstanding fruits. Watermelons are also coming to market.

The Quaker Maid suggests the following menus:

Low Cost Dinner

Boiled Picnic Ham Potatoes
Shredded Cabbage
Bread and Butter
Lemon Snow Custard Sauce
Tea or Coffee Milk

Medium Cost Dinner

Roast Stuffed Shoulder of Lamb
Creamed Potatoes Mashed Squash
Bread and Butter
Fruit Cup Cake
Coffee Milk

Very Special Dinner

Honeydew Melon
Roast Beef Parsley Potatoes
Pole Beans
Celery Stuffed Tomatoes with Dressing
Rolls and Butter
Spanish Cream
Coffee Milk

QUILLEN'S COMMENT

(By Robert Quillen, in B'ham Age-Herald)

Since the beginning of the year one, the human race has been divided into two groups—the sharp and the simple, the predatory and the gullible, the wolves and the sheep.

And since the beginning the simple have worked patiently to earn their bread and a little surplus and the sharp have taken the surplus away from them.

The first business of civilization and the chief concern of law is to protect the sheep and dull the claws of the wolves.

America's greatness is the work of the wolves—the strong and shrewd and predatory men who developed, and pocketed, the country's resources.

True, humble men cut down the trees and plowed up the sod and dug the mines, but the sharp ones furnished the capital and took the risks and the profits.

This order of things continued, with little change, until March, 1933. Ours was a land of opportunity, which meant a land of unrestrained competition, and the rule was dog eat dog. The strong and the shrewd and the crooked took all they could get and the simple got the crumbs that fell from the table.

Since March, 1933, we have heard much of a New Deal that will give the little fellow a better chance; but all the recovery acts and alphabetical organizations and measures of reform boil down to nothing more than another effort to protect the sheep and trim the claws of the wolves.

There can be no fundamental change until the hearts of men are changed.

If every man, high and low, would purge his heart of selfishness and greed and labor only for the honor and glory and welfare of the nation, the depression and all of its problems would be ended in a day. And all alike would prosper as men never prospered before.

But that is the only alternative. There is no half-way ground. There must be unselfish cooperation or there will be selfish competition.

And selfish competition, despite all restraining laws and all good intentions, will inevitably return to the rule of dog eat dog, skin or be skinned, and the devil take the hindmost.

Mr. Rowland W. Taylor, of the Taylor Wholesale Grocery Company, is back at his desk this week after spending a few days in a hospital in Montgomery.

PITTS THANKS VOTERS

To the Republican Voters of Chilton County:

Allow me to express to you my deep appreciation of the nice vote that I received in the second primary. I trust that should I be elected in the general election I will so conduct myself as a member of the next Legislature that I will not cause you to regret having given me the vote of confidence that I received. I deeply appreciate this nomination at your hands by reason of the fact that I was unable to make a canvass of the county and only relied upon my record in the past and by communicating with you through The Union-Banner.

Since our party has spoken and the majority of the Republicans having nominated a ticket, let each of us put up a united front in behalf of our entire ticket in the November election.

Yours for the success of our entire ticket in the general election.—Gratefully yours, Percy M. Pitts.

Lesson for June 24

REVIEW

GOLDEN TEXT—And he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end. Luke 1:33.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Carrying on Jesus' Work.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Our Saviour and Lord.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Shall I Do With Jesus?

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Comprehensive Program of Jesus.

The method of review must always be determined by the teacher in the light of the grade of the school and the aptitudes of the pupils. For senior and adult classes the best method will be to recall that all the lessons of the quarter are from the Book of Matthew which has as its theme, "Jesus Christ, the Messianic King, and His Kingdom," and then to present each lesson in its relation to the central purpose. The lessons have a threefold unity, namely: one book, one theme, one person.

Lesson for April 1:

The resurrection of Christ is one of the foundation truths of Christianity. It is the grand proof that Christ was what he claimed to be, the Messiah, the Son of God. His resurrection authenticated his claim. By it he was declared to be the Son of God with power.

Lesson for April 8:

The greatest in the kingdom are the childlike. Entrance into the kingdom is infinitely more important than rank therein. There is no way into the kingdom except through the new birth (John 3:3-5).

Lesson for April 15:

In this lesson we have divine instruction as to behavior in case of ill treatment. Those who are Christlike shall suffer persecution. Those who have entered the kingdom by birth from above will have a forgiving spirit.

Lesson for April 22:

Riches are deceitful. Possessors thereof are prone to put their trust in them. It is most difficult for those who are rich to give place to spiritual things.

Lesson for May 6:

To the nation which rejected Jesus as king, he officially presented himself at the appointed time in the counsel of God in the fulfillment of prophecy.

Lesson for May 13:

The parable of the king's marriage feast stresses the necessity of a right relationship with God in order that there be a life of temperance and good citizenship. Our first obligation is unto God.

Lesson for May 20:

In the Olivet discourse Jesus outlines the events to take place in the world in the interval between his crucifixion and his second coming. The parable of the ten virgins shows the right behavior of believers in this present age in view of the coming of the Lord.

Lesson for May 27:

There is a coming judgment for the living nations on the earth. The issue of that judgment is determined by the attitude of the nation toward Christ the King. Their destiny will either be inheritance of the kingdom or eternal fire.

Lesson for June 3:

The cross is the touchstone of human life. The behavior of Mary, Judas, Peter, and others gives us a cross-sectional view of the world.

Lesson for June 10:

The climax of the quarter's lessons is reached in the lesson today. The supreme value of the quarter's lesson centers in the cross. Jesus did not die as a martyr or as an example, but to make an atonement for sin. Teachers, it is not a matter of getting your children to learn the lessons of a great teacher but to induce them to have faith in Christ's sacrificial work.

Lesson for June 17:

The resurrection of Jesus Christ demonstrated his Messiahship and Deity. The command to preach the gospel in all the world is backed by his resurrection power.

The Word of God

In the Word of God may be found every variety of theme that can well be imagined, from the story of creation to the forecast of the new creation. Here is endless diversity—fragments of national history, and of individual biography, poems and speeches, proverbs and predictions, parables and ethical teachings, legal enactments, romances of love, and awful tragedies of judgment, plain precepts for right living, and spectacular dramatic scenes gorgeously painted in oriental imaginery; miracles and mysteries, the prattle of a child side by side with the profoundest discourses of philosophers and sages.—Dr. A. T. Pierson.

Greatest Inspiration

Let us earnestly and solemnly surrender ourselves afresh to the Lord Jesus Christ for service. We cannot afford to let the world find in gain or in pleasure a greater inspiration than we can find in our religion.

Knew What He Was Doing

The infinite God know what he was doing when he gave to his sinning, suffering children a Gospel that covers the heart and renovates the whole man through the incoming of Christ Jesus into the man.

UNIVERSITY NEWS

Speaking before the annual State Education Conference now in session at the University of Alabama on the topic, "Why Are the Schools in Trouble?" Dr. John K. Norton, professor of education, Columbia University, declared Monday evening that one of first weak timbers in our educational sytem is the fact that there exists in the nation today too many people who do not properly appreciate the crucial role which education plays in the preservation and effective operation of that most difficult form of government, democracy.

"Out of a half century of battle which waged from 1925 to 1875 there were hewn the timbers of the structure of the American system of education, free public education. There developed a generation of people who knew from first hand experience how hard won was the battle to make education the right of all rather than a privilege of the few . . .

"That generation is gone. For half a century we have taken our schools for granted . . . and the experience of the last four years has revealed that education is not safe in the hands of a generation which has not had to fight for free schools, and which takes them too much for granted. All goes well until a period is reached when the maintenance of free educational opportunity requires some sacrifice. Then there is a shortage of that sturdy public opinion which created and developed our system of free education during the nineteenth century."

The speaker said that a second reason for the current crisis in education is the obsolete, inequitable, and insufficient plan which exists in this country for raising and distributing school revenues. . . We have attempted to use a nineteenth century plan of governmental organization and system of taxation to support education in the twentieth century. Since 1929 the difficulties resulting from this situation have constituted the major cause of the educational breakdown in many communities. Tax delinquency has developed in a vicious circle to choke off the financial support for education.

"The chaotic conditions resulting have induced a series of unwise tax limitation laws in at least 15 other states within the last two years. I know of no competent student of taxation who does not condemn these measures as unsound in theory and disastrous in practice. Why are they enacted? They are children of the chaos resulting from the vicious circle which has just been described.

"Closely connected with this problem is the inability of the small nineteenth century local school district to deal with the fiscal and administrative problems which it confronts in the twentieth century. The small local governmental unit is unable to administer modern types of taxes, such as those on personal and business income, for example.

"A third reason why the schools are in trouble is the primitive and opportunistic policy which has existed relative to the recruiting and training of teachers, and the standards and practices governing their employment, compensation, and retention in service. Traditionally, all comers have been welcomed into the profession. There is usually a shortage of teachers; there is still a shortage of trained teachers. It has been the policy to place the responsibility for training teachers in a variety of agencies, some of them well, some of them poorly equipped to discharge this difficult task. Too many of our teachers training institutions even today fail to recognize their responsibility of protecting teaching service. In an attempt to keep up enrollments, both promising and unpromising neophites are welcomed to teacher-training institutions. Little attempt has been made to bring about some reasonable balance between the demand for and supply of teachers. Consequently in time of crises, there are a horde of partly trained teachers ready to compete at starvation wages with those who have invested years in professional preparation.

"Teaching service has often been blighted by the disposition of politicians and other self-seeking individuals to extend the spoils system into the schools; by the tendency to look upon the school sytem as a relief agency; and by the disposition of some communities to regulate the affairs of the individual teachers beyond all reason.

"The fourth reason why the schools are in trouble has to do with our education associations. In organizations such as the Alabama Educational Association lies the greatest hope for the alleviation of the teachers' condition, and for the removal of the causes which lie back of the intolerable circumstances under which they are serving.

"But something more needs to be said. The current crisis has revealed weaknesses as well as merits in our existing professional organization.

"The depression has revealed the shortcomings of the existing contacts between local and state teachers' associations on the one hand, and particularly between state and national associations on the other. This condition makes it extremely difficult to enlist the assistance of the educational leadership of the various states in the development of a coordinated policy on matters of common concern in a time of crises.

"Most of the clevages and lack of understanding within the teaching profession are closely associated with the unplanned scheme of educational organization. The lack of commerce which evists between educational organizations, representing the elementary and secondary levels and those representing higher education, is one of these clevages.

"Facilities and techniques are largely lacking at present whereby the teachers of all ranks may intimately and effectively cooperate with intelligent and socially minded citizens in carrying forward a continuous reappraisal of the purposes, procedures, and scope of education. One of the weakest places in our educational dykes today results from the fact that we have lost contact with many intelligent laymen. These citizens have played too small a role in determining the aims and practices of our schools and colleges. They frequently do not understand what we are trying to do.

"Thus far professional organization has failed to provide an adequate agency for the long-time appraisal and planning of education development. This is an age of planning whether we like it or not. Chaos or degeneration are the alternatives to intelligent foresight. This applies to education quite as much as to other areas of our complex life."

The Parent-Teacher Associations of this nation have the greatest opportunities to serve as leaders in helping to bring our country out of the crisis which it has been facing for the past four years. Mrs. Arthur Charles Watkins, education secretary of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, said Monday afternoon in an address before the Institute of the Alabama Congress at the University of Alabama.

Mrs. Watkins said that there is a great need of organizations like the P.-T. A. to organize study groups to care for home conditions, school conditions, and community conditions.

"Many of our American homes have broken down," the speaker said. "There is lack of security. Uncertain incomes have brought about a lack of the necessities of life and a lack of recreation which is needed for happiness. Our people have winessed a crumbling of standards; they are lacking in ideals; religion is fading; there is a lack of faith."

Dealing with conditions in the schools, the speaker said that teaching loads have been increased, and that there is a great lack of individual training. Crowded curriculum has brought about lack of coordination, while decreased appropriations have created a lack of buildings and equipment, lowered salaries and lack of security.

In the communities, the speaker declared, there has been a let-down on the part of the police. There are transients galore, but no agencies to meet the situation. There has been an increase in crime. Decreased funds for recreation needs have also brought about a lack of vision.

Monday morning Mrs. Watkins conveyed to the Alabama Congress greetings from the National. She called upon every member of the Alabama Congress to become the best member possible and to realize that each individual member's success spells National Congress success.

Other speakers during the morning were Mrs. James Fitts Hill, of Montgomery; Dean Agnes Ellen Harris; Secretary Frank L. Green, A. E. A.; Dr. Danyiu Belser, University.

One has the temerity to disagree with the president of the United States. "It is time to stop crying, 'wolf'," he says. Wolf, not in sheep's clothing, but in the garments of crushing taxation, is at the door and is not to be driven off for some time. It is the duty of the tax collectors to see that this tax wolf stays at the door. A more intimate acquaintance with this wolf will begin when the new tax bills are delivered.—Charleston News and Courier.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

(By Frank P. Litschert

The Republican National Committee in session in Chicago, in adopting a declaration of policy and in selecting Henry P. Fletcher, of Pennsylvania, as national chairman in the place of Everett Sanders, who resigned on account of ill health, was probably building better than it knew and very likely better than anyone yet realizes.

In the first place the declaration of principles was one on which all sections of the party may unite. While recognizing problems of social legislation which should be solved for the future progress of the country the declaration adds that "these problems can best be solved within the framework of American institutions in accordance with the spirit and principles of the founders of the Republic, without the destruction of individual freedom."

The statement further criticizes "a small group in Washington, vested with temporary authority" which, it charges "is seeking covertly to alter the framework of American institutions." The statement continues: "They seek to expand to the utmost limit the powers of central government. In place of individual initiative they seek to substitute complete government control of all agricultural production, of all business activity." The declaration, which also terms a balanced budget indispensable, was approved by the so-called members of the committee alike.

But, after all, the most important work of the meeting was the selection of a new chairman. The man named is Henry P. Fletcher, a distinguished American and a staunch Republican. Efforts to label him as a member of one faction or another seem rather unconvincing in view of the fact that he was supported by Republican leaders of various intra-party groups. The fact is that Mr. Fletcher had never been a factionalist in the Republican party. His record in public is one which any American might feel proud to possess. He entered the practice law in 1894, after graduating from LaFayette College, in Pennsylvania, and left the practice a few years later to join Theodore Roosevelt's regiment of Rough Riders, for the Spanish-American War. He then served for two years in the Phillipines with the rank of first lieutenant and later entered the diplomatic service. He has been American ambassador to Chile, Mexico, Belgium and Italy. During one year of President Hoover's administration he served as chairman of the U. S. Tariff Commission. In the 1932 campaign he campaigned actively for the Republilan ticket and acted as chairman of the Republican party's eastern finance committee.

The Reublican party is now ready to begin the task of rebuilding its machinery for the campaign of 1936. Mr. Fletcher's long experience in public life and his training as a soldier and a diplomat will serve him in good stead. He is a man of engaging personality and those who know him best say that he has the punch necessary at this stage of the political game. The fact that he was one of the Roosevelt Rough Riders would indicate that such statements are well founded. About the only criticism offered to Mr. Fletcher's elevation to the chairmanship is that he lives in Pennsylvania, and not in the west. But after all, a man's home is where his heart is, and basing our opinion on this fact we have a hunch that Mr. Fletcher's real home is not Pennsylvania, but the United States. His past record would seem to indicate as much. It is more than possible and easily probable that the Republican National Committee did a better job at Chicago than it realizes.

BUREAUCRACY AN ISSUE

Usually the so-called "off-year" elections are governed a great deal by local and sectional issues. That national issues will be in the foreground in the campaign of 1934, much more than is usual, however, is evidenced by the discussions of the "New Deal" to be heard on every side. The Roosevelt "New Deal" has been in effect now for more than a year—it will be a year and a half by the time the November election rolls around. The time for political adjournment is evidently now over. The period of experimentation is drawing near to its end also, and the people are going to be called on this year to pass on what the administration is actually accomplishing. The opposition leaders are finding the growth of bureaucracy one big issue of the coming election. This issue was well outlined from the opposition viewpoint the other day by congressman Chester C. Bolton, of Ohio, chairman of the Republican Congressional Committee, in a radio address in which he said, in part:

"The Republican party from its birth has been opposed to bureaucratic government. The Democratic party under its long line of leadership, up to the advent of the present administration, denounced all tendency toward such a system of government. Bureaucratic government has been denounced in vigorous and picturesque language by statesmen whose utterances for centuries have led the thought of the world. In varied phrases it has been declared to be the worst form of government that could torture and afflict mankind. But I do not inveigh merely against a tendency in this country toward a bureaucratic form of government. We have one now—brought to us by the new deal.

"Fed on fabulous sums of the people's money, this bureaucracy has grown with astonishing rapidity. In its various branches and activities it has regimented the farmer, disturbed labor, placed impossible restrictions on business and increased the cost of living without the compensating increase in purchasing power promised so profusely by its misguided sponsors. In short, it has meddled to no purpose, so far as results have shown, in everyone's private affairs, after the manner and fashion of all bureaucracies of all time. Made desperate by the futility of their effort, its sponsors, if not checked, inevitably will demand more and more power and undertake more and more experiments.

"Republicans regard such a system of government as pernicious, undemocratic and un-American — not justified by any emergency, past or present—and will fight to rid the country of it with all the vigor at their command. * * * *

"Republicans appreciate that under complex economic conditions of modern times more government is required than in Jefferson's day, when he announced the principle long subscribed to by men of both parties that 'government is best which governs least.' But they would not reverse the dictum. They cannot now subscribe to the view that government is best which governs least.

"They cannot bring themselves to believe that the advent of the 'new deal' put in reverse the most fundamental truths woven into the fabric and spirit of our institutions. They would change the instrumentalities of government as needed to conform to new conditions, but never in the process would they undermine the solid foundation on which the whole structure rests. They still cling to the ideal of individual liberty—call it "rugged individualism' if you will, either in praise or derision. They still believe in a sound money system, in the 'bill of rights' and inviolability of all guaranties under the Constitution.

"Most of all, they believe in a representative form of government, as provided for in the Constitution, with its checks and balances between legislative, executive and judicial branches, and all that the term implies. They do not want it changed to any other form or tendency. In the campaign to come they will endeavor to send men to represent them in the legislative branch of the national government who holds to this view and will remain steadfast in this faith."

FIGHT NOT FINISHED

"All of the candidates for Congress from Alabama, with the possible exception of Major Joe Stearnes, in the Fifth District, are sitting pretty. The Fifth District has always had a big nest of Republicans, and they can sometimes cause a lot of trouble. Republican opposition is usually expected as a matter of course. They probably haven't any more chance in the Fifth District this year than they have anwhere else.—Alabama Journal.

All of which The Journal says to make the implication that Republicans are out of the picture and down and out everywhere. Newspapers like the Journal will sing the blissful chimes of Republican decadence until one of these days they will be shocked into sensibility by the explosion of a political Vesuvius right in the middle of the Democratic playhouse. Then the tune will change.

As to Republican strength in Alabama Congressional districts, that has been reduced to a minimum by the Gerrymandering process of our Legislature. Get a map and look at the Fifth Congressional district. It reaches from Tallassee to Tennessee, over half the length of the state.

Why this unhandy and inconvenient "stretching out" of the district? It was done in order to place DeKalb and Etowah Counties, with many Republican voters, in the same district with enough predominantly Democratic counties to nullify the Republican strength. The old Seventh District was getting too uncomfortable, and the Democratic Legislature thought it easier to legislate the Republican influence out of existence than to vote it out at the polls. That is good democracy, do you not think? Yes, the fight is not finished.

MAN IN THE MOON

Hands Across the Sea

Back in World War days, when France had her back to the wall, and the British were starving, on acocunt of the fierce German blockade, Uncle Sam's entrance into the war was a God-send, and America was heralded as the second savior of the world. The German war lords, dreaming of world power, had pushed to within a few miles of Paris, and daily big shells dropped into the French capital, while, by night, night raiders bombed the city from the air at will. France was on her back, gasping for breath, beaten to a frazzle. The English, who raise only a small part of their food, were beginning to fell the pinch of starvation. Germany had given an ultimatum that supply ships of all nations would be sunk on sight, and had carried out their threat, slowly starving the English into submission. Begging hands stretched across the sea to the United States for help. France begged for munitions and men to stave off the invader. England begged for food and more men and munitions. The United States heard their call. Uncle Sam put millions of men into uniform, trained them, built ships to carry them across the pond to France, and sent supplies of every kind to care for them. We built more ships and destroyers and shipped food to the English. In addition to this Uncle Sam lent them millions of dollars with which to buy elsewhere. Americans were asked to buy Liberty Bonds, to "give until it hurt," and they responded nobly. We asked nothing for ourselves—we paid our way through the war. America asks nothing for this service now—all we ask is payment of hard cash that we lent them, and have even split that up into installments that our "allies" may be able to pay. While the memory of the war was fresh, these nations paid, but their payments gradually grew less and less. Then "token" payments were made. Later a "moratorium" was allowed them, merely a renewal of their note, giving them more time to pay. And now these nations, who a few short years ago heralded the United States as the savior of humanity and civilization, brand our nation as a Shylock, and sent us a curt refusal of further payment. That's gratitude for you. But there will come another day. The only hands we see stretched to us now are those which would steal our foreign trade. But Germany is even now preparing for war, and has been for some time, and it would be no surprise to see them go on the war path again at any time. The French and British laugh and thumb their noses at us now, but "he who laughs last laughs best." Our geographical position is an almost perfect defense. We can take care of ourselves. They can't.

Taters and Starch

Over in Georgia a new industry is about to be born. At Quitman, a $268,000 factory is being built to make starch from sweet potatoes. The firm is to be known as Potato Products, Inc., and backed by Georgia capital entirely. The State of Georgia raises lots of potatoes already, but with the market slowing down, it was a case of raising less potatoes or finding some new use for them. Hence the starch-making adventure. However, as in the case of the Southern paper manufacturers, the national tariff commission will first pass on the building of the factory, and the making of starch before the Georgia products can be marketed. I do not know if we import starch or not, and I don't suppose the tariff authorities know either, else they would not take time out to see if the home industry will conflict with imports. If it is found that this new industry will seriously cut down imports in any way, it will be quashed. The authorities of the new company say that ultimately there will be nine factories scattered all over Georgia to completely consume Georgia's surplus potato crop, and, maybe, bring about a new money crop for farmers. However, as said before, if it intereferes with imports, it will not be allowed to operate. That is the new system the brain trust is working on. In other words, they say that if there is something no one else cares to make and sell to us, then they will allow Americans to make it, but if some foreign country decides to make it and sell to us, then our home factories must close, "in the interest of trades relations." It's a crozy idea, but the brain trust has so decided. May the time soon come when the national authorities will stop thinking of the welfare of other nations, and try to help our own people a bit.

$300,000 of Hard Luck

One of the biggest diamonds in the world, the Hope diamond, is making the front pages of the daily newspapers again. The big diamond, weighing 44½ carats, and valued at $300,000 now belongs to Mrs. Edward McLean, wife of the former owner and publisher of the Washington (D.C.) Post. It's history dates back for centuries, and has a record of bringing disaster to its owners. It is said to have been stolen from a Hindu temple centuries ago, and when it was missed, its owner cursed it and its holders for all time. Certainly it sounds silly, but still facts prove that ill luck has certainly followed it. Each owner of the gem has suffered. Kings have fallen from power while in possession of it. The fall of empires is attributed to it, because their heads have owned the Hope diamond. Louis XVI bought it and gave it to Marie Antoinette shortly before her people rebelled, and, after a bloody revolution, put her to death on the guillontine, the method of capital punishment in France. Finally the big hard luck diamond found its way to America, and with it it's bad luck. Edward B. McLean bought it, and a short time later his firm failed, and The Washington Post went into the hands of receivers. A few nights ago Mrs. McLean attended a dinner party, wearing the diamond, and laughed when a reporter mentioned its bad omen. "I can't believe that old story," she said. "Any way, I love the Hope diamond, and if its sorry charm holds, then I will have to bear the bad luck. I'm keeping it." It may be $300,000 worth of bad luck, but I can mention lots of folks who would take the risk.

A New Champion

Nowadays, people don't follow the fight racket like they once did. There was a time when anyone could tell you who the heavyweight champion of the world was. Anyone from backwoodsmen to bankers could tell you. People named their children for them. I am sure must everyone knows people named Fitzsimmons or Corbett; there are many Dempseys, too—all named for the champion of the day. Jess Willard had his namesakes, as have all the others, and the negroes incited riots all over the country when Jack Johnson became champion. When I first began taking interest in who the champion might be, the giant negro, Johnson, was the champ, and I can remember seeing people grit their teeth about it, and well do I remember the rejoicing when a white man wore the "belt" again. And, as to that belt, at that time I was told that the champion was given a diamond-studded belt, denoting his prowess, and the fact that he was champ of them all. I do not know if this is true, but certainly the people always speak of a championship fight as "a scrap for the belt." And now the good old U. S. A. has brought home "the belt" again. In late years it has been carried to Germany by Schmeling, and then to Italy by Carnera, the man-mountain, the biggest champion ever. A Jew, Max Baer, of California, took on the champion, Carnera, last Thursday night in New York in a scheduled 15-round scrap, and whipped him to a frazzle in 11 rounds. Carnera weighed in at 263 pounds, and was six feet and five inches high, while Baer weighed 210, and stood six feet and two inches. Yet the smaller man had big Carnera on the mat three times in the first round, and several times thereafter. In the tenth, Baer ripped into Carnera like a buzz-saw, and at the end of the round Carnera was begging the referee to stop the fight. To begin the 11th, Carnera came out slowly, to meet the human buzz-saw again. Baer cut his face to ribbons, and rocked him with body blows that would have killed anyone except the giant, yet he came gack for more. Finally, with Carnera senseless, and out on his feet, the referee stopped the scrap and awarded the championship to Baer. And now we have a new champion, Max Baer. I wonder how many namesakes he will have.

Our Baseball Team

Again Clanton has a first rate baseball team. Marvin Marcus is manager of the club, and is making good at the post. The team has beaten Maplesville, Jemison, Prattville twice, and Selma three times, for their seven straight victories. The club is made up of fighters, too. They don't give up. Last Saturday, at Prattville, the boys had managed to get only two safe blows off a left-hander, through the first eight innings. They were trailing, four to one, as they went into the ninth, but they didn't give up, just kept plugging away. Hayes singled, Nivens tripled, Simms singled, and playing heads-up baseball, took full advantage of a misplay to advance to scoring position. And then Golson singled, to tie up the ball game. The old game rocked on until the 11th inning, with the boys fighting every inch. And in this frame they arose to the job of winning their game, and then settling down to hold the opposition at all costs. That's fight for you—the difference between a winner and a loser. All the boys are home folks too—boys we all know, and have seen grow up right here with us, with one or two exceptions. I'll name them: "Gabby" Tiffin, "Bull" Watkins, Golson, Beasley, Bill Armstrong, "Dutch" Nivens, "Larrupin' Lou" Littlejohn, Alex Hayes, Charlie Eubanks, Cecil Jones, Benson Simms, Bill Blood, Bill Simpson, and others. And, during the last few days Dock Baker has returned from Eufaula, and is expected to play with the locals. The Clanton Club is having a great time of it all, and at the same time trying to furnish local baseball fans a good brand of baseball. They deserve your support. The admission is low enough for anyone. All the club wants is to make enough to buy its equipment and pay its expenses while away on road games. They play without pay. Come out Thursday afternoon (today) and see for yourself that we have a good ball club. So far they have played seven games and won seven. That isn't "pretty good"—That's perfect. "Come to see us some time".—Man in the Moon.

EDITOR FOWLER WINS

Luther Fowler, editor of The Shelby County Reporter, at Columbiana, proved last week that it is still possible for a newspaper man to win in a political battle. Or rather the voters of Shelby County proved it by giving Mr. Fowler the Democratic nomination for Tax Assessor in the run-off primary.

Most of the newspaper editors who ventured into politics this year were given the "cold shoulder" by the voters. Maybe the newspaper boys looked too much like the "ins" and fell victim to the seemingly universal determination of the electrate to turn public affairs over to a new bunch.

Luther Fowler deserved to win in Shelby. He has been the object of a measure of political persecution in his county for some months. Charging that he was disloyal to the Democratic party, opposition to him and his paper went so far as to organize another newspaper in competition with The Reporter. Fowler stayed by his guns and the people of the county vindicated him with their votes.

If a neighbor editor (and a Republican) might be pardoned for expressing a friendly interest in Democratic party affairs "across the border," we would say that the people of Shelby, in supporting and nominating Luther Fowler, administered a well-deserved drubbing to those who would have persecuted a good, clean, honest man without just cause.

NEW DEAL STRIKES

Strikes have been a normal accompaniment of recovery in American economic history. The present epidemic of unrest might be taken as an indication of reviving business—if the economic life of the country were proceeding normally.

Unfortunately, what recovery has been achieved has been anything but normal. And the least analysis of the strikes now harassing the nation reveals the fact that they represent a wholly new period in labor troubles in this country.

The vicious circle of rising wage costs and rising prices compelled by the administration's policies has left neither manufacturer nor worker better off. The former cannot increase wages because he has no increased revenue to divide with his employes. Most workers recognize this fact. They realize that, speaking generally, no normal advance has occurred to justify a demand for higher wages.

The strikes occurring from coast to coast have, in fact, no such basis. They are not normal demands for a share in returning prosperity. They spring from a far different source—the incitement of labor leaders seeking to enlarge their membership rolls, their revenues and their powers. In few cases has any issue of wages been raised. In one form or another the dispute is over an effort to force the complete unionization of an industry or a plant heretofore unorganized.

The present strikes are thus as abnormal, as artificially caused, as are the wage cost and the price level of today. All three are results of the New Deal effort to place reform ahead of recovery and remake the economic and social structure of the nation while in the throes of a depression. The fatal section 7a of the national recovery act has misled thousands. Hopelessly ambiguous in its language, it has lent itself to the machinations of radical leaders everywhere. The administration's attitude toward labor has held many contradictions. But the encouragement given to compulsory organization has been strong.

A tied-up plant takes dollars out of the pockets of workers, out of the pockets of business and out of the wealth of the nation. When the balance sheet if the new deal is struck—and the hour of reckoning seems not far off—the responsibility of the Roosevelt dictatorship for this incitement to strikes may well be one of the costliest items on the debit side.—New York Herald-Tribune.

REFUGE NEWS

As next Saturday and Sunday are our regular preaching days, let us look forward to the same and try to be present at each service on Saturday, Sunday and Sunday night.

It looks as if, when God gives us health and strength to work hard all the week, we could pick up enough courage to go to Sunday School and Church on Sunday. On the road to and from church we can see squads of people whom we know ought to be in service for their Lord. It seems that they think that they are good enough without going to church. Let us not think that we can ever get too good for there is always room for us to do better.

Let us not form the habit of saying we don't feel like going or that we are about half sick, for God will not accept such excuses. Let us get up next Sunday morning saying that we are going to Church. Come with a well prepared lesson for we have review next Sunday.

There is sickness in the community, but we are glad to know that little Thelma Minor who has been very sick, is some better.

Mr. and Mrs. R. N. Connell are back here from Sycamore. We are always glad to have them with us.

County Farm Agent's Notes

Compiled by J. W. Fant, County Farm Demonstration Agent for Chilton County

USE SURPLUS MILK IN MAKING CHEESE

Auburn, Ala.—The successful making of American cheese for home consumption by farm women in five Alabama counties has demonstrated the fact that surplus milk may be utilized in this way to form a valuable addition to the rural diet.

The factory method is not recommended for making this type of cheese on the farm when it is to be made only in small quantities. The simpler and shorter method, known as the hand-stirred or granular process, is more suitable on farms, according to H. L. Wilson of the Bureau of Dairy Industry, Washington.

All equipment and supplies necessary for making cheese by this method is usually available on the farm as follows: 1 floating dairy thermometer; 1 large dish pan, tinned lard can, or wash boiler; 1 knife with long blade; 1 wire egg-whip with cross wires; 1 strainer; 1 two-quart dipper; 1 tea cup; 1 tablespoon; 1 cheese hoop and handage; 1 press; rennet extract or rennet tablets; cheese color and salt.

Instructions in making cheese in the home may be obtained from two publications, "Making American Cheese on the Farm for Home Consumption," Bureau of Dairy Industry Washing; and Farmers Bulletin 1191, "Making American Cheese on the Farm," U. S. Department of Agriculture, Washington.

The cheese press is easily constructed, necessitating the purchase of no materials that are not readily available on the farm.

CROP CONDITION AVERAGE

Montgomery, Ala.—Crop conditions in Alabama are much above the average for the United States, reports F. W. Gist, statistician of the department of agriculture.

"Wheat in Alabama is 10 per cent above the United States average, oats 25 per cent above, hay 20 per cent above, pastures 27 per cent above, peaches 13 per cent above, and potatoes 6 per cent above," he reports. "This fact is attributable to the absence of drouth conditions in Alabama."

Mr. Gist says that the prospect for feed crops is, on a whole, as good as, or better than, the average in the state. The indicated production of wheat in the state is 36,000 bushels against 34,000 last year and a 10-year average of 31,000.

The condition of oats on June 1 was 72 per cent against 61 per cent last year and a 10-year average of 74 per cent. Tame hay was 73 per cent compared with a 10-year average of 76 per cent. Pasture was 80 per cent compared with a 10-year average of 81 per cent.

CANNING TIME HERE AGAIN

Plans for a most extensive canning season are already under way in Chilton County, according to Miss Ruth Pardue, county home demonstration agent, who says that canning enthusiasm is running high.

"Everywhere I turn," says Miss Pardue, "I find the farm women at work on their spring and summer canning. As fast as each garden product is ready on vine, bush or what not, they are waiting to put into cans or jars all that is not needed for current use, and so have them ready against the off-seasons. The use of improved equipment for home canning is largely responsible for the great increase in the number of quarts put up in the county during the past year.

As soon as a woman knows she may can in complete safety from any danger of botulism and without discouraging, expensive spoilage, she is more anxious to invest her time and products this way. The days of messy, uncertain and unsafe canning are rapidly being left behind. Nowadays there is hardly anything edible which cannot be successfully canned."

Demonstrations will be given during the canning season on every type vegetable in this county. Along with the demonstrations of the use of the pressure cooker and tin can sealer will be explained and an opportunity given for anyone present to bring up her own particular canning difficulty or problem. These demonstrations will be open to all interested women of the community. The following is the June itenerary. All demonstrations will be held at 2 p.m.:

June 21, Sardis, Mrs. E. W. Clinner.
June 22, Verbena, schoolhouse.
June 23, Office day.
June 25, Office day.
June 26, Poplar Springs, Mrs. Mattie L. Crew.
June 27, Mineral Springs, To be decided.
June 28, Minooka, Mrs. Donald Williams.
June 29, Office day.
June 30, Office day.

Anyone who needs help with their canning will please get in touch with Miss Pardue at her office.

PULPWOOD AND THE FARMER

Montgomery, Ala.—That the southern farmer is often more than a farmer as pointed out by the Alabama State Commission of Forestry in a statement issued from Montgomery. The rectangular system of land survey used over the greater part of the United States results in much forest land being included with farm land in the same parcel. To make full use of his resources, therefore, the landowner may be something of a forester as well as a farmer, according to the Commission. In fact, the production of certain timber yields oftentimes brings the owner of the land more net cash than the agricultural crops. Under present conditions this is particularly true of timber of size and quality suitable for the manufacture of paper pulp.

About 27 per cent of Alabama's 22½ million acres of woodland is owned by farmers. Usually the woodland is comprised within the same survey tract as the agricultural holdings, and thus becomes a consideration in the management of the unit as a whole. With increasing extension of the paper pulp manufacturing industries in the south, Alabama farmers have an excellent opportunity to secure continuous revenue from their woodlands through the adoption of simple forestral practices carried out by themselves, their employes and tenants with the aid of farm animals and equipment which during much of the year would otherwise be idle.

The most feasible wood for paper pulp in Alabama is that of the various species of pine. Resinous heartwood is objectionable. However, heartwood does not form in southern pines until 20 to 25 years of age. Meanwhile by this time the trees have reached a size suitable for pulpwood. The landowner's efforts, therefore, should be toward developing a fairly uniform annual yield of young pine trees to be cut so as to leave the area in a continuously productive condition.

The cutting of everything that can be sold at the moment is usually a very bad policy, since this procedure is apt to leave the tract in an unproductive condition with little prospects of further yields for many years. It is far better to cut every year only trees which have reached their maximum value for paper pulp purposes, leaving the younger and smaller trees to mature year after year indefinitely, each year's yield being cut as it reaches proper size.

Alabama pine lands under sensible management can easily be made to produce an average of a cord of pulpwood per acre per annum. A conservative estimate of the productivity of the woodlands embraced in the same ownership with the farms indicates a yield of approximately five million cords per annum. In the past and during the present hard times the sale of forest products has saved thousands of farm families from acute distress, and with the prospective development of the pulpwood industry in Alabama this source of livlihood gives promise of substantial expansion.

GAME AND FISH NEWS

Montgomery, June 19.—The newest recruit to join Alabama's fast-growing conservation army is the Keel Mountain Conservation Association.

Harry B. Williamson of Gurley, was elected president of the association which was organized early in June and has a membership embracing both Madison and Jackson Counties.

The first goal of the association is the location of a wild life restoration center on Keel Mountain where, Mr. Williamson says, there are 14,000 acres ideally located for the development of wild life. He said the association is hopeful of interesting the president's committee on wild life restoration in the proposition.

"Keel Mountain is almost exactly divided between the two big counties of Jackson and Madison, is filled with springs, caves, ravines and every conceivable sort of natural protection for wild life. It looks straight into the great Paint Rock and Flint River valleys and is abundantly covered with natural foods for game and birds.

"Our game is almost extinct and would have been had it not been for the fact that our sportsmen got together and mutually agreed that they would protect the game by refraining from hunting in this territory.

The sportsmen of both counties are much interested in the project.

FORD PRICES REDUCED

Detroit, Mich., June 19.—Reductions of $10 to $15 in list prices of 1934 Ford V-8 passenger cars and $10 to $20 in list prices of Ford V-8 commercial cars and trucks were announced last week by the Ford Motor Company effective Friday, June 15.

Ford prices had remained unchanged since the introduction of the 1934 Ford V-8 last December, the Ford Motor Company not having participated in the recent general automotive price increase. The reductions announced are, therefore, a decrease in the original prices.

The price reduction on the standard and de luxe Tudor Sedans, most popular individual models in point of sales, is $15. Prices of other standard and de luxe body types were reduced $10, except prices of the roadster, phaeton and cabriolet, de luxe types, which remain unchanged. Both standard and de luxe passenger cars have the same V-8 engine and 112-inch wheelbase chassis. Body types for both are identical except for the de luxe equipment.

BOB JONES

COMMENTS ON HERE AND HEREAFTER.

The Bible is a very plain book. We remember expressions like these: "A dog returns to his vomit." "A hog returns to his wallow in the mire." If a modern preacher used such language on Sunday morning in the average church, he would shock the sensibilities of some of the good sisters and even some if the brethren.

A hog is a hog and a dog is a dog. You can't make anything out of a hog but a hog and you can't turn a dog into any other kind of animal. You can dress up a hog in silk and satin, put diamond bracelets on every leg and beautiful ear rings in his ears, keep him in your home for a few months and let him sleep in your nicest bed and feed him at your table three times a day, but if you turn him outdoors he will lie down in a mud hole. The reason for this is he's a hog. You can raise a dog in your home and feed him the nicest food. Give him a bath twice a day and let him sleep in bed with you at night, but if you turn him out to run around town he will eat vomit. The reason is—he's a dog.

Man is different. He is born a sinner. He died in Adam. He has a tendency to lie, steal, covet to be selfish. He was born with evil propensities—but man can be changed. Jesus Christ can make him over again. Man can get a new nature. Jesus can turn a thief into an honest man. He can turn a liar into a truthful gentleman. He can make a drunkard sober. He can take a fallen woman and make her as pure as snow on a mountain top. It takes regenrating grace to make the change. Unless a man is born again you can reform him, but if you turn him loose with temptations he is like a hog or a dog, he will go back to his vomit or to wallow in the mire.

Clanton Wins Seven In Row

Clanton defeated Maplesville 7 to 4 Tuesday afternoon of last week at the local park. The locals got 10 hits to 6 for Maplesville, while Clanton was running wild on the paths, stealing 5. Potts, Maplesville hurler, whiffed 7 and walked 7. Golson struck out 4 and walked one in the six innings he worked. Easterling worked the last three innings; beginning wild, he walked the first two batters but settled, and allowed only one hit, a single, during his stay on the mound.

This is Clanton's third straight victory. This game also saw the entrance of Nivens, a slugger, to the line-up. Nivens is rated as a good hitter, although he failed in his three trips. One of his hot grounders was a little too warm to be fielded conveniently, but not good enough to get a hit on.

WILL TEACH WRITING AT CLANTON GRAMMAR SCHOOL

Beginning July 9th Prof. J. C. Brown will teach a writing school at the Clanton Grammar school building. He will have both night classes and day classes. The day classes will be from 8 to 10 o'clock and the night classes from 8 to 9 o'clock. He will teach five days and nights a week.

Mr. Brown is the foremost teacher of writing in this section of Alabama. He has been in the work for the past several years, and is prepared to give really high class training in both business and fancy penmanship—the same kind that one might receive from the leading colleges. And his tuition is within the reach of everyone. Folks do not often have the opportunity of taking writing lessons equal to those offered by Mr. Brown.

Prof. Brown will be glad to have you confer with him if you are interested in either the day or the night classes, or you may see Mr. Callen or Mr. Smith at Peoples Savings Bank. tf

Mr. and Mrs. H. Pinkerson have taken up residence in the Flem Higgins home recently vacated by Dr. C. O. Lawrence and family.

MUSIC TABLETS FOR SALE AT UNION-BANNER OFFICE

The Union-Banner is offering for sale again this year their "Banner Music Tablets." This new venture proved successful last year, the music teachers over the county using these tablets very generously. Some improvements have been made over last year, and it is hoped that the sales will even surpass those of last year. The price remains the same as last year, and they are now ready for use.

J. Z. Mims Thanks People For Votes

Editor Union-Banner:

Give me space in your columns to thanks my friends for their loyal support in my campaign for the nomination for Probate Judge.

I cannot command adequate words to fuly express my thanks and appreciation to you for your support and untiring efforts, but from the depth of my heart, I thank you, and I shall always have a warm place in my heart for each of you.

I have been asked several time how I won the nomination. I am unable to explain it to you, except I believe God still deals in the affairs of men. I worked hard myself and then by the aid of the most loyal and devoted friends a man can have. I did not do it myself but my friends did it. I give my friends and God credit for my success in this race.

To you who saw fit and deemed it your duty to support my opponent, I have no ill will, but rather admire you for your stand. I am glad we have the right to vote for men of our choice. I am your friend and I believe you are my friends, therefore, since I received a majority of the votes cast in the primary for the office of Probate Judge I solicit your vote and influence in the general election this fall. I want you to feel free to talk the matter over with me and to remember I am your friend.

I am very much gratified over the splendid vote polled in our primary and I feel sure that with the continued interest exhibited in the primaries we will be able to elect our entire ticket this fall with as large and probably the largest majority ever. So let me ask now that one and all begin to do our bit to help elect our entire ticket, that the people of this county may still have good government and that the people's interest as a whole may continue to be looked after by the county's officials.

Should I be elected to the office of Judge of Probate, I assure you that I will be in position to serve each person impartially; that I will give you my very best, God being my helper.

We have a splendid ticket nominated, so may I, in conclusion, again ask that every citizen interested in good clean government, get behind the ticket and help land it this fall.—Yours very truly, J. Z. Mims.

$5.25 BALE GIN FEE PROPOSED

Montgomery, Ala., June 18.—Unable to reach an agreement on a maximum price for cotton ginning in Alabama, the conference of ginners, state and federal officials late Monday recessed until Tuesday with a proposal before them for a maximum price of approximately $5.25 a bale plus bagging and ties.

The proposal was made Monday afternoon by W. D. Claybrooke, Albertville, Ala., president of the Alabama Ginners Association, who said that this price, substantially higher than Alabama's average for the last five years, was justified by the improved ginning equipment required under the proposed marketing agreement for the cotton ginning industry.

The proposal called for a price of 35 cents per 100 pounds of seed cotton plus bagging and ties. Approximately 1,500 pounds of seed cotton are required to make a 500-pound bale of cotton, and ginning prices in the past few years have ranged from $3 to $4 a bale with bagging and ties included, according to agricultural officials here.

Meanwhile, the conference appointed a temporary state committee of five to work with federal officials in ironing out difficulties in the marketing agreement. Those appointed were N. B. Ware, Tuscumbia; C. B. Patterson, Decatur; J. C. Hudson, Monroeville; E. O. Hall, Montgomery; and Park Thompson, Goshen.

More than 250 ginners and farmers attended the conference, presided over by G. J. Gilford, of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, at Washington.

The Story of the Bible Told in Pictures

Murder of Abel and Curse of Cain.—Cain was a tiller of the land, but Abel was a keeper of sheep. Both brought offerings to the Lord, Cain the fruit of the ground and Abel the firstlings of his flock, their sacrifices being shown in the right background of this picture. According to Gen. 4: 4-5, the Lord approved of Abel's offering, but disapproved of Cain's offering. Jealousy sprang up in Cain's heart toward his brother Abel, and he rose up against Abel and killed him, the scene recorded in Gen. 4: 8 being graphically portrayed in the left foreground of this picture. God cursed Cain and the Bible's first murderer became a wanderer upon the face of the earth. One of a series of Bible pictures by Merian, Seventeenth century engraver.

JEMISON

We are all back from the singings of last Sunday. We had a wonderful time—plenty of showers and songs.

Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Franklin and children, Hyman, Willard, Vernell, Merle and Bobby, went to Ft. Benning, Ga., last week to visit their son and brother, Lance, who is in the hospital there. They report him in a serious condition. May God bless him and give him back his health, if it can be His will. Lance is a well loved boy of this place.

Some of Miss Gail Gletty's friends entertained her with a surprise party on Monday night for her birthday Tuesday. They served cream.

Miss Gwendolyn Clements returned to St Vincent's hospital Tuesday to resume her duties and work as nurse. She is also one of our standbys. We surely miss our young people when they go away.

The Glettys had as their guests Friday night Mrs. Will Clements and daughters, Misses Willie C. and Aleese, and son, Pat, and also Miss Leacy Newell.

Mr. and Mrs. George Spivey and son, Ershel, and Mr. Albert Jones were guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Wright Sunday.

Mr. Clarence Marcus, who works at Sylacauga, visited his wife and baby at her father's Saturday and Sunday.

Mrs. Hermie Hodgens spent last week with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jim Miskelley.

Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Champion, Miss Velma and Mr. Grover Price went to Clanton one day last week. Mrs. Champion is taking treatment for throat trouble from Dr. Arthur Johnson.

Miss Lucille Compton spent Saturday night with her brother, Algie Compton.

Mr. Frank Davenport spent Tuesday night with his home folks.

Miss Willie C. Clements visited Miss Gail Gletty Sunday.

Mrs. Emmett Miskelley is still on the sick list.

Mrs. Clarence Marcus and little son, Aldene, visited the Misses Champion Friday p.m.

So come on, folks, pack your baskets with lots of good eats, bring your books and help us make it the best singing we have ever had.

Editor Union-Banner:

Will you permit me through your paper to express my thanks to the 1,305 voters who cast their ballots for me in the last primary. I have expressed my appreciation to many of you personally and to those I have not seen, I take this means of doing so. Although we were defeated we have the satisfaction of knowing that our fight was clean and open and for what we conceived to be to the best interest of the Republican party and Chilton County. I want to say further that I have no ill will for anyone who voted against me and to promise you that the remainder of my term of office shall be devoted to the service of the people of Chilton County.—Yours very truly, L. WORK STARTED ON FAIR PARK

The job of transforming Birmingham's weed-grown fairgrounds into a place worthy of the name, Fair Park, was under way today as crews of workmen busied themselves making ready for a new state fair this fall.

When the gates open Sept. 24 on Birmingham's first state exposition in four years, the public, according to General Manager P. T. Strieder, will witness a fair of beauty in which nature had a large part.

For not only will nature's resources, side by side with those of man, adorn the exhibit halls, but natural floral beauty will be made a permanent part of the now desolate grounds, Mr. Strieder said.

"Attractive trees and shrubbery of the large park," he stated "are all undergoing careful pruning and trimming and walks and greenswards are being cleaned up. In addition, hundreds of flowers have been planted in the park and this, together with other improvement, will make the general beauty which will retain its freshness even after the fair."

Mr. Streider expressed appreciation and enthusiasm at the spirit of interest and cooperation being shown in the revived fair by the business and civic leaders of the city.

Riley Robinson of Providence was in Clanton Tuesday.

MAPLESVILLE BITS

Rev. J. E. Hamrick of Blocton filled his regular appointment at the Baptist church Sunday morning to a large and attentive audience.

Hear "Uncle Bud and His Boll Weevils," sponsored by the W. M. S. Saturday night, June 23rd, at 8 p.m., at the Maplesville High school.

Many friends of Miss Helen Nix will be delighted to know that she is herself again after an operation for appendicitis at Vaughn's Memorial Hospital, Selma.

Mrs. Stanley Hayes was hostess for a shower given in honor of Miss Dorothy Reynolds Wednesday afternoon from 4 to 6 p.m. The home was beautifully decorated with cut and pot flowers. Miss Annie Laura Potts presided over the bride's book. The lovely and useful gifts were presented by treasure hunt. Annie Laura Payne and Pattie Nix, dressed in rainbow colors led the bride to be be, at the end of the rainbow, where the chest of gifts were found and presented by them. Miss Annie Laura Potts sang, "At the End of the Rainbow," with Mrs. Floyd Dorsey accompanying on the piano. Those assisting in entertainments were: Misses Louise Foshee, Estell Davis, Mesdames J. W. Irvin, Dudley Nix and F. A. Shanks. Forty-three guests enjoyed this occasion. A delicious ice course was served.

The young people's study course is conducted by Miss Long, at the Baptist church this week. Quite a number are enjoying this great pleasure.

First farmer—I've got a freak on my farm. It's a two-legged calf.

Second farmer—I know. He came over to call on my daughter last night.

"Now said the Sabbath school teacher, "why is a certain part of the church called the altar?"

"Because," said the bright boy, "It is the place where women change their names."

Anthony — Ho, Caesar, there is a man with a noble nerve.

Caesar—Ay, a wonderful Gaul.

I was taking tea with a great editor last Sunday afternoon when his little daughter came back from Sunday school with an illustrated card in her hand.

What's that you have there, little one?" the editor asked.

"Oh," said the child, "just an ad about heaven."

NO SAMSON—They laughed when I walked over to the piano—but they were right; I couldn't lift it.

Bids Will Be Requested for the Location of New Federal Building

The amount of the appropriation allotted to Clanton was not made public, but those close to Washington authorities feel confident that the proposition will move forward without obstruction, and that Clanton will, before long, have a new federal building. It has been further stated that the structure proposed will be built of brick and stone, and will be a handsome edifice that will be highly ornamental as well as useful to our city.

SOLDIERS BARBECUE FRIDAY

About seventy-five ex-soldiers of Chilton County participated in the chicken barbecue and picnic at Hugh Mims Pond, near Clanton last Friday afternoon.

The chickens were barbecued under the direction of Jean Gore, who was ably assisted by Reed and Darwin Giles. Other arrangements for the affair were handled by a committee of which Percy Pitts was chairman.

All soldiers who took part in the event brought or sent a spring chicken to be barbecued. A wash pot filled with camp stew added a great deal to the edibility of the plates that were served.

Major W. M. Weston, state service commissioner, and Mr. Cameron, from the service office, at Tuscaloosa, were guests of the occasion, and made speeches which brought valuable information to their hearers. After the barbecue the soldiers gathered into a group and listened to the speeches of the visitors; also short talks by a number of local ex-soldiers.

P. W. A. Approves Application Of Town For a Loan of $32,000

Advice was received by Mayor J. Lee Smith on June 19th in a letter from Congressman Oliver, stating that Clanton's application for a loan of $32,000 had been approved by the Public Works Administration. Immediately thereafter the Mayor and Town Council announced plans to place the matter before the people for their approval.

Under the Loan it is proposed to erect a city hall building at a cost of about $23,000, and the balance of about $9,000 to be expended in extension of water mains to all part of the city.

It is explained by City Clerk, C. H. Pipes, that the proposed extension of water mains will guarantee adequate fire protection to property in many parts of the city where no water is now available for fighting fires. This, he said, will materially reduce the insurance rates now in effect on all property where water protection is not available.

The proposed city hall is to be erected on the old Baptist Church lot across the street from the courthouse. It will be a brick and stone structure two stories high, and providing quarters for all departments of the city's business.

The first floor plans call for offices for the Mayor, the City Clerk, vaults, courtroom, city attorney's office, the fire department and city jail. The second floor provides a large auditorium, with stage and dressing rooms; also a library room.

Thirty per cent of the $32,000 alloted by the Public Works Administration will be an outright grant. The balance will be an obligation of the town to be repaid by general obligation bonds running for a period of thirty years at four per cent.

It is announced that an election will be held on July 30th to determine the approval or rejection of the proposition by the citizens of the town.

CAN EARLY AND CAN OFTEN NOW

Schedule Announced By Miss Ruth Pardue, Home Agent

The hot weather which has been generally prevalent so far this season has of course, had its effect on produce for canning as well as on major crops. The heat has tended to ripen fruits and vegetables rapidly. The progress of all these foods should be carefully watched so that they may be picked and canned when just at their best.

There never was a year when it was more important to can for the future and to see that nothing is wasted. But any woman who wants to get her storage shelves filled this season will have to keep a close tab on what is going in her garden, or she is going to be sadly disappointed. Early summer vegetables such as beans, carrots, beets, peas, etc., and such fruits as berries and peaches must be gathered the instant they are ready. It is not safe to let them stand an hour longer than necessary.

This means that the enterprising home canner will have to have everything ready in advance, so as to be able to can on short notice. The pressure cooker should be absolutely clean and in good working order, the tin can sealer should be washed and oiled and a few empty cans sealed in order to test the perfection of the seal. All previously used cans should be well washed and reflanged for use again, and a supply of new lids must be obtained. Glass jars should be washed and examined for cracks and new tops and rubber rings purchased. Hot water-bath canners should be arranged for. When all this has been done, the thrifty home canner is ready for work just as soon as vegetables and fruits are ready.

Demonstrations on scientific home canning will be given during the month of July at the following places. The canning of various fruits and vegetables will be demonstrated. All women and girls of the communities are invited. Demonstrations will begin at 2:00 p.m.:

July 3, Mt. Pleasant, home to be decided.

July 6, Poplar Springs, place to be decided.

July 11, Enterprise, home of Mrs. C. L. Wilkins.

July 12, Shoults, place to be decided.

July 13, Pletcher, home of Mrs. Geo. Chandler.

July 16, Baker, place to be decided.

July 17, Fairview, home of Mrs. Leo Billingsley.

July 18, Thorsby, home of Mrs. S. M. Connatser.

July 19, Sardis, home of Mrs. E. W. Clenner.

July 20, Midway-Mt. Creek, home of Mrs. G. T. Guy.

July 24, Isabella, schoolhouse.

July 25, Mineral Springs, place to be decided.

July 27, Verbena, schoolhouse.

Business Men Invited To Meeting of The Local Club Tonight

Important public questions in the immediate future for Clanton have stirred up a keen interest among members of the Kiwanis club of Clanton. At its weekly meeting tonight the club, together with a large group of other business men of the city, will take up for discussion and consideration the proposals that involve the probable building of a city hall in Clanton, extension of the city waterworks system, erection of a federal building, and the building of a community swimming pool.

These questions are on the calendar of the public affairs committee of the club. A large group of business men, in addition to club members, have been invited to attend the meeting Thursday night. Town and county officials are also included in the invitation.

Any citizen or business man who is interested in these projects and who has not been invited by the committee has an invitation to come. Those who attend must notify Mell Martin some time Thursday, so that necessary arrangements may be made.

The Kiwanis Club is intensely interested in these as well as all public matters, and desires to take such action as will tend to stimulate a wholesome and aggressive interest concerning such matters in the minds of the populace.

He is a young man, but is amply qualified for the work. He has been in the music teaching work for several years. He knows how to teach, and what's more he likes the work. The people of Jackson Chapel and adjoining communities will do well to attend the school. The charges will be reasonable.

The Story of the Bible Told in Pictures

Noah's Ark.—From the time of the murder of Abel to the time of Noah the Bible devotes considerable space to the genealogical records of the descendants of Adam. One of these descendants, Jubal, was the first musician; and another, Tubal-Cain, was the first worker in brass and iron. Adam lived nine hundred and thirty years, and Methuselah reached the record age of nine hundred and sixty-nine years. But old as these patriarchs were they failed to learn wisdom with their years, and "the wickedness of man was great in the earth." Gen. 6: 6, we are told, "And it repented the Lord that He had made man on the earth, and it grieved Him at His heart." Determined to wipe out the whole race and make a fresh start, God chose Noah, his wife and their three sons, Shem, Ham and Japheth, for survival. Noah was instructed to build an ark to hold his family, together with male and female representatives of each species, and provisions for them all. In this picture Merian portrays the completed ark, with the animals entering it, while Noah prays for divine guidance.

SHUCK DOLLS BRING CASH TO FARM WOMEN

Talladega, Ala.—Mrs. J. C. Hayden, Chandler Springs, in Talladega County, has had good results in selling shuck dolls.

Since starting the work 14 months ago, Mrs. Hayden has sold 119 shuck dolls ranging in price from 15 cents to 50 cents each. She has received a total of about $45.00.

"The work has been fascinating and the time spent upon them has not interfered with my other duties," says Mrs. Hayden. "It is interesting to know that some of my dolls have traveled extensively, for I have sent them to Seattle, Washington, and to Providence, R. I., Mobile on the Gulf and to Chicago on Lake Michigan. I can truthfully say from my shuck bin in the corn crib 'I cover the water front.'"

FIND UNIQUE WAY OF MAKING MONEY

Russellville, Ala.—Farm women of Franklin County have developed an unique way of making a little cash. During the past 18 months 32 women and girls of the county have sold over $300 worth of homemade articles such as hooked mats and rugs, stuffed toys, whisk and hearth brooms, and men's ties.

Mrs. G. P. Peden sold $11.40 worth of stuffed toys during the year. Miss Verna Morrison and her mother sold $14 worth of hearth brooms made from broom cane they grew. During the spring months Mrs. Walter Peden sold $21 worth of hooked and crocheted rugs. Under the direction of Miss Clara Nale, home agent, other farm women of the county are doing similar work.

NEWS IN BRIEF

The annual meeting of the Alabama Farm Bureau Federation is to be held this year from July 31 to August 3 during formers' week, annual outing and short course of farm people at the Alabama Polytechnic Institute, Auburn.

The nine production credit associations in Alabama have loaned 2,327 farmers a total of $703,754 for the purpose for producing the 1934 crop, it is reported by J. M. Magruder, president of the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank.

The apparent supply of cotton in the United States was approximately 10,300,000 bales on May 1, compared with about 11,900,000 bales on May 1 this year, and with an average of 5,200,000 bales for the ten years that ended in 1930, according to the Bureau of Agricultural Economics.

Middling 15|16 inch cotton was quoted at 21 points or $1.05 per bale and 1 inch cotton at 59 points or $2.95 per bale premium over middling 7|8 inch on six central markets, according to report of June 16 of Division of Cotton Marketing of Bureau of Agricultural Economics, Atlanta, Ga.

Savings by a farmers' cooperative oil and gasoline company of Colorado have not fallen below 20 per cent of the total business done during the last thirteen years.

NATIONAL FOREST AREAS OFFERED TO GOVERNMENT

Montgomery, Ala.—With the passage of an act of Congress providing for the consent of the state to the acquisition by the government of additional national forest lands in Alabama through a poll of the legislature taken prior to their assembly in session, the owners of numerous areas are tendering lands for purchase by the government. Many of these offers are being received at the office of the state forester, although the program of acquisition is a federal matter rather than a state undertaking.

The allocation of 20 million dollars by the president to the U. S. Forest service for the purchase of additional national forest lands in the eastern states opened the way for a very material extension of the national forest system. Federal statutes, however, required that the various states give their consent to such acquisition before the federal government could undertake purchases. Various of the legislatures were not in session at the time the funds were made available. The provision that the consent of the state, insofar as the federal government is concerned, may be made by a poll of the legislature while not in session simplified the carrying out of the program to a very great degree.

The amount and location of land which the government expects to acquire is at presen tundetermined, as is also the price which will be paid. It is presumed that the land will be bought at the lowest prices obtainable. Meanwhile tenders of land offered for sale received by the state commission of forestry are being turned over to the U. S. Forest service for its information and for such action as may appear to it to be appropriate.

SINGING SCHOOL AT ENTERPRISE

O. L. Devaughn will begin an 18-day singing school at Enterprise school building Monday, July 9th. This will be his second term at this place, having taught a very successful school there last summer. The people of the community think this one will be even larger and better than the one last year.

The teacher and people of the immediate community extend an invitation and a welcome to others of adjoining communities who may wish to attend. The teacher requests and insists that all patrons if possible, and others who may be interested, to be present on the morning of the opening day at 9 o'clock, and be in the opening exercises, whether you enroll or not.

The A. J. Showalter text books will be used and the latest Stamps-Baxter song books (Leading Light) will be used in the class practice. We believe that it will be time well spent for anyone to make arrangements and attend this school.

PLAN FOR RETIRING SUB-MARGINAL LAND

Auburn, Ala.—Alabama is expected to obtain between $500,000 and $1,000,000 from a government fund of $25,000,000 appropriated to aid farmers who desire to leave sub-marginal land, and in working out problems involved in utilization of such lands, it has been learned here at the Alabama Polytechnic Institute.

W. A. Hartman, state college of agriculture, Athens, Ga., has been appointed director of this region, which includes Alabama, South Carolina, Georgia and Florida, according to J. E. Addicks, assistant national recovery administration compliance director.

Committees to handle this phase of the agricultural adjustment administration's land policies will be named soon in the separate states. These committees will make investigations paving the way for the purchase by the government of sub-marginal land from farmers who wish to utilize better lands.

The nation has been divided into nine regions for this program. Directors will establish contact between federal and state agencies so that the long-time program of each may be directed toward the same objective.

Taking of sub-marginal land out of production is one phase of the long-time national planned program for agriculture which it is expected will replace the present emergency program.

DOLOMITE TO REPLACE SAND IN FERTILIZER

Following the advise of the Alabama Experiment Station, Auburn, and the United States Department of Agriculture, fertilizer manufacturers will next year furnish Alabama farmers with non-acid forming fertilizers. This will be done by the manufacturers substituting dolomite or dolomitic limestone for the sand which is at present being used for filler.

Agreement that this will be done was reached in Montgomery on June 20th when fertilizer manufacturers met with the state board of agriculture and assured the board that they will gladly cooperate in producing fertilizers which will not make the farmers' soil acid.

Under regulations passed by the Board of Agriculture each sack of fertilizer sold in the state will contain a tag labeled "acid forming" or "non acid forming". This will not only apply to mixed fertilizers but to superphosphate and other fertilizers applied direct to crops.

It was also agreed at the Montgomery meeting that the experiment station, the extension service and other agricultural forces of the state will continue to urge that farmers apply limestone to their land to off-set the acidity which it may at present have due to the continual use of acid-forming fertilizers during the past.

HAY EXPECTED TO BRING GOOD PRICE NEXT WINTER

As a result of prospective hay shortage in the drouth stricken area of the northwest, Alabama farmers stand an excellent chance to receive a good price for the hay they will have for sale this coming winter and fall, declared Seth P. Storrs, state commissioner of agriculture.

"The last monthly government crop report indicates a prospective hay yield of approximately fifty million tons compared with a crop of seventy four million tons last year and a five year average yield of eighty-four million tons," Mr. Storrs said when insisting that farmers save all the hay possible. "As most of this decrease in prospective hay yield occurs in the north central states, which have in the past supplied southern markets and farms with hay, this prospective shortage would indicate an excellent opportunity for southern hay producers to secure the best prices in recent years."

A. D. Harlan, of the United States Department of Agriculture substantiates Commissioner Storrs' statement by stating that in all probabilities the southern army camps and consuming markets as Birmingham, Atlanta, Mobile and Jacksonville will have to depend on southern hay crops, such as Johnson Grass hay, lespedeza, soy beans, and cow peas for their hay supply.

"To be able to meet this demand satisfactorily," said Mr. Harlan "hay producers should exercise every care in the harvesting of the hay crop, prepare their storage facilities in order to properly house their product until after January 1st, when the best prices are usually secured. Whenever shipping point inspection facilities are available, this service should be utilized as an insurance against marketing hazards. There is always a certain amount of "distress" hay on the market during the producing season, but every effort should be made to hold good quality hay for higher prices."

Miss Carrie Foshee is spending a few days in Birmingham visiting relatives and friends.

BOB JONES COMMENTS ON HERE AND HEREAFTER.

The prodigal son came to himself. He was sitting on the rocks of a hillside or at the root of a tree and he sat himself out in front of himself and looked himself in the face. That is something few men ever do. That is the hardest thing a man ever tried to do.

When the prodigal son came to himself he didn't blame Providence. There was a famine in the land. He could have said, "God is to blame. He sent a famine." That is what some people would have said. Men are inclined to "pass the buck." But men who "pass the bick" have not come to themselves. If the prodigal son had been like some people I know he would have said, "My father at home was too strict on me. I could-not stand the discipline and the restraint. I was born with a restless temperament. My father should not have been so hard on me." The reason he didn't say that was because "he came to himself." He located the trouble and he located it in his own heart. When we located our trouble we always locate it in the center of ourselves.

When the prodigal son came to himself he wanted what he had not wanted before. He had not wanted his father's house. He wanted his own liberty. He wanted to get away from home. But sitting down and looking himself in the face he decided he was mistaken. He didn't want what he thought he wanted. The trouble with most people is they think they want what they don't want. They think they want money until they get it and they find it doesn't satisfy. They think they want their liberty until they get liberty and then they turn liberty into license and become reckless.

When the prodigal son came to himself he had an humble heart. Before he left home he asked for his rights and his property. Now he doesn't ask for the place of a son. He simply wishes to have the place of a servant. People who are filled with pride have not come to themselves.

ELEMENTARY SCHOOLS WEAKEST LINK ASSERTS J. A. KELLER

University, Ala. June 22.—Voicing an appeal for the cooperation of every educator and of every parent in Alabama, Prof. J. A. Keller, state superintendent of education-elect, in an address before a joint dinner session of the State Education Conference and the Alabama Congress of Parents and Teachers at the University of Alabama on Thursday night, declared that until Alabama can have a unified program taking in every phase of education, we cannot expect much assistance from either a good or poor legislature.

Prof. Keller said that educators need a united front and must know what they want.

Turning to a discussion of the Alabama Public School System, the speaker declared that as far as the Alabama elementary school is concerned, this state has been building on the sand.

"Any sort of term has been good enough for the elementary school; any sort of teacher has been sufficient; and promotions have been made at the end of four or five months of work, according to the discretion of the principal and teacher.

"In our elementary schools we have laid the weakest foundation in the entire school system," Mr. Keller stated. "I am one of those who hold that the teacher of my child in the first two or three grades is all important. If my child is started out well, then I am willing to risk it that he will be able to go on through the remaining grades with more than a fair degree of success.

"The time has come with the new deal and equalization when we must standardize the elementary school and require the same type of training and pay the same salaries for elementary school teachers as we do in the secondary schools.

"I stand for a complete educational program from the first grade up, but it must be a well-balanced one. I do not want to take any thing away from institutions of higher learning, but I do believe that we ought to do the first things first."

The speaker said that in this state we have 1,000 teachers with little more than an elementary school education who are instructing between 30,000 and 50,000 of our children. There are many more who have little better than one year of college work.

Prof. Keller said that he has observed that in every denomination believing in missions and sending money away for missionary work rather than raising money to be spent in the local church itself that the pastor got more things done and received his own salary in a more satisfactory manner than any other church.

Likewise, if the colleges and secondary schools help us to build up the neglected part of education in Alabama, they will eventually receive greater returns for their cooperation and sacrifice.

"There must be a firm foundation for our school system! I have observed as a man that masons, when they are erecting a building, dig down until they get a solid foundation. In Europe when one is building a cathedral one builds not for years but for centuries. There are no sagging walls. That is what we need to do in Alabama, get down to a solid foundation.

"I have also observed that in the past Alabama has always made a wise choice of its State superintendents of education. Of course the system of selection is faulty, but all of our past superintendents have been strong men, and I shall have far to go to maintain their records. Alabama has also made wise selections of chiefs of her colleges, and these executives have surrounded themselves with strong faculties. The personnel of our county and city superintendents' group has improved; if any have failed it has not been because of their lack of training, but because they have not grown professionally. Our best school people are in the high schools because of the standardization of these institutions by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. And this is what we must do for our elementary schools; build them well and standardize them for the betterment of our high schools and colleges."

Prof. H. G. Dowling, superintendent of Tuscaloosa County Schools, was master of ceremonies at Thursday evening's affair.

The remainder of the program included an address by Mrs. James Fitts Hill, Montgomery, president of the Alabama Congress of Parents and Teachers, on the program of the congress. Music was furnished by the Fondren Brothers of Etteca, Tuscaloosa County.

Following the dinner there was a demonstration of old English folk dancing by pupils of the Fairhope School of Organic Education under the direction of Prof. Marietta Johnson and P. A. Frederick.

GENERAL PLAN AND AIMS OF REHABILITATION MOVE

Permanent reduction in the number of families receiving relief is one of the results anticipated from the rural work centers now being developed. The plan for work centers has been worked out in Texas, according to the federal emergency relief administration, and the agricultural extension service of Texas has issued a description of project which the FERA has called to the attention of other states as a possible solution to some of the country's relief problems.

The community in which a work center is desired must first show that not less than ten families from relief rolls will be materially aided by the project. Part or all of these families may already be living in the community. It is also suggested that families that have moved from this community to the city, and have been put on the city relief rolls, be brought back upon application of their former neighbors, and placed in houses made habitable with aid of relief funds. The work center would then afford means of setting up small manufacturing activities, for products to be exchanged or sold locally. This would supplement food and other items which families are expected to produce on the small farms where they are being located.

"Relocating these families is by infiltration, and they must be acceptable wherever they go," says the plan.

The community must first show that it can furinsh suitable vacant houses to be made habitable by labor of the occupants in return for rent-free privileges. Relief funds may also be used for labor and a limited amount of material for new houses.

Several acres must be donated by the community for site of the work center, title to be held by the community, or, preferably, by a cooperative group. The community is expected to supply half of the material for construction, and half of the equipment, while labor is supplied by the relief administration.

Products of the community house might include mattresses, harness, chaps, quilts, canned goods. cured meats and dozens of other commodities needed in the neighborhood. In addition, repairs and parts could be made there for furniture, farm machinery, and outbuildings.

It is suggested that the work center be used for recreation also, and that the equipment be such as could be converted and shifted easily from utilitarian to recreational purposes. For instance, work tables are suggested with hinged tops, so that they could be convertible into seats.

This community house would be the "visible symbol of the new deal. It merges the possibilities of the already large movement toward the small farm with home manufacture, thereby stimulating a significant trend in rural life."

The Bureau of Agricultural Economics recently surveyed 123 factories in fifteen Eastern, Southern and Central states, and found that factories in small towns or in the open country are enabling many farm people who live within convenient distances of such establishments, to derive from them five different kinds of income: By selling some of their farm products to the factories; by performing certain steps in the manufacturing processes in their own homes or in small farm shops; by having a claim upon some of the profits of the business through investments in the factory; and by selling foodstuffs and possibly other farm products on local markets that have been expanded because of the presence of the factory.

MR. DYER DECLARES NEW DEAL TO FAIL

Chicago, June 25.—Dr. Gus Dyer, Vanderbilt University economics professor, speaking Monday at the convention of the Council of American Industry, said the New Deal was in reality old and doomed to failure.

"The policy of governmental restraint and direction of business is very old," Dyer said. "France and Germany tried the system in the seveneenth and eighteenth centuries, and England in the nineteenth century, all ending in collapse."

Dyer said the dream of those in charge of the Tennessee Valley project is in reality an hallucination, that its history will be that of all other Utopias.

"The Tennessee Valley experiment is new only in one sense," he said, "It is the first time the taxpayers' money has been taken without his consent to finance the movement. The project is a dream that will walk, talk and prance its spectacular way to bankruptcy and failure."

He attacked collective bargaining as a theory of wages hostile to the industrial field.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS
(By Frank P. Litschert

In a recent dispatch from Geneva to the New York Times, Frederick T. Birchall, a noted European correspondent of that paper, says in part:

"To one observer from overseas, Europe, while showing distinct signs of economic improvement in many spots never has been more dispuited or more discordant politically and never, even in 1914, has faced a period of greater peril than she does now, twenty years after the start of the war that was to end all wars.

"In every country save three disunion and uncertainty are the prevailing notes, and the people seem to know neither exactly what they want nor how they are going to get anything that they think they do want."

Yet in spite of statements like this, coming from unquestionably reliable observers in Europe, we have a great many well meaning internationalists in the United States who think that Uncle Sam ought to get into the European maelstorm through the League of Nations or World Court and try to straighten out that which even the wisest heads of Europe cannot untangle. If answer is made to them that such procedure would rather result in getting us into trouble than removing trouble from the rest of the world they seek to quiet our fears with the statement that once we are in the League Court, if we do not like it, we can withdraw. But why go into an organization which is of such doubtful benefit that we must consider possible withdrawal before signing the pledge card? The fact is, withdrawal would not be easy, but difficult. Once in, any attempt to withdraw in order to preserve our national sovereignty, would bring such a terrific howl from the internationalists, such a flood of critical propaganda from interested parties at home and abroad, that we would brand ourselves as something a hundred times worse than the international shylock which our brethren across the sea are now so fond of calling us.

Instead of an easy withdrawal, once in the World Court, the thing we shall face will be a concerted effort to push us all the way into the League of Nations itself. The internationalist is the most persistent person on earth. He is never discouraged. The people have on numerous occasions repudiated him at the polls, but he keeps on, apparently well supplied with money and printing presses. Once we get into the World Court, and our international camel has his big nose under the big tent, it will not be long until he will have us all in there unless the American people awaken to the danger. An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. The safest plan is to keep the dromedary's nose outside the tent and in the pure, fresh sunshine.

None of us will ever forget the heroic fight made by the United States Senate fifteen years ago, to keep us in line with traditional American policy, and outside the crooked quarrels of European politics. The fight was won then, and it is even more important that the fight be won again. Fifteen years ago there was everywhere an apparent upsurge of democratic government. Now the tide has changed. Autocracy is the fashion of the day in Europe, from the Ural Mountains to the Rhine. The day may not be far distant when it will have crept westward to the Atlantic. Most of the delegates to the World Court from Europe no longer represent democratic or popular government, but dictatorships. A modern dictatorship is the most nationalistic government on earth. It looks after its own interests first and expects the other fellow to do the same. The World Court is no longer a world court, if it ever was. It is now an aggregation of politicians representing, for the most part, autocratic governments which are seeking to gain for themselves a larger place in the sun. To look for international equity, for calm, tempered, judicial decisions in such a society is worse than folly. As one of the few remaining democratic nations on earth, one which is continually being bombarded from within and without with petitions and suggestions that we sacrifice ourselves, what kind of chance would we have in such an atmosphere of political cunning and Machiavellian intrigue? Uncle Sam has done well in his century and a half of national existence. At this stage of his career he can do even better by remaining at home to attend to his own business. Certainly his experiences in world affairs during the past twenty years have not been of such a nature as would encourage him to take a lifetime position in the international political arena.

"Miss Perkins urges balanced incomes" says a headline in the New York Times. Yes, that is what we would all like to do.

THE INCREASE IN STRIKES

One of the most disconcerting phases of the business picture during the past several weeks has been the increase in the number of industrial strikes. Such labor disturbances are always more or less common when the cost of living starts up, but at the present time predictions are made by many economists that strikes will be more prolonged and frequent than is generally the case at this period in the life of a depression.

It was the theory of the New Dealers when their program was put into effect, that they could reconstruct prosperity by raising wages and so increasing the buying power. In order to afford the producer the opportunity to pay higher wages and still remain in business, the new program provided for higher prices for commodities. For a time it looked like everything was lovely and labor was quite enthusiastic. Now, however, we find that the prices of commodities has risen faster than wages, so that the fellow who is earning more than he did a few years ago finds that it costs him quite a little more to live. The farmers have discouraged themselves in the same boat. While the prices of their commodities have gone up, their cost of living has risen faster and owing to the drouth and the crop reduction program they do not have as much to sell.

Of course the blackboard theory about raising wages' to increase purchasing power and raising prices to give the producer more money to pay the higher wages sounds good in the class room, but like many professional theories it fails to figure in the human element entirely. Take the case of the textile industry for example. Wages can be raised and cotton goods can be raised in price to take care of the increase of wages. More cotton goods can be bought with the increased wages. Unfortunately, however, the textile workers and workers who have had their wages raised in other industries, do not buy all of the cotton goods—only a comparatively small percentage of the output. There is another big section of our citizens, including the professional, the salaried class, the small business man, and those with fixed incomes, which has not had an income boost to take care of the artificially stimulated high cost of living. This section, powerful in numbers, has been unable and unwilling to buy so much at the increased prices. As a result there has been over production and now there must be curtailment in the textile field, and of course, in others. That this increase in the cost of living means something to those who have had no appreciable increase in income can be evidenced from the fact that retail food prices have gone up about 30 per cent during the last year, men's clothing 25 per cent, women's clothing 30 per cent, sheets and similar cotton goods nearly 50 per cent.

It seems therefore that to boost the cost of living artificially will not work unless the income of all can be boosted at the same time, and this is obviously impossible. It will take a lot more planning to take care of this situation.

DROUGHT AND BRAIN TRUST

Nature has made the Brain Trust appear rather ridiculous.

Fearful of overproduction, the "trust" has sought by every means to curb farm production. Not only was acreage restricted, but crops ploughed under.

Then suddenly comes the drought. The West, particularly the wheat belt, is hit worse than it has been for twenty-five years.

Famine is not as yet a grave possibility. Another lean year or so, however, would make it entirely within the realm of reason.

The drought probably will cause the "Brain Trust" to do a little more figuring. Unfortunately agriculture never can be made an exact science. The good economists, in figuring out the next crop, should give greater consideration to fickle Mother Nature.—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

UNTIL TAXPAYERS REVOLT

Railroads have recently been cutting their tariffs, and extending their service, in an effort to win back the business from motor trucks and passenger vehicles.

The results have indicated that there is still plenty of hope for the railroad business of the future if customers of railroads are accorded prices and service which compare favorably with other forms of transportation.

But other kinds of transportation have received substantial subsidies from the government in the form of free roads, canals or generous mail contracts; meanwhile railroads all over the country have been getting tax collectors, axes in the neck.

When government ownership or operation of the railroads is mentioned nowawadays as the ultimate way out, it should be remembered that the reason why it is the only labor employer who can go on paying good wages to large numbers and continue to operate a business on a businesslike basis until such time as taxpayers revolt. Private business and public utilities, not being able to collect from taxpayers the sums which customers cannot offord to pay, would go bankrupt sooner.—Jersey City (N.J.,) Journal.

The fellow who didn't start saving his money until the stock market crash took it all away from him, is a great deal like the fellow who doesn't repent from his sins until he is past seventy years of age.

The Blue Eagle has decided that henceforth it won't have to have its wings dry cleaned.

What England and France now seem to want to know is whether we will cancel the war debt if they agree to pay it.

The average college graduate of 1934 no doubt thinks that he could run the country better than his professors are doing it.

We can't think of any scheme that wouldn't work for a while if you spend a million dollars on it.

A pupil in the Lincoln lower grades signed her name "Mae West" on her arithmetic paper recently, we are told, and the teacher cornered her and asked her why. "Because," the pupil said, "I done 'em wrong."

Before the Pennsylvania primaries the new deal newspapers said that the result in the Keystone State would be a test of the new deal. Since the primaries they are telling us that national issues were not involved.

MAN IN THE MOON

Looks Over All—Overlooks None

Party Regularity

Once upon a time in Chilton County party regularity was taken for granted. A man was known as a Democrat or a Republican, and, if he was a Democrat he voted that ticket, and if a Republican he voted that ticket. There was no fence-straddling. In later years this order has changed somewhat however, due to several causes. One of these is that human nature desires change. It will not run along in the same channel for long. It desires the novelty or sensation of doing something new—something that it has not done before. Another cause (and the greater one, I think) is broken promises. Voters are promised everything under the sun—all kinds of reforms, changes in methods and systems, and the like, but, once elected, the electors see the old order of selfishness and greed remain unchanged. And in this way, people have lost confidence in their officers, and these same officers are to blame. There are exceptions, of course, but they are few. Many times I have heard: "Politics is rotten, anyway." That isn't true—it couldn't be. Politics is a system of policies, upon which a candidate stands. If one of his policies is "rotten", the voters will spot it at once. Politics isn't rotten—the politicians are the ones who are rotten. Their policies, for the most part, are sound and upright, if they would stand firmly upon them, waging a clean fight for votes, but the methods used to get into office are in many cases decidedly "rotten." This is what people have lost confidence in—the methods used to get into office. It is the same in both parties. People put their personal feelings into the matter more so now than they once did, also. Time was when people "voted the ticket" because they thought their party principles were best for the county, even though the men who represented that party might be personal enemies. That isn't done any more. Enmities made among voters by charges and counter charges by candidates in primary elections are the cause of many split tickets" nowadays. And, so, I expect to see many people "split" their tickets this year, on both sides. In talking to both Republicans and Democrats, I hear the same thing: "I positively will not support Mr. So-and-So. He charged his opponent falsely, and knowingly. I haven't the slightest confidence in him. I have other reasons, too—personal reasons." And so the story goes. Personally, I expect to make one X on my ticket in November, and that at the top, just under the elephant. I still believe in Republican principles. But I hear many of my Republican brothers speak otherwise, citing the fact that there have been cases when even candidates for office "split." Get all set, for this promises to be the most interesting campaign in years.

Bringing Back Prosperity

Prosperity is certainly slow in finding the way back. When Republicans were in office, Democratic newspapers clamored for them to go out, hog-tie prosperity, and drag it around the well-known corner. They said: "Give Democrats a chance and they will have prosperity out and stamping down the weeds in your streets in no time." They got their chance, and lo, behold, the very first thing they said was: "Be patient. It will take time." We expect this depression to wear itself out after a while, no matter who is running the government. What the people of this country wanted was someone who could bring back good old times in a hurry. Some people had an idea, all along, that the Democrats could not bring them back fast as they promised, but the majority took the bait, hook, line, sinker and pole all in, and ran under the bank with it. Some are now trying to spit it all out again, and can't. But, speaking of the slow manner in which prosperity is coming back, we have an idea what is causing it. Maybe the Democrats are depending on the oxen—"Roosevelt mules"—to do the trick. An ox is certainly a slow and stubborn animal. However, one of the so-called "brain trust" has said that oxen will prove the best solution of Southern farm problems. In effect, they say: "Oh, well, the South doesn't deserve anything better than oxen. They have plenty of time down there. Let them use them." A few years ago people had lots of fun out of the "Hoover wagons." Now, if there are any of these left, their owners might hitch their "Roosevelt mules" to them and come to see us some time.

Sunday Baseball

Of late, I have heard a few speak of Sunday baseball in Clanton. Now, don't get me wrong, for I am not saying we should have it. I am only wondering what the most of our people think about it. Already, I have heard some say it is outrageous, while others say it would be no worse than riding to Montgomery or Birmingham to see a movie, or something of the kind. Personally, I don't believe either is right, but neither is fishing and hunting on Sunday, yet we have lots of people who do this, and flock to swimming pools on Sunday afternoons, too. One is as bad as the other. It is all for sport and entertainment. I know people who can't see wrong in Sunday fishing, but howl about Sunday baseball. What is the difference?

Power of Advertising

From time to time you may hear people say: "Oh, I never read any advertising. It's all bunk, any way." And yet, if you will show those people a few trade marks or quote a few advertising slogans, they can tell you right off the bat what each is advertising. Advertising isn't done as it once was. The careful advertiser picks a trade mark or a slogan, and all his advertising contains these. After a while, people naturally connect these advertising specialties with the particular goods they advertise. Here are a few. If someone mentions "the pause that refreshes", you think of Coca-Cola. "Ask the man who owns one," makes you think of Packard cars. Let someone mention "When better cars are built—" and you immediately think of Buick. "Come up and see me some time," and you laugh and think of Mae West. "More miles—less carbon," and you think of Woco Pep. "Fire Chief" makes you think of Texaco gas. "57" varieties," and Heinz products crosses your mind. "They satisfy"—Chesterfield cigarettes. "Not a cough in a car load"—Old Gold cigarettes. And you can blind-fold any boy from 10 years of age on up, put the distinctive bottle of a popular drink in his hand, ask him what it is, and he will tell you Coca-Cola, at once. The power of advertising has caused all this. If a manufacturer should jump from first one kind of an advertisement to another, chances are that his readers would remember his product no longer than they were reading the ad. But, if he adopts a standard insignia or slogan, and sticks to it, before long his readers will unconsciously think of that product when they see that insignia or slogan. There is at least one local example. The Clanton Laundry & Cleaning Company has 119 for its telephone number. For some time every time this company carried an ad, this number was carried, in big figures, in the most conspicuous place in the ad. Now, I dare say, 119 is the best known number in the local telephone book, and any kid can tell you whose number that is. It is the power of advertising. Well directed advertising compels attention, and brings results. Here are two local slogans that have been carried for years. See if you know them. One is: "The Home of Quality." The other: "Safe Since 1901." Chances are you know them, whether you ever thought of them or not.

CAMPAIGNS TO DESTROY FAITH

The campaign which is always going on in America to destroy our faith in the American Constitution is a pest which is even more deadly than any the Department of Agriculture has had to battle in the past,, but is one which the government is unable to check, according to the National Republic, which says editorially in its current issue:

"The American goverment has in the past wisely spent a good deal of money exterminating the boll weevil, the Hessian fly, the Mediterranean fruit fly, the grasshopper and similar pests. But the government has been unable to do much about a pest which has cost the American people many times as much as all these vermin combined. This is the howler against the American constitution form of government and its institutions, who is continually talking the system down.

"There is plenty of room of course in any government for public opinion and for reasoned criticism—show us a government that is perfect. But ninety per cent of the criticism which emanates from demagogues, doctrinaires and pseudo-improvers in general is destructive in character and proceeds from no honest desire to effect social, political, or individual betterment. Politicians in search of votes, newspapers hot after circulation, professors and preachers with the itch for political power and public notoriety, and authors eager to produce best-sellers, affect the pose of reform in many instances only in order that they may hoist their tained wares on the public they harm with their continual knocking.

"The doctrine 'everything that is, is wrong,' is just as senseless as the dogma, 'everything that is, is right.'' People with wild schemes seem to feel in most instances that it is first up to them to demonstrate that there is no value in exising institutions and systems, and that the American masses are being swindled continually and exploited without stint, while an indifferent, stupid or wicked government stands by unaffected by the sufferings of the so-called 'down-trodden proletariat.'

"The American farmer has been the principal victim of this type of critic. Because American agriculture was not in as prosperous state as industry in general following the deflation after the World War, self-appointed apostles of the farmer, most of them not farmers at all, but demagogues and politicians out to boost themselves, or collegiate theorists who wished the farmer would take a chance on their dreams of a Utopia, have deliberately cried down the farming business until the biggest loss sustained by the farmer is not alone in current opreations but in the destruction of land values and consequent loss of credit. How could it be expected that farm lands would not sink in value when several hundred thousand supposed friends of the farmer in the United States were insisting that farming is no account, unprofitable, bankrupt and hopeless business, although it was these same theorists in government in past years who encouraged by his haranguing the expansion of farming and the back-to farm movement? The loss to the farmers of the United States through this sort of advertisements runs into the billions of dollars, and has resulted in thousands of farm foreclosures because of the decline in value through this persistent "bear" pressure, and many a farmer himself finally began to believe the 'leaders' who branded him a failure, losing his 'pep' and initiative, and almost ready to live off the government.

"There are signs that the American people are getting tired of the caterwaulings of the political, journalistic, clerical and professional demagogues. The people know that our economic and social system has not attained perfection; they also know that the critics are not perfect or capable of creating perfection. They would be perfectly satisfied if those who find it uncomfortable in the United States would go elsewhere. Such individuals, however, would find no country to harbor such free destructive criticism as has the United States in the past. The United States of America is a huge success—compared to other systems of government—so big a success that the destructive type cannot comprehend it, and is really irritated that something it didn't start and cannot fully dictate and control could get along so well when its hand was not at the helm."

The Man on the Corner
Some Sights He Saw— and Some He Saw Not

Viewing the situation from the corner, it appears that the next few months will see Clanton exceptionally busy with a few projects that mean much in our program of community development. Our city officials are contemplating the erection of a city hall to cost $23,000, and extension of water mains to cost $9,000. The question of issuing bonds for these two propositions will be submitted to the voters of the town on Monday, July 30th. Money to finance the projects is offered by P. W. A. upon a recent application. Thirty per cent of the amount is to be a gift. The balance to run for thirty years in bonds at four per cent. Clanton should readily and eagerly accept this proposition. I believe our people will do it on election day.

Another interesting possibility looms before us in the prospects of a federal building for use as a postoffice in Clanton. Those close to the powers that be in Washington say we shall have the necessary appropriation for this in a short while. A federal building is something that Clanton needs and has needed for a long time. Our citizens will most certainly accept it joyously. Several sites have already been mentioned. It is understood that the first step will be a request from the postoffice department for bids on a lot for location of the new building. We have several places that will be submitted at the first opportunity.

Apropros of the season, many folks have become interested in a community swimming pool for Clanton. That is a very pertinent subject, for who would not enjoy a good swim one of these extremely warm nights? I have about decided folks ought to have a pool of cold water to sleep in sometimes. To those who are swimming-pool conscious and want to do something about it, I would like to suggest that the finest place I know to locate such a project is on the airport property. There is not another available place with such natural advantages, I think.

Riding along the highway to Mitchell Dam last Sunday afternoon, hot, dusty road, with the family in our old rattle-bus, what should happen but a flat? Down on my knees in the dust. A car shot past us in a big hurry. Then came John William Cagle, dressed in his overalls, just the right garb in which to fix a flat. But I had already got my linen dirty. The car that passed stopped a few yards down the road, turned around and came back to help me. It was W. M. Polk. Thanks, friends. Such road courtesy is a little too rare these days.

County Agent Fant has decided to have the county picnic this year at the Ben Sims Grove two miles north of Clanton. It is a perfectly delightful place. I thought our ony good picnic place passed away with the devastation of Popwell Woods, but I was wrong, as usual. Ben intimates his place has promise of permanence, as he does not expect to cut his timber for a long time, if ever. A permanent stand should be erected there. It would come in handy for many functions that seek outdoor space during the summer months.

Hoke Pipes sent a telegram to his daddy last week telling him he has received appointment as manager of the district office of the National Life and Accident Insurance Company, at Harrisburg, Pennsylvania. Mr. Pipes received the news with that big broad smile which always appears on dad's face when he sees his boy take another step up the ladder of success. The many friends of "Hokus Pokus" in Clanton will likewise be glad to know of his promotion.

Dr. Leroy Mims, of Boston, Mass., has been here for a few days visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Mims, of Concord. Dr. Mims, a graduate veterinarian of Auburn, is now with the Bureau of Animal Husbandry, U. S. Department of Agriculture, doing inspection work in the vicinity of Boston. He returned to the East this week, taking his automobile with him.

Mr. W. Y. Keel, of Enterprise, is taking a very keen personal interest in the July Fourth celebration which is being planned at that place for next Wednesday. Mr. Keel has personally invited a number of prominent people to speak on the occasion, which together with music, refreshments, ball games, and other amusements, assures everybody that Enterprise offers a really worthwhile Fourth of July program.

If your ham in the sandwich is a little thinner than you have been accustomed to, there is the processing tax to be responsible for it.

The slogan of the AAA crop reduction programmers should be: "Let the tail go with the hide."

We presume that if the stork keeps on bringing quintriplets, quadruplets and triplets, as at present, the well-known AAA will have to issue an ukase about plowing every third one under.

Unless prices of hogs change it is going to be embarrassing for a Democratic congressman campaigning this fall when he is asked who pays the processing tax. To say nothing of the ghosts of those little dead pigs raising up to haunt him.

"What are you in for?" a McAlester convict inquired of a fellow inmate.

"Breaking into the office of the Wise Investment Company," the second replied. "And you "

"I was the president of the company."

In the Department of Agriculture at Washington recently there was unveiled the portrait of a nude lady which is dedicated to American agriculture. It occurs to us that the spirit of American agriculture could have been better portrayed by the picture of a stripped Middle Western Farmer.

THORSBY SECTION

(Mrs. S. E. Norton, Manager)

Bates-Street

A wedding of much interest to Thorsby and vicinity was that of Miss Mary Louise Bates, of Thorsby, and Mr. Titus Samuel Street, of Birmingham. The marriage took place at the Thorsby Baptist church on Saturday evening, June 23rd, at 8 p.m., with Rev. J. W. Jones, pastor of the church, officiating. The matron of honor was Mrs. Hubert Reinhardt; maid of honor, Miss Edith Foss; bride's maid, the Misses Linnie Bell Reinhardt, Conradine Pate, Mary Sue Porter and Hilma Collins; the groomsmen were Messrs. Kendall Franklin, Phares Raybon, Leo Spivey and Preston Shaw of Jemison. The little ring bearer was Erskine Jackson and the flower girls were Imogene Gentry and Elizabeth Collins. The church was prettily decorated around the altar with flowers, vines and potted plants. Miss Marie Jackson presided at the piano. Miss Katherine Bates was candle lighter to the many colored candles among the altar flowers. Before the arrival of the bridal party there were two beautiful songs, Miss Lois Thompson singing, "All For You," and Miss Katheryn Foss, "Oh Promise Me." The bridal party entered to the slow music of Lohengrin's wedding march, the bride's maids and groom's men entering two at a time and taking their places in front of the altar, followed by the maid of honor and matron of honor. Then followed the bride with her cousin, Mr. Sidney Gentry with the little flower girls preceding them. The groom was escorted to the altar by his brother, Mr. Grady Street of Birmingham, preceded by the little ring bearer, Erskine Jackson, completing the circle before the minister and the altar, a beautiful sight. The ceremony was quite impressive. The gowns of the maids, matron and singers were of rainbow colors and very attractive, each maid having an arm bouquet of gladioli. The bride looked sweet and beautiful in a train gown of white satin, with rich wedding veil held in place by a coronet embroidered with pearls. She carried on her arm a beautiful spray of easter lillies. Among the guests were Mrs. Street of Birmingham, mother of the groom, Mr. Grady Street, wife and baby, of Birmingham, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Gentry and daughter, Imogene, of Birmingham.

After the wedding a reception was given to the bridal party and a few special friends at the home of Mrs. J. H. Goddard, where Mary Louise has made her home since the death of her aunt, Mrs. Cora Gentry, a few months ago. The home was beautifully decorated with flowers. The bride and groom received their friends in the front room where they also received many congratulations and good wishes for their future happiness. In the dining room two young ladies presided over the punch bowl, Miss Lois Primm and Miss Kathleen Sorrell of Birmingham, looking very charming in their gowns, one in yellow and the other in white. Mr. and Mrs. Street will reside in Ensley. They went direct to their new home which was in readiness for them at 3409 Avenue C., Ensley, Alabama.

HARRIS THANKS THE VOTERS

Editor Union-Banner:

Please give me space in your paper to expres my thanks and appreciation to those who so loyally supported me with their vote and influence in the primary of June 12th.

Words fail to express my sincere thanks and appreciation for your vote and confindence in honoring me with the nomination for clerk of the circuit court of Chilton County. To those who supported my opponent, I have the highest respect and commend them for voting their choice, but since the nomination has been made I now solicit your vote and influence in the general election in November, not only for me but for the entire Republican ticket.

I made a fair and honest campaign and did not enter into any "line-up or combination" but ran solely on my own merits and record. I made strictly an individual campaign and any rumor or reports otherwise are unfounded.

Again I thank you from the depth of my heart for your vote and confidence and solicit the help of every voter in the general election in November.—Respectfully, H. A. Harris.

Our Sunday school was well attended Sunday. We had three wonderful services Saturday and Sunday. There was a goodly number at each service. It seems that the services were enjoyed by all. So, let's come back next Sunday and bring someone with us.

UNIVERSITY NEWS

University, Ala., June 26.—Alabama educators and leaders in the parent-teacher movement who were gathered together at the University of Alabama June 18-22 heard the state's new superintendent of education - elect, Prof. J. A. Keller, of Andalusia, pledge himself to fight for an eight-months term for all rural districts of Alabama.

Keller declared that too long have the rural schools been neglected. He added that he would demand a minimum term of eight months, half a million dollars for transportation, and a similar sum for the improvement of rural institutions.

Prof. Keller also declared that the elementary schools of Alabama are the foundation of secondary and higher education and that the elementary schools have formed the weakest link in the system. This link, he said, he hoped to strengthen. Elementary school teachers, especially first, second, and third graders, he said are the most important of all because they set the child out on the right path. He declared that elementary school teachers are entitled to the same salaries as high school teachers and that he would fight for this.

The principal speaker during the conference was Dr. John K. Norton, professor of education at Columbia University. In one of his lectures Prof. Norton said that the time has come when we must honestly face the fact that the wide differences which exist between the states in ability to support schools will prevent even a reasonable equalization of educational opportunity until the nation adequately assists the states and localities in the financing of chools. The speaker declared that many states, including Alabama, have not done everything within their power to provide at least a minimum or foundation program of education for all chidren. The fact has been clearly demonstrated that even though some states do everything which is reasonable and practical to expect, there will still exist a most unsatisfactory condition as it affects the educating of millions of American children.

"The time has come to proclaim the principle of a national minimum or foundation program of financial support for the education of every child who lives under the American flag, wether he happens to live in Maine, Arkansas, or California. This minimum educational opportunity should be financed jointly by the nation and the states, according to their tax-paying ability . . ."

In his lecture on bringing state tax systems up to date, Dr. Norton said that tax reform in Alabama centers around two problems: the reformation of the property tax and the finding of sources of tax revenue to supplement the funds which can be legitimately raised from property tax. The problem of tax reform in this state will revolve in considerable degree about the perfecting of the personal income tax, a corporation income tax, and a tax on the sale of malt, all of which have been enacted in Alabama since 1928.

"Touching upon the question of the sales tax, the Columbia educator said that he would support the adoption of a sales tax with great hesitation, principally because most of the revenue realized from this tax is paid by the large number of citizens who receive small incomes, many of which are already close to or below the subsistence level. This tax, he added, violates a fundamental democratic principle and one which is exemplified, both in our federal and state income taxes, that taxes should be progressive rather than regressive."

Prof. Norton in his lecture "The New High School for the New Deal" said that it is the job of the nation's high schools to find ways of teaching the masses of the American people to make wise use of their new found freedom. Otherwise, this freedom. Otherwise, this freedom will become license and result in individual and social deterioration.

In another address he said that educational reconstruction involves more than the restoration of budgets, salary schedules, portions of the curriculum, school terms, and building programs.

"The problem is one of redesigning the pattern of American education in a number of important aspects. "Education should be more directly and more effectively focused upon basic social problems of contemporary life."

Lesson for July 1

AHIJAH AND THE DIVIDED KINGDOM.

LESSON TEXT—I Kings 11:29; 12:1-33.

GOLDEN TEXT—Pride goeth before destruction, and a haughty spirit before a fall. Proverbs 16:18.

PRIMARY TOPIC—A King Who Was Not King.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Why a Young King Lost a Kingdom.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Right and Wrong Choices.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—How to Prevent Divisions.

I. Ahijah's Prophecy (I Kings 11:29-33).

In view of the political situation it would have been unwise publicly to make known God's plan to Jeroboam within the capital city. Therefore, as Jeroboam was going out of the city, Ahijah, in a symbolic manner, made known the future of the kingdom. He took from his person his garment and rent it in 12 pieces, giving to Jeroboam ten of the pieces with the assurance that ten of the tribes would rally around him as their king.

II. Rehoboam Facing a Crisis (I Kings 12:1-15).

1. The demand of the people (vv. 1-4). This was occasioned by the burden of excessive taxation and enforced labor required by Solomon in order to build costly houses and temples for his heathen wives. Upon the accession of the new king, the people, through their leader Jeroboam, requested that their burdens be made lighter, promising loyalty on condition of lightened burdens.

2. Rehoboam's foolish decision (vv. 5-15).

a. Consultation with the old men (vv. 5-7). These were men of experience who had been Solomon's advisers. Being acquainted with the conditions as imposed by Solomon, and knowing the temper of the people, they advised that the people's request be granted.

b. Consultation with the young men (vv. 8-11). These young men had grown up with Rehoboam, possibly were his half-brothers, sons of Solomon's many wives. Being thus brought up in the luxury of the king's house they were ignorant of the rights of the people and advised that the burdens be increased.

c. Advice of the young men followed (vv. 12-15). At the appointed time he announced his purpose to the people, asserting his intent to increase their burdens and sorrows.

III. The Revolt of the Ten Tribes (vv. 16-24).

Upon Rehoboam's announcement of his rash purpose all Israel cried out "What portion have we in David? . . . to your tents, O Israel!"

1. Rehoboam's attempt to collect tribute (vv. 18, 19). As he endeavored to collect tribute from the ten tribes, Adoram, his tribute gatherer, was stoned to death. So violent was the opposition on the part of the people that Rehoboam himself had to flee to Jerusalem in order to save his life.

2. Jeroboam made king over Israel (v. 20). The people lost no time in selecting a national head so as to be strong in their opposition to Rehoboam.

3. Rehoboam's attempt to compel the ten tribes to return to Judah (vv. 21-24). To effect this he assembled his army of 180,000 men. Through the prophecy of Shemaiah, which forbade them to go against their brethren they were persuaded to return.

IV. Jeroboam's Scheme to Unify the Ten Tribes (vv. 25-33).

1. He established calf worship (vv. 25-30). His pretext for this worship was his fear lest religious unity should heal the political separation. He was afraid that the people would go back to Jerusalem to worship and therefore would gradually be led to acknowledge allegiance to Rehoboam, and his own life would be taken.

2. His scheme of worship (vv. 31-33).

a. He built a house of high places (v. 31). This was against the direct command of God. God had directed his people to destroy the high places and to break down the idolatrous centers.

b. He made priests of the lowest of the people (v. 31), though God set aside the tribe of Levi to fill the office of the priesthood.

c. He changed the day of the Feast of the Tabernacle. (v. 32). The time of this Feast was set by the Lord (Lev. 23:33, 34). Jeroboam argued that the change in the time would better suit their northern climate, but God who made the climate had ordained the time of the Feast.

d. Jeroboam himself intrudes into the priest's office (v. 33). This act of presumption on his part was the climax of his godlessness.

Hatred of Sin

True repentance has as its constituent elements not only grief and hatred of sin, but also an apprehension of the mercy of God in Christ. It hates the sin, and not simply the penalty; and it hates the sin most of all because it has discovered and felt God's love.—William Taylor.

Inexhaustible

"We can never fully know Christ, nor fully apprehend Him, for Christ is inexhaustible."—Dr. Graham Scroggie.

CLANTON SWAMPS MAPLESVILLE

Combining the 4-hit pitching perforance of Golson and Armstrong with a blasting offensive, and taking full advantage of seven miscues, Clanton swamped Maplesville on the local field Thursday afternoon 23 to 0.

Golson allowed only two singles during the six innings he worked, and Armstrong allowed two in the remaining three, while whiffing six.

Potts, hurling for Maplesville, was wild and ineffective, and Clanton scored six runs off him before he was replaced by S. Hayes in the second inning. He did no better, however. He walked Blood, Hayes doubled, Littlejohn tripled, and Jones singled; Baker was hit by a pitched ball, and Simms singled, before Golson grounded and Simpson flied out to end the big inning.

Maplesville's four hits were all singles, while, for Clanton, Alex Hayes, Simpson, Littlejohn and Jones all doubled, and Littlejohn trippled. Alex Hayes had a perfect day at bat, walking once and hitting safely five times out of six trips to the plate. Littlejohn was close behind with five out of six.

MISSION SCHOOL THREE DAYS HERE

Will Be At Baptist Church in Clanton On July the 10, 11 and 12

It is not too early to turn to the calendar and mark July 10, 11 and 12 as special dates to be held open for the Mission Institute, which is to be at Clanton Baptist church on those days. This is a joint affair, Chilton and Unity Association participating equally. Therefore, every church in the two associations should be represented.

It is also a family affair. Classes and entertainment will be provided for every age. Every preacher pastoring a church in either association is urged to be present. Both men and women, boys and girls, children from the age of three to grandparents of any age, are cordially invited. Splendid speakers and teachers have already been secured. Later the complete program will be printed.

This article is to remind you to make ready. Pastors, do not arrange to be holding a revival those days; church officers, plan to secure trucks or buses if your folks do not have many ways to come; W. M. S. presidents and members of the executive of W. M. U., be certain to attend the joint executive board to be held for both associations at Clanton, Friday, June 22, that plans may be made together. This is very important. The meeting opens at 10:30, each one brings her own box lunch; will probably close by two or two-thirty.

Plan to make this institute your family treat for the summer. You and your family will be better and happier Christians if you attend the whole three days. Plan to do that.—Mrs. S. J. Ezell, director.

WILL TEACH WRITING AT CLANTON GRAMMAR SCHOOL

Beginning July 9th Prof. J. C. Brown will teach a writing school at the Clanton Grammar school building. He will have both night classes and day classes. The day classes will be from 8 to 10 o'clock and the night classes from 8 to 9 o'clock. He will teach five days and nights a week.

Mr. Brown is the foremost teacher of writing in this section of Alabama. He has been in the work for the past several years, and is prepared to give really high class training in both business and fancy penmanship—the same kind that one might receive from the leading colleges. And his tuition is within the reach of everyone. Folks do not often have the opportunity of taking writing lessons equal to those offered by Mr. Brown.

Prof. Brown will be glad to have you confer with him if you are interested in either the day or the night classes, or you may see Mr. Callen or Mr. Smith at Peoples Savings Bank. tf

Why Not A Sewage Disposal Plant For Our City?

(By T. J. Arledge, County Engineer)

Our national government has spent $20,555.15, and our county the sum of $3,819.05, for the purpose of providing a more healthful and sanitary place for us to live, by the great drainage program now in operation and nearing completion, the draining of the swamps and marshy conditions surrounding our town. We are continuing this work, and we expect to have the whole completed in the early fall, providing complete drainage of that marshy and swamp condition we have tolerated for these many years. This is being done at an additional cost to our county of around $90 per week, and our national government is contributing around $220 per week in men and man-power for this work, making a total weekly expenditure of $310 since the first day of April, the date of beginning operations under the new relief program. This work will be completed about the first of October this year, which means that an additional sum of around $8,060 will have been expended on this work—a total of $32,434.20, for the purpose of providing a better place to live.

We have cleaned up our swamps in an effort to rid ourselves of the mosquito pest and its attendant disease, malaria. But, what are we going to do about the attendant dangers of improper sewage disposal? Are we going to continue tolerating a condition which eventually pollutes and contaminates the running water of our creeks and streams from which our cattle and other livestock have to get their water, to say nothing about the bad odors and fumes we must endure from the decomposition of animal, vegetable and other matter from our open sewers.

It is a well known fact that the stream into which the sewage from the cotton mill is openly dumped, goes dry during the summer months and stays dry until late in the fall; that this waste matter from the sewage accumulates in the open ditch along the side of the railroad for a considerable distance from the bridge over the creek north of town, and towards the cotton mill and a territory where quite a lot of people live, and who must endure a condition every day that the most of us would not tolerate over night. This condition can be overcome through some method of sewage disposal.

Also, east of town, we have almost the same condition. Open sewers are dumped into the creek just below the high school, and is allowed to run along the side of the Higgins Ferry Road for some little distance; to stand and accumulate in the ditches along this road where the traveling public must endure the fumes and bad odors on their way to and from our town. The condition now existing along this road in the vicinity of our high school is not creditable to our town and county, and the same applies to that condition along the side of the railroad where strangers passing through on the trains may view and breathe an unsightly and noisome condition so close to our homes. All of this can be removed and overcome through the construction of a proper plant from which all waste matter has been properly disposed and the affluent or water therefrom almost as pure as the water we drink.

What is a Sewage Disposal Plant?

It is a plant consisting of various facilities for chemically treating sewage so as to remove all or so alter its objectionable constituents as to render it less offensive or dangerous. There are many types of disposal plants but practically the same method of disposition of waste matter. Recent trends in sewage disposal seem to lean more to the following standard types:

"A"—Imhoff treatment, with various subsequent facilities for treatment.

"B"—Single story settling, separate sludge digestion, with various subsequent facilities for treatment.

"C"—Activated Sludge Plants with Imhoff tanks for primary settling.

Of the three types shown the latter, "C", seems to be more desired due to its economy and efficiency in operation, using compressed air for agitation for the oxidation of the sewage. One method of sludge disposal seems to be universal, and that is: after full digestion of sludge it is then placed on sand beds for drying, and after drying it may be used for fertilizer or burned.

To summarize briefly, it has been pointed out that: Sewage treatment plants are constructed for the purpose of changing the organic content of sewage to an inoffensive condition as rapidly as possible, with a minimum of odor and other nuisances, and to prevent pollution of the watercourses into which the treated sewages are discharged.

The writer will be glad to prepare estimates of costs and other data and do all in his power to assist it getting a disposal plant for our town.

Mr. and Mrs. Dewey Rockett and daughters are expected home this week from a visit to Chicago, and the World's Fair.

Jim Dudley Collins has been very ill with pneumonia, at the home of his grandfather, J. D. Collins, Sr., for the past week, but late reports say he is improving.

Mrs. Alphia Ellison, who underwent an operation at Central Alabama hospital five weeks ago, is improving and will be released from the hospital one day this week.

Mr. Claud Jones, Miss Mary Sue Jones and James Jones of Birmingham spent Sunday with Mrs. A. S. Prince.

The directors for the morning were O. L. Devaughn, Hiram Littlejohn, Cornelius Hand, Leonard Culp, Melvin Devaughn, Mr. Cagle and Lee Grant.

At 11:15 Bro. J. H. Limbrick delivered a wonderful sermon which everyone seemed to enjoy. At noon a beautiful table was set with all kinds of delicious food. Some of the members were on the job and had plenty of ice water there.

The singing was called to order at 1:15 by the chairman. The directors for the afternoon were J. R. Robinson, Lee Grant, S. A. Henley, Melvin Devaughn, Mack Durbin, Rev. H. J. PROF. B. F. GILLILAND HERE

To singers who have a custom of reading the names of authors of songs "B. F. Gilliland" looks familiar, since this name was appearing in the Showalter books twenty years ago. He has been writing and singing continuously ever since.

Mr. Gilliland, whose home is in Jasper, Ala., is in Clanton this week and will be at the community singing at the courthouse Friday night. He is now representing the Denson-Parris Music Co., of Arley, Ala., and will have a supply of these books to use at the courthouse singing. We hope that a good crowd of singers will meet Mr. Gilliland and help out in the singing.

NEWTON POPWELL JOINS THE SALES FORCE OF POLK BROS.

Newton Popwell, popular young man of South Clanton, is now selling Plymouth and Chrysler cars for Polk Brothers Motor Co.

Mr. Popwell, for the past several years, has been connected with Reuben Lowe in the general merchandising business where he made a host of friends with his pleasant smile and courteous greetings to customers.

Newton says that when he decided to get in the automobile selling game, that he thoroughly investigated the merits of "all three cars," and then he found that the Plymouth was by far the greatest value of all, so naturally that is the car he chose to sell.

He states that he, of course, will sell all lines of merchandise handled by the Polk Brothers Motor Co., such as International Motor Trucks, McCormick-Deering farming implements, Weber wagons, Atwater-Kent radios and Norge refrigerators.

We congratulate the Polk Brothers Motor Co., on being able to secure such a popular salesman as Newton Popwell, and we predict that you will see the popular Plymouth cars in greatly increased numbers on the roads of Chilton County.

ADMISSION 10c and 25c

INTERESTING FORD EXHIBIT AT CLANTON MOTORS, THIS WEEK

A modern adaptation of the "little red schoolhouse"—this time in the form of a traveling school for motor car mechanics—rolled into Clanton yesterday. It was housed in a trim Ford V-8 Sedan delivery truck, equipped for mechanical demonstrations of the proper methods of servicing Ford motor cars of all types. Headquarters during its stay here will be at Clanton Motors, Inc., local Ford dealers.

The "school on wheels," which is under the direction of the Atlanta branch of the Ford Motor Company, is similar in theory to many new traveling schools which "carry the school to the student." The school truck is equipped with tools of every description to illustrate the most modern methods of motor car servicing employed by Ford dealers.

Thirty-two traveling schools, one in each Ford branch territory in the United States, have been inaugurated by the Ford Motor Company for the benefit of Ford owners. Classes which are being conducted daily in all parts of the country are under the direction of a factory representative charged with the task of visiting Ford dealers for the purpose of instructing their mechanics in latest approved methods of servicing and maintenance.

Through the classes mechanics are given the benefit of thorough training in every phase of Ford service—not only the more important major repair operations but also in methods of facilitating properly maintenance and adjustment operations and minor repairs.

In the course of yesterday's class, lessons were given in Ford engine construction. A thorough discussion was held of the theory and practice of motor tune-up. Special emphasis was given to the new Ford cylinder assembly exchange policy, under which the old practice of engnie overhaul is replaced by purchase and installation of engines reconditioned at the factory.

Instruction was given in the servicing and repair of the Ford carburetor, distributor and fuel pump, as well as other units of the electrfcal system, and the cooling system.

The school will be conducted again tonight at the service department of Clanton Motors, Inc., local Ford dealers.

Profitable Milk From First-Calf Heifers

Find Way to Raise Them Bigger—Extra Milk Pays Cost

The first-calf heifer has always been looked down upon by the dairy world. Seldom did she give enough milk during her first year in production to pay for her keep. Now the first-calf heifer takes her place among older cows as a profitable producer, according to figures just released by the Purina Experimental Farm, Gray Summit, Mo. These figures show that production of first-calf heifers was increased 1,500 pounds apiece. That's 175 extra gallons.

Strangely, production was not increased by anything which was done while the heifers were in milk. The increase was made before the heifers came into production. They were developed into larger, more fully-developed animals by the way they were fed during the first two years, according to Mr. E. B. Powell, manager of the Purina Farm. Naturally these bigger, more mature heifers gave more milk, Mr. Powell explains.

The chart above shows the growth and freshening of these heifers as compared to that of the average heifer.

The Holstein heifers at the Purina Farm are bred to freshen at 24 to 25 months of age. At that time they weigh from 1,150 to 1,200 pounds with some individuals over 1,200 pounds. The normal weight of Holstein heifers 3 to 5 months older (27 to 30 months) is slightly less—1,021 pounds. And normal Holstein heifers usually are bred to freshen at 27 to 30 months.

The most interesting part of the heifer-growing program at Gray Summit is the way the calves are fed. On the third day of their lives they are given free access to solid foods—hay, heifer growing chow and calf starting chow. The latter is a "checker" or nugget form of feed that takes the place of milk or gruel. Milk is fed from a bucket for a month. By that time the calves are eating liberally of solid feeds and no more milk is needed. From then on the calves are fed merely by keeping the calf starting chow and heifer growing chow and hay before the calves in troughs.

Calf starting chow is discontinued at the end of the 4th month and just heifer chow and roughage fed until freshening time.

The first-calf heifers raised on this method usually produce from 25 to 40 pounds of milk a day, which, for 120 days, means that they have given 3,000 pounds of milk before the normal heifer freshens. At $1.00 a hundred, this is $30 worth of extra milk—enough to pay for all the grain and concentrate the heifer eats in the entire two years of her growing life.

"That these heifers really are big and completely developed, though young, is shown by the fact that they averaged 9,558 pounds of milk in their first lactation periods under regular farm conditions," Mr. Powell says. "In fact, they averaged 1,500 pounds more than a similar group of first-calf heifers at the Purina Farm which were raised according to the usual methods."

BUM STEER

Philadelphia, June 26.—The steer looked into his crystal ball. "You must return Friday," he said to William Cooperage. "There is much in the future that can be determined then. I must give you another reading. Friday will produce important events." Friday did. Cooperage came back with three other policemen. They booked the seer under the name of Albert Ross.

FREE SPEECH

St. Louis, June 26.—Authorities are convinced that Alfred Fosen among other things, believes in communism. It was at an inquest into the accidental killing of a negro by police that Rosen appeared as a volunteer witness. From the stand he touched briefly on the case, discussed the federal government at length and concluded with a plea for the cause of communism.

Earnie Childress And Jimmie Lee Cox Take Own Lives By Shooting

Earnie Childress, age 19 years, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. F. Childress, of Pates Chapel community, shot himself about 1 o'clock p.m., Sunday. Death was instantaneous. The bullet from a .32 calibre pistol entered the young man's left eye.

Coroner J. Mell Martin was called to investigate the case, and pronounced a verdict of accidental shooting. According to the story of Bernie Watley and Irvin Pate, young Childress picked up the pistol, apparently in a playful mood, pointed it toward his face, and said "Watch Me." When he pulled the trigger, the gun fired and he fell to the floor dead.

The accident occurred at the home of Isom Pate, in the Pates Chapel community west of Thorsby.

Funeral services were held Monday morning at eleven o'clock, conducted by Rev. M. Lockhart, at Pate's Chapel. Burial arrangements were in charge of Martin.

The deceased is survived by his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. M. F. Childress; three sisters, Mrs. Mabel Leach, Mrs. Myrtle Scott, and Mrs. Melvie Maddox; two brothers, Alford and Lee Childress.

Jimmie Lee Cox Suicide

Jimmie Lee Cox, age 23 years, committed suicide about 11 o'clock last Sunday, at Sylacauga, by shooting himself with a shot gun. The body was brought to Clanton Monday and carried to the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bud Cox, of West End.

The deceased is survived by his wife, Mrs. Minnie Cox. It is said that young Cox killed himself on account of trouble he had been having with his wife.

A very considerable reduction in price is being offered on all summer merchandise items in the store during this special selling event. The offerings apply to standard high quality goods in every department of the store. It will be a good idea to investigate this sale during the next week, if you care to save some money on your merchandise.

New Officers For Local Post Elected to Handle Business For Coming Year

The regular monthly meeting of Chilton County Post No. 6 of the American Legion was held at the courthouse Monday night. Post Commander Reuben Lowe, presided.

The most important phase of business transacted at the meeting was the election of officers for the next year.

Reuben Lowe was elected Post Commander. Mr. Lowe has been commander for the past few months, serving the unexpired term of Grover A. Bice, resigned. He was accorded a fine expression of appreciation for his services by members of the Post upon his election to the office for a full term.

Vaughn C. McKee, post adjutant for the past year, was elected vice commander for the coming year. Kin M. Vinson was elected Post Adjutant, to succeed Mr. McKee.

A full quota of nine delegates and nine alternates were elected to represent Chilton County Post at the Alabama Department Convention to be held in Birmingham July 23, 24 and 25.

The report of Chilton County Post at the Department convention this month will show that the membership for this year exceeds that of last year by a considerable number.

Percy Pitts rendered a report on the soldiers barbecue which was held last week at Mims Lake. A variety of expressions indicated that this meeting was very important to all ex-service men who attended. The visiting speaker, Maj. W. M. Weston, state service commissioner, brought a message of explanation of legislation that was of much interest to all of the soldiers.

The newly elected officers of the Post will assume their official duties at the next regular meeting the first Monday night in August, at the courthouse.

Rented Land May Be Used For Soil Or Food Crops For Own Use

Carrying out instructions received from Washington, County Agent, J. W. Fant, is requesting all cotton contract signers to designate rented acres by placing stakes at corners of areas rented in order that those making measurements can do the work faster. This work is to begin soon, it is stated.

Mr. Fant says he is advised that the committees, in checking up cotton contracts, will measure the acres rented and the acres planted in cotton in the case of each farmer under contract with the government.

In a letter sent out to all contract signers, Mr. Fant continues with this statement:

"The copy of your contract and the card which we mailed to you show the number of acres you rented to the government, and the acres you were to plant in 1934.

"By referring to your contract you will note the use that may be made of rented acres. It states: 'Use the rented acres only for soil improving crops, erosion-preventing crops, food crops for consumption by the producer of the farm, feed crops for live stock consumption on the farm, fallowing, or such other uses as may be permitted by the secretary or his authorized agent.'

"If there should be any other information you desire, meet your county agent at the nearest point given below on the date given:

Maplesville schoolhouse, Thursday, July 5, at 7:30 a.m. Stanton schoolhouse, Thursday, July 5, at 10 a.m. Concord schoolhouse, Beat 4, Thursday, July 5, at 2 p.m. Providence schoolhouse Thursday, July 5, at 4 p.m. Thomas scholhouse Friday, July 6, at 7:30 a.m. Cooper schoolhouse Friday, July 6, at 10 a.m. Verbena High School Friday, July 6, at 1 p.m."

CULP GIVES NOTICE OF TAXES

Tax Collector W. G. Culp, in a statement Tuesday said that he will be able to extend the time for payment of state and county taxes to August 15 without the addition of extra fees and costs. After that date, all who have not paid taxes will have to suffer the additional extra penalties which are required by law.

According to Mr. Culp, there are a great many people in the county who have not yet paid their taxes this year, and he desires that all have notice in time to save the penalties which will be imposed if they wait later than the 15th of August to pay.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Stroud and sister of Gadsden visited relatives here Sunday.

Local Labor For Paving Highway

Portion of Selma Highway Will Be Hard Surfaced By Contractor

Contract for paving 2.66 miles of the Selma highway west from Clanton has been awarded by the State Highway Department to the Hardaway Construction Company, of Columbus, Ga. The amount of the contract is $42,000. It has been stated unofficially that there is a possibility that the distance to be paved under the contract will be more than 2.66 miles, provided the amount of the contract will be sufficient to extend further than that distance.

Right of way for the road has been secured by the county for a distance of 4.9 miles, which extends to the Liberty Hill crossing. County authorities are endeavoring to secure the paving to that point. Condemnation proceedings for the right-of-way were completed by the county during the past week. J. L. Wilson, G. W. Melton and D. O. Manning served as a commission to assess valuation upon property which had to be condemned.

Judge Reynolds stated Tuesday that condemnation of the property being completed, the State Highway Department is now free to complete signing of the contract with the construction company, and it is assured that work will be started within the next few weeks.

The contract, it is understood, calls for construction of a black-top hard surfaced road, commonly known as asphalt. It will be built of nine inches of crushed rock or stone as a base, upon which there will be two inches of black top surfacing, and finished with a sealing process.

It is stated that regulations provide that the contractor may bring his own machinery here with which to do the work, but that all labor must be employed locally. To this end, it is understood a representative of the Federal Employment Service will come to Clanton and have charge of sellection and classification of labor for the job.

NEW CROP SWEET POTATOES

Mr. J. A. Sorrell, of Jemison, came to Clanton Tuesday, bringing a load of new crop sweet potatoes which he sold in the local market. "Before I left home," Mr. Sorrell said, "I had the pleasure of eating a pie for dinner which was made from my new potatoes. It was mighty good, too, as were the potatoes which were baked."

Millions Coming To Alabama Soon

Government Will Spend Large Sums For Emergency Relief Projects

Alabama within the next 60 to 90 days will witness the greatest public buildings and construction program in the history of the commonwealth with the release of millions of federal funds into the state.

Aside from the millions appropriated by the 73rd Congress for road construction, new postoffices, and funds for a score of other purposes, the program of construction by the Public Works Administration is expected to be in full swing within the next 60 days, accordnig to Dr. George J. Davis, Jr., state engineer and inspector of the PWA.

The Public Works Administration funds were only recently released following an opinion by the Alabama Supreme Court clarifying the legal authority of certain municipalities to borrow funds.

Following is a summary of a few of the millions in federal funds recently made available to Alabama in President Roosevelt's recovery program:

Public Works Administration, approximately $4,830,000, for construction of schools, municipal waterworks and sewers, and other public buildings and projects.

Public Works Administration, $4,259,842 for road paving and construction.

Federal Emergency Relief Administration, $1,742,000 a month, an increase of $542,000 monthly.

U. S. Treasury Department, $1,500,000 for new postoffices and new customs house at Mobile.

The vast construction program authorized by the Public Works Administration is expected to provide employment to thousands and give new life to the building and municipal utility supply industries, Mr. Davis said.

The program affects 39 cities and counties whose applications for loans or grants have been approved.—(By George L. Davis, in Montgomery Advertiser.)

It is understood that the United States Treasury Department is working out approximate cost of the proposed postoffice building at Clanton, with the expectation that bids will be asked within the next few weeks.

CHILTON FARMER IS DROWNED IN LAKE

Abb J. Martin, 50-year-old farmer, of Jemison, was drowned last Thursday afternoon when the boat in which he was running a trotline in the backwater several miles above Lay Dam capsized, throwing him and Leo Ellison into 20 feet of water at the mouth of Waxahatchie Creek.

The men were thrown from the boat when Martin, who was raising the line, tripped, causing the boat to capsize. Ellison swam to shore and clung to a bush until he was rescued by Elon Cobb who was nearby.

An attempt was made to reach Martin, but he let go of the overturned boat to which he was clinging before Cobb and Sam Collins in another boat could reach him. His body was recovered about an hour later.

He is survived by his father, W. H. Martin, of Jemison; three sisters, Mrs. J. D. Sutley, Jemison; Mrs. J. P. Cobb, of West Palm Beach, Fla.; Mrs. Gene Ellison, Texas; three brothers, John T. Martin, Centreville and A. W. and Jim Lee Martin, of Jemison.

Funeral was held Saturday at 3 p.m. from the Providence Baptist church. Burial was in the churchyard cemetery, with Martin and Sons, of Clanton, in charge.

G. O. P. HITS DEMOCRAT NEW DEAL AND NRA

Depression And Other Evils Laid At Feet of Party Now In Power; Whiskey And Return of Saloons Declared Dangerous Bid

A committee to recommend a state Republican ticket for the November Election to oppose Democratic nominees was appointed by the Republican state convention and retired to draw up its report. Similar committee on patforms and resolutions and on state organization were named.

A ripping attack upon the Democratic party and its present administration of national affairs, was delivered at the opening of the Alabama Republican state convention at the Tutwiler Hotel Wednesday, June 27.

The Democratic party was blamed for the depression which was descried as a by-product of the World War, and the Republican party was credited with raising the United States to a dominant position among nations through the operation of the Republican tariff.

After the Republicans had opened their meeting with prayer, L. B. Noojin, Jasper, took charge and lashed into the Democratic new deal, which he termed a "new dole."

Exhibiting a copy of the NRA Blue Eagle publication, he said that it can and most likely will become "a most potent instrument of propaganda" printed and circulated at the expense of the taxpayers. Great applause from a large attendance greeted his designation of Abraham Lincoln as the first Republican president. Crediting the Republican party with the building of this nation, he said the G. O. P. has furnished 11 of the 14 presidents since Lincoln.

The depression of the last few years is due to conditions arising as a backwash of the World War, he said. The only heritage from that war has been enormous debts, the repudidation of which may cause further international complications greater than those of the World War in which this country engaged on the specious plea of fighting for democracy, he said.

Describing the new deal as a new dole, Noojin asserted that one out of every six persons in the United States is now being supported by the government. He then reviewed conditions preceding the French Revolution and quoted Frank Knox as saying that a Republican is one who believes in recovery but not in revolution.

Referring to increased taxation and the debasement of currency, he quoted the Democratic financial leader, Carter Glass, of Virginia, as saying that the latter is dishonorable, immoral and is mobocracy instead of democracy; that the blue eagle has proven to be a bird of prey and that currency which says it is redeemable in gold at the United States Treasury has become a liar and teaches dishonesty to the people.

Vigorous applause met his expression of hope that "our party will never be responsible for cancellation of a single cent of the war debts."

"Rather, let us carry them forever on our books in red ink as a warning to future generations against en tangling alliances," he said. Noojin then attacked the "artificial efforts of the brain trust to control the inexoribles laws of demand and supply." Post War demands of factory production drew farmers to the cities and factories where they have been living from the grocery instead of the smokehouse and cellar, he said, and out of this has grown the depression.

Resolutions Adopted

Attached to the platform was a resolution presented by the committee on platform and resolutions, which was adopted jointly with the platform.

This resolution expressed a reavowal "of our belief in and continued adherence to the time-honored principles and policies of the Republican party, such as a tariff that will protect Alabama labor against the peon and pauper labor of foreign countries, the utmost freedom of the individual consistent with constiutional laws regularly passed, freedom of the press, freedom of thought, freedom of speech, freedom of conscience, freedom of action and the guaranty that no citizen shall be deprived of life, liberty or property except by the due process of law constitutionally enacted and judicially enforced."

Continuing the resolution condemned "the custom that has grown up by leaps and bounds under this administration of delegating to the president or to some underling the power to make laws," and urged a return of the government "to the paths mapped out by our federal constitution."

Under the heading of "'liquor," the platform stated as follows:

"We have not forgotten the days of the saloon and dispensary. We have not forgotten the human wrecks, the homes of squalor, want and degredation, the overflowing jails, the uncalled for and unjustifiable crimes, murder and bloodshed, all the outgrowth of the liquor traffic. The cry for wines and beer is the first step toward the legalized sale of liquor.

"In this day of progress, with the streets and highways overflowing with humanity in high-powered cars, with the rapid increase in population and transportation, the legalized liquor traffic must not be permitted. We are, therefore, unalterably opposed to the repeal of the state prohibition laws, and pledge ourselves to the task of upbuilding and enforcing them as they are now written."

Dr. J. C. Swann, of Wedowee, was re-elected Chairman, T. J. Kennamer, of Birmingham, secretary; Fred Osborn, of Heflin, treasurer; O. D. Street, of Guntersville, national committeeman and Mrs. Birdie H. Kennamer, of Montgomery, national committee woman.

Citizen Of Clanton Considering Important Public Questions Of Immediate Future

The Kiwanis Club of Clanton held a meeting of much interest and great importance last Thursday night at the Exchange Hotel. A large number of business men of the community, not members of the club, attended the meeting and joined in a wide discussion of several important public questions that are of current interest in Clanton.

President Luther Little called upon Mayor J. Lee Smith to state to the meeting the high spots of the movement to erect a city hall in Clanton and to extend the water mains. After Mayor Smith had done this a general discussion of the two subjects was engaged in by several of the business men present.

Unanimous agreement was given to the pressing need of water main extension, indicating that approval of this project will be almost unanimous in the election of July 30th. One or two expressions indicated that there may be some douht as to the need of a city hall; but the fact that the interest rate proposed will be so low seems to soften what might be opposition to the question.

All things considered, it may be said that the sentiment of the meeting Thursday night was predominantly in favor of supporting the two propositions, the city hall and waterworks, in the election to be held July 30th.

Mayor Smith made it clear in presenting the matters that the city officials are not disposed to take either side of the argument. They have made application for the loan from PWA, and the application has been approved. Now it will be up to the people to say whether or not they want the city to carry the propositions through.

The question of a swimming pool in Clanton brought forth a lengthy discussion, which never did get anywhere in particular. The comment finally centered in the airport development, and rested with the hope that some plan may be worked out to include a swimming pool in the possible projects that may go to make up a community center of the airport development. A committee went to Montgomery Tuesday to hold a conference with Thad Holt and Major Hawkins concerning this matter.

At the request of President Little, Postmaster Billy Smith stated to the meetnig some facts relative to the proposed postoffice building which the government now offers to build in Clanton. After presentation by Mr. Smith the question was discussed by a number of other leading citizens. It was determined positively to put all the local support possible behind the postoffice movement. The meeting authorized Secretary Dan Waite to wire Congressman Oliver the approval and hearty support of every person at the meeting, assuring him that Clanton stands ready to do everything possible to expedite action by the government in erecting the federal building here.

One Hundred Hour Non-Stop Chevrolet Endurance Drive In Progress This Week

A one-hundred-hour nonstop Chevrolet endurance drive began at ten o'clock Tuesday morning, July 3, and will continue without interruption until two o'clock Saturday afternoon, July 7th.

The drive began at Hayes Chevrolet Company, in Clanton, where it will end after one hundred hours of continuous driving, without a stop for anything.

Promptly at ten o'clock Tuesday morning Sheriff Gillespie handcuffed the driver to the steering wheel of this new 1934 Chevrolet, and the grueling test of nerves, flesh and machine officialy began. Hour after hour, for four long days and longer nights, the car must keep moving and the driver alert.

Rain or shine, stormy or fair, it must go on. Only two things can stop this moving marathon — (tire trouble or to avoid an accident)—before the appointed hour, two o'clock Saturday afternoon.

Every morning at ten o'clock and every evening at six o'clock the car will re-fuel at Teel's Service Station, but it will not stop. The rules require re-fueling on the run.

And the driver must eat, but keep driving all the while. The Dixie Cafe will keep him fed.

Beard will grow on the driver's face, but he can't stop on account of whiskers. Dick Bean will shave him in the car every day, and while it is moving continuously toward the goal Don't fail to see this performance, where a slip might mean a tragedy.

Everybody has a special invitation to take a ride in this new Chevrolet during the endurance test. But you will have to catch it on the run. It must not stop to let you in or let you out.

Don't fail to see this car at the ball park in Clanton July 4th. It will re-fuel from a service truck on the grounds without stopping at 9:45 o'clock.

When the drive officially ends at Hayes Chevrolet Company Saturday afternoon at two o'clock the driver will get into an ambulance and be carried to the hospital for examination. Then he will go to sleep in the window of the E. L. Klinner Furniture Company to catch up with his neglected rest.

This event is being sponsored by the following business houses of Clanton: Teel Service Station, Upchurch Drug Co., E. L. Klinner Furniture Co., Clanton Cash Store, Dixie Cafe, Exchange Barber Shop, Popwell Pressing Shop, Wadesonian Theatre, Hayes Chevrolet Co., Taylor Dry Goods Co., Farmers Hardware Co., Alabama Harness and Shoe Shop.

Miss Bess Thomas, popular teacher in the Clanton Grammar school for several years past, has accepted a position in one of the high schools of Birmingham. The vacancy created in the Clanton school will be filled by Miss Ada Holcombe, of Calera.

SINGING SCHOOL AT HIGHLAND BEGINNING MONDAY, JULY 9th

Prof. Wilson taught a singing school at Highland last summer, and made a splendid success of it. He has taught at various places for the past five years, and is fast becoming one of the best teachers of the county. He deserves the undivided support of the community.

Please allow me space in your paper to express my thanks to the voters of Chilton County. Dear friends, it is with grateful heart and mind that I thank each and everyone of you for your vote and influence for me in the election of June 12th, and I want you to know that I shall never forget you for it. POWER COMPANY DIVIDENDS

Accompanying its 57th consecutive quarterly dividend checks, the Alabama Power Company has sent to the stockholders a statement from President Thomas Martin, in which the executive reveals that in the last eight and one-half years the average monthly use of electricity by residential customers has increased from 35.2 kilowatt hours to 69.7 kilowatt hours at a cost of 3.94 cents a k.w.h.

"We know of no other commodity of service which has shown a comparable reduction of more than one-half the unit cost to the ultimate consumer in the same period," President Martin's letter read.

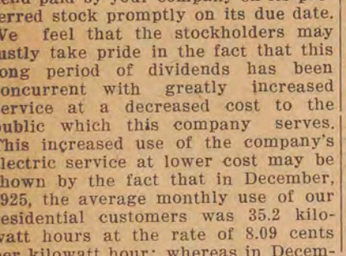
"The enclosed check," the letter began, "is for the dividend on your preferred stock due July 2, 1934. This is the 57th consecutive quarterly dividend paid by your company on its preferred stock promptly on its due date. We feel that the stockholders may justly take pride in the fact that this long period of dividends has been concurrent with greatly increased service at a decreased cost to the public which this company serves. This increased use of the company's electric service at lower cost may be shown by the fact that in December, 1925, the average monthly use of our residential customers was 35.2 kilowatt hours at the rate of 8.09 cents per kilowatt hour; whereas in December, 1933, the average use by such customers was 69.7 kilowatt hours at a cost of 3.94 cents per kilowatt hour."

SINGING SCHOOL AT ENTERPRISE

O. L. Devaughn will begin an 18-day singing school at Enterprise school building Monday, July 9th. This will be his second term at this place, having taught a very successful school there last summer. The people of the community think this one will be even larger and better than the one last year.

The teacher and people of the immediate community extend an invitation and a welcome to others of adjoining communities who may wish to attend. The teacher requests and insists that all patrons if possible, and others who may be interested, to be present on the morning of the opening day at 9 o'clock, and be in the opening exercises, whether you enroll or not.

The A. J. Showalter text books will be used and the latest Stamps-Baxter song books (Leading Light) will be used in the class practice. We believe that it will be time well spent for anyone to make arrangements and attend this school.



Some of the biggest fools in the world are the modernistic, socialistic, rationalistic, communistic, writers in this country. Recently an editorial writer said in substance: "The Bob Jones College located at Cleveland, Tennessee, standing as it does for the old time religion and the old conservative traditions of America will be a hindrance to the development of the Tennessee Valley." What a fool that fellow is!

The men who built the first colleges in this nation and who were the pioneers of progress, were men who believed what this writer believes and what Bob Jones College stands for. Johnathan Edwards believed in God and heaven and hell, but he believed in culture. The most cultured people I know are the people who believe the Bible and believe in God. The most superficial and ignorant people I have ever met are the type of people that think that progress and the old time religion don't go together.

There is no progress which will be permanent except the progress built upon God, religion and decency. All other progress leads to anarchy and to destruction. The trouble with the world now is we haven't kept our religious development apace with our commercial development. Recently a brilliant orator said he had rather have one east Tennessean with his children fighting in the front yard, his string of red peppers on the wall, his old rifle on the rail, and his wife in the kitchen singing "How Firm a Foundation" than to have all of the "Communistic culture in the world." This orator may seem to be an extremist, but he is right. I had rather have that old Tennesseean believing in God than to have progress which leaves God out of the plan. However, it is possible to have all of our modern progress and to hold on to God and the traditions which have made America. If we do not have progress of that kind we will have anarchy sooner or later.

MUSIC SCHOOL AT THOMAS JUNIOR HIGH BEGINS MONDAY, JULY 9th

Prof. W. M. Devaughn will begin a singing school at Thomas Junior High school building on Monday morning of next week, July 9th. The school will continue for a term of eighteen days, or longer if deemed necessary. Prof. Devaughn anticipates one of the best schools of the season, and says that if necessity demands it, he will employ another teacher to help him in the school. He will teach everything in the music line, including advanced harmony, voice culture, etc. and his tuition charges will be very reasonable.

Everybody anywhere around Clanton knows W. M. Devaughn and what he means as a music teacher, but to those outside the county who are not acquainted with him personally, we will say that if you want to really learn the principles of sacred music, you can do no better than study under him.

When the school is finished, if you want to get a diploma to teach, we will gladly give you the required examination, and if you pass, a diploma will be issued to you. Prof. Devaughn will be pleased to have you get in touch with him by letter or otherwise, if you are interested in furthering your study of music.

CAN FRUIT FOR ORPHANS HOME

Rev. J. W. Jones, Moderator of the Chilton County Baptist Association, calls attention of Baptists of Chilton County to the opportunity they now have of canning fruits and vegetables for the orphans home at Troy. In a statement issued Monday he says:

"For the last four or five years the Baptists of Chilton County have sent many jars of canned fruit and vegetables to our Baptist orphanage at Troy. Brother Colley has sent a lot of jars to Thorsby for use by those who may be interested in canning some things for the orphans this year. These jars can be had by calling at Donald Merchant's store in Thorsby. This is a good thing for our Baptist people to do, and I urge all of you to do it."

SINGING SCHOOLS TO BE HELD AT COLLINS CHAPEL, UNION GROVE

Prof. Ralph Grant will teach two singing schools simultaneously at Collins Chapel and Union Grove, beginning next Monday, July 9th. Lessons at Collins Chapel will run from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m., and at Union Grove from 2:30 until 6 o'clock.

Prof. Grant taught at Union Grove last summer, and had a very good school. It is anticipated that he will have good classes at both places this year.

All of the fundamentals of music will be taught in this school, including rudiments, harmony, voice, ear training, sight reading, etc. The full cooperation of the communities is solicited by Prof. Grant.

Lesson for July 8

ASA RELIES ON GOD

LESSON TEXT—II Chronicles 14:1-15:15.

GOLDEN TEXT—But to do good and to communicate forget not: for with such sacrifices God is well pleased. Hebrews 13:16.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Why King Asa Was Called Good.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Wise-Hearted King Asa.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Standing for the Right.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Courage of Conviction.

I. Asa's Reformation (vv. 1-5).

Asa was the grandson of Rehoboam. Both his grandfather and father favored idolatry, but when he came to the throne he inaugurated a campaign of reform which brought great good. He not only had the handicap of idolatry and immorality fostered by two former kings, but had to contend against the influence of his mother who encouraged immoral worship (I Kings 15:13). In order to carry out his reformatory measures he had to depose her. Asa did that which was good and right in the eyes of the Lord (v. 2).

1. Cleared the land of idolatrous emblems and images (vv. 3, 5), including (a) strange altars devoted to other gods; (b) high places where unlawful sacrifices were offered; (c) the upright stones or images connected with idolatrous worship; (d) the groves which were associated with gross licentiousness.

2. Commanded Judah to seek the Lord (v. 4). He knew that if the reformation was to be effective it must be by the positive seeking after and worshiping God, accompanied by obedience to his commandments.

II. Asa's Defensive Preparations (14:6-8).

1. Built fortified cities (v. 6). He provided a general system of defense involving the cities at strategic points. He took advantage of the years of peace at the beginning of his reign to make fortifications.

2. He erected walls about the cities (v. 7). Upon these stone walls were observation towers from which the position and movements of the enemy could be seen, and from which defensive warfare could be waged.

3. Made gates and barred them (v. 7). The reason he assigns for these preparations was that they had sought the Lord. Those who really trust God will make every effort to provide defense.

4. Had an army of spearmen (v. 8). The army was made up of 480,000 brave men. The spearmen were protected with large shields and were prepared for offensive as well as defensive war.

III. Asa's Victory Over Zerah (14:9-12).

Asa's activity in providing for the national defense excited surrounding kings who interpreted his preparation as an act of aggression.

1. Asa set the battle in array (v. 10). He went out to meet the enemy. The disposition of his army shows his wisdom. Intelligent faith moves the possessor to do first that which is within his power.

2. Asa's prayer (vv. 11, 12). He cried unto the Lord, the source of national power. In this prayer note:

a. His conscious helplessness, the first requisite in obtaining help from God.

b. Appeals to God for help, knowing that with God's help they could win the victory.

c. Reposes faith in God. The word "rest" means to lean upon—to cast the entire weight upon.

d. Advanced courageously. Real faith does not wait until it sees its way clear but goes forth expecting God to clear the way.

e. He flung himself upon God. "O Lord, thou art our God." His cause was God's cause. If God has taken us for his people, and we have taken him for our God, no enemy can prevail against us.

3. The Egyptians smitten (v. 12). The enemy fled before Israel and could not recover themselves. Asa pursued them and overtook them.

IV. Azariah's Message to Asa (15:1-7).

1. The Lord is with thee (vv. 1-6). He made it clear that the Lord is with those who seek him, and those who forsake God shall be forsaken by him.

2. Be strong (v. 7). The one who is in right relationship with God and goes forth as his representative, is strong in God.

V. Asa Entering Into a Covenant With God (15:8-15).

Entering into this covenant relationship meant separation from all idolatry and wickedness. Success is only possible as we seek the Lord with our whole heart.

Time for Prayer

Stop in the midst of the bustle and hurry and temptation of the day for thanksgiving and prayer; a few minutes spent alone with God at midday will go far to keep you calm in the midst of the worries and anxieties of modern life.—R. A. Torrey.

Encouragement

We have reason to be encouraged as long as we have the Spirit of God remaining among us, to work upon us, for so long as we have God with us to work for us.—M. Henry.

Ala. Legionnaires In B'ham 23 - 25

Birmingham, Ala., July 3.—As Alabama is observing Independence week, members of the general convention committee of the Alabama Department of the American Legion are busy with plans for the Sixteenth annual convention to be held in Birmingham July 23, 24, and 25.

Indications point to the largest crowd in the history of the department and plans call for one of the most elaborate rounds of entertainment that has ever been offered outside of a national convention.

State Commander Abramson, Wm. S. Pritchard, head of the Jefferson County Council, hosts to the convention, Mrs. C. L. Salter, president of the state auxiliary and members of the general convention met in Birmingham last week and completed the plans for the convention. A tentative program lists a parade, grand ball, aeroplane show, wrestling match, golf tournament and other activities for the entertainment of the visitors.

Reservations are now being received at the convention headquarters, 218 Tutwiler Hotel and John D. Higgins, housing chairman, is busy completing all arrangements so that all legionnaires will be cared for during the session.

A number of persons high in legion circles and also a number of national auxiliary figures will also be on hand to address the convention.

Another feature of the convention will be the election of officers scheduled for the final day's session. Two legionnaires, Wm. S. Pritchard and Monroe Holley, Jr., Wetumpka, have already been prominently mentioned for the office, and other candidates may develop.

The convention proper opens Monday, July 23, but registrations will begin Sunday afternoon and memorial services will be held at Legion Field, at 7:30 p.m. Sunday.

State commander Abramson will call the opening session to order in the municipal auditorium at 9:30 a.m. Monday. The opening session will be featured by addresses by Sen. Hugo Black and governor-elect Bibb Graves. An invitation has also been extended to past national commander Paul McNutt to address this meeting and he has indicated he will be here if possible.

During the afternoon an aeroplane show will be held at the municipal airport, and a number of notable fliers have been invited to attend. The show is being sponsored by the Legion, the Junior Chamber of Commerce and the City of Birmingham. The airshow, which promises to be one of the most elaborate in the history of Alabama, will be open to the public as well as the visiting legionnaires and will be free of charge to all.

A special wrestling show will be held at the auditorium Monday afternoon and registered delegates will be admitted free of charge. There are between 1,075 and 1,095 registered delegates in Alabama. Between 3,000 and 5,000 legionnaires are expected to attend the convention and the total attendance will probably exceed 10,000.

John Thomas Taylor, chairman of the National Legislative Committee of the American Legion will be the principal speaker at the Tuesday morning session.

During Tuesday afternoon the Jr. Baseball tournament will be started and division champions will compete for the state title, the championship to be decided Wednesday afternoon.

The general parade will be held at 4:30 p.m. Tuesday with Gen. J. C. Persons, the parade marshall. All of the armed forces of the Alabama National Guard will march in this procession which will be viewed by legion officials from the balcony of the Tutwiler Hotel, convention headquarters.

Tuesday evening will be the scene of the grand ball at the Municipal Auditorium. Mrs. Salter and Commander Abramson will lead the grand march. The dance will be preceded by an old time fiddlers convention with Luther Patrick, widely known Birmingham attorney and radio favorite, as the master of ceremonies.

The election of officers and naming of the 1935 meeting place will feature the concluding session, Wednesday morning. The finals in the baseball tournament and the golf tournament under the direction of Edgar Brown will be the concluding events Wednesday afternoon.

In addition to the general sessions, banquets and dances, there will be sessions of the Auxiliary at the Thomas Jefferson Hotel, auxiliary headquarters.

Reunions of the various units that served in the World War will also be held as will the annual meeting of the 40 and 8 and 8 and 40, fun units of the Legion and Auxiliary.

Another feature of the convention will be the retreat ceremony to be held at Woodrow Wilson Park at 6:00 p.m. daily under the direction of Boy Scouts and supervision of the Legionnaires.

CLEANING AT NEW HARMONY

On Thursday before the third Sunday, July 12, all the people who have an interest in this place are invited to come and help clean off the cemetery, the yards around the church, and help scrub the church floor. Now people, when the cemetery is cleaned off, that don't mean the work is finished, the yard is to be cleaned off, and the floor is to be scrubbed. Here tofore when the cemetery was finished, all would leave except a few. That is not right to leave until the work is finished. Bring your lunches and help all day. Surely you can spare one day to help work around the church. Come early and bring proper tools to work with.

Remember our three days' meeting begins at this place Friday before next fourth Sunday. Everybody has a special invitation to come and be with us.—A Reader.

TO YOU WHO DIE

If you want to sleep in a first-class coffin, made by hand and of first-class material, you may obtain such a casket at the Verbena One-Man Casket Manufacturing Emporium.

Why pay a large price for a showy coffin when you can put your loved ones away in a decent coffin for $15? This price does not include a box, but it does include a plank top.

These coffins are painted inside and outside and are lined with white cloth. They have a white pad in the bottom and a white pillow. They also have handles on the outside and there is not a nail hole showing.

Bring your truck or wagon to Verbena and your cheap coffin is on hand. There is no reason for a child to die, but there are eight small coffins at Verbena for $8 each. Let's be sensible. This is a recovery act, and for the benefit of those whose income is meager.

U. S. EXPENSES BREAK RECORD

Washington, July 2.—The U. S. Government "ran in the red" to the extent of nearly $4,000,000,000 in the 1934 fiscal year which ended Saturday. Expenditures exceeded those of any peace-time year in history.

Treasury officials estimated that the output of the federal funds in the past 12 months had exceeded $7,000,000,000, the heaviest spending program since the 12 months ending June 30, 1919, when more than $18,000,000,000 was spent to win the world war.

Against the $7,000,000,000 expenditures Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau could count only about $3,100,000,000 in government income, leaving a deficit of $3,900,000,000. This was the fourth successive fiscal year the government has not earned enough to pay its way.

More favorable were the figures on the government's $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund which has paid the government a few hundred thousand dollars profit in the two months of its operation.

Less easy of measurement were result of the government's aggressive monetary policy which culminated last February in the reduction of the weight of the gold dollar to 15 5-21 grains and more recent the ambitious silver metal buying program.

Included in the government's $7,000,000,000 expenditures was $359,450,000 spent for retirement of securities, leaving net expenditures of about $6,500,000,000. On this basis the net deficit would be around $3,500,000,000.

Although the government's income was only $100,000,000 under the estimate of $3,259,938,756 set by President Roosevelt in his last budget message, net expenditures, excluding the sinking funds were about $4,000,000,000 under the estimate of $10,569,006,967 set by the chief executive.

A comparison of the actual income and expenses of the federal government together with President Roosevelt's estimate, figures for the 1933 fiscal year shows:

1934 fiscal year, actual—All expenses, $6,650,000,000; all income, $3,100,000,000; deficit, $3,550,000,000.

1934 fiscal year, Roosevelt estimate—All expenses, $10,569,006,967; all income, $3,259,938,756; deficit, $7,309,068,211.

1933 fiscal year, actual—All expenses, $4,845,018,254; all income, $2,238,356,180; deficit, $2,606,662,074.

(Expenses are exclusive of sinking fund or public debt retirements.)

The above figures do not take into account the "profit" of $2,811,363,170 made by the government this fiscal year when it nationalized gold and wrote up the price of the metal on its books from $30.67 per ounce to $35 per ounce.

Despite this year's huge deficit which has carried the nation's public debt to a record peak of $27,008,336,065, from $22,538,672,560, on June 30, 1933, and slightly above the war time peak, even greater expenditures were contemplated today by Secretary Morganthau for the new fiscal year.

If present estimates are carried out, it is expected the government in the new fiscal year will spend $10,500,000,000 and receive in income $4,250,000,000, making a further prospective deficit of $6,250,000,000. It would send the public debt to the outside limit of $31,834,000,000 set by President Roosevelt.

CARD OF THANKS

We take this means of thanking the people of this community and vicinity for the help, kindness and sympathy shown us during the sickness and death of our darling little twin girls, who died June 15 and 18 respectively. We thank every one for the beautiful floral offering. Thanks to Brother Culp for his comforting words. We also thank the good men who helped with the field work. May the Lord bless each and every one, is our prayer.—Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Williams and children.

Mission Institute Here Next Week

Every person interested in Missions or desiring religious information or inspiration, should make it a point to attend every service of the Unity-Chilton Institute to be held at Clanton Baptist church, beginning July 10, at 10 o'clock, and continuing each day until Thursday afternoon, July 12, at 4 o'clock.

A most unusual group of teachers and speakers have been secured. Mrs. T. M. Floyd, state W. M. U. mission study chairman, teaches adults, with interesting curios and charts prepared by a missionary on the South China field, where the scenes of the study book are laid. Miss Eunice Long, Eastern District's talented scholarship girl, teaches Y. W. A.; Mrs. Troy Hopkins, resident of Mexico, and the Canal Zone, will be intensely interesting in teaching a book on Mexico. Rev. Collis Cunningham, charming teacher and returned missionary from Japan, will be teacher for young men. Rev. J. L. Moye, one time missionary to Chile, is also a popular teacher. Those at the Institute last year will rejoice that Rev. F. P. Denison is to be there all the time. Dr. Dennison has had many and strange experiences, having been a Catholic priest for many years, a soldier in the Crimean War and a visitor to many countries. He is an unusually interesting speaker.

The devotionals will be so worthwhile that every person is requested to be in his seat ten minutes before ten o'clock each day, so as to have that half hour undisturbed. Rev. Luther Gaines, as song leader, will make a real feature of the music, both the specials and congregational singing.

The public is cordially invited.

Sponsored by the W. M. U. of Unity and Chilton Associations.

REFUGE NEWS

Our Sunday school and B. Y. P. U. were real good Sunday and Sunday night, although the crowd was not as large as it seems like it should have been, but there were some hindered on account of sickness. We hope they will be able to be with us next Sunday. There are some that are always careless and don't try to do their duty, always rendering some poor excuse which God is not pleased with. Some give excuses, saying they have no clothing sufficient to wear to church, but remember, God says first seek Him and His righteousness and all these things shall be added unto us. If we will be what God wants us to be we will never suffer for neither food nor clothing.

The revival will begin at this place on Saturday before the fourth Sunday in July. We hope that every member will be in earnest prayer to God for this revival, as we have just entered into a new quarter. Let us come next Sunday with a well prepared lesson.

Rev. Lockhart filled his regular appointment at Pates Chapel Saturday night and Sunday, and reported a large attendance.

Mr. and Mrs. R. N. Connell and two grandchildren spent Saturday night and Sunday with Rev. Lockhart's family.

Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Mims are here this week to spend the Fourth. They spent a while Monday with Mr. and Mrs. Willie Mims.

Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Easterling and children spent the afternoon Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Easterling.

Let us look forward to the future. Never give up, but pray that God will lead us in the way that He would have us to go.

The Story of the Bible Told in Pictures

The Building of Babel.—We are told in Gen. 11: 1: "The whole earth was of one language and of one speech." But mankind became restless and undertook to build a city, and a tower whose top would reach into the heaven. "And the Lord said, Behold, the people is one, and they have all one language; and this they begin to do: and now nothing will be restrained from them, which they have imagined to do. Go to, let us go down, and there confound their language that they may not understand one another's speech. So the Lord scattered them abroad from thence upon the face of all the earth: and they left off to build the city. Therefore is the name of it called Babel; because the Lord did there confound the language of all the earth: and from thence did the Lord scatter them abroad upon the face of all the earth.—Gen. 11: 6-9. From an engraving made by Merian in the Seventeenth century.

School Census To Be Taken Up Soon

Enumeration of children of school age in Chilton County will begin on next Monday. Completion of the work is expected during the month of July. At a meeting of the county board of education last week complete plans were made for carrying out the census. Enumerators for the different Beats of the county were named, as follows:

Beat 1—W. Z. Hodges.
Beat 2—Hugh T. Shaw and Mrs. Jim Cobb.
Beat 3—H. R. Oden.
Beat 4—Paul C. Mims, S. W. Collins, Ewart Corley, J. L. Smith.
Beat 5—W. C. Dubose.
Beat 6—L. C. Keen, Stanley Davis.
Beat 7—J. B. Hicks.
Beat 8—Miss Leslie Parnell.
Beat 9—Earl Leary, V. J. Littleton.
Beat 10—Lee Yates.
Beat 11—H. A. Harris.
Beat 12—Marvin Martin, Horace Nabors.
Beat 13—W. G. Shaw.
Beat 14—T. L. Lenoir.
Beat 15—H. L. Traywick, O. H. Scott.
Beat 16—Irving P. Kennedy.

A meeting of the above-named census enumerators will be held at the office of County Superintendent Little, at two o'clock Friday afternoon of this week, in order to fully instruct the workers as to their duties.

Superintendent Little urges upon public the importance of this enumeration. He points out that it is upon the basis of this census that Chilton County will be allotted school funds for the next two years. Every child listed means that the county will secure four to five dollars of public money. If any child is missed by the enumerators, the office of the County Superintendent should be notified so that enlistment may be made before the report is closed finally.

WILL TEACH WRITING AT CLANTON GRAMMAR SCHOOL

Beginning July 9th Prof. J. C. Brown will teach a writing school at the Clanton Grammar school building. He will have both night classes and day classes. The day classes will be from 8 to 10 o'clock and the night classes from 8 to 9 o'clock. He will teach five days and nights a week.

Mr. Brown is the foremost teacher of writing in this section of Alabama. He has been in the work for the past several years, and is prepared to give really high class training in both business and fancy penmanship—the same kind that one might receive from the leading colleges. And his tuition is within the reach of everyone. Folks do not often have the opportunity of taking writing lessons equal to those offered by Mr. Brown.

Prof. Brown will be glad to have you confer with him if you are interested in either the day or the night classes, or you may see Mr. Callen or Mr. Smith at Peoples Savings Bank. tf

Training for Bankers

The American Bankers Association has been active for many years training young men and women in order that they may be duly qualified for the business of banking. Standard courses are furnished with able and experienced teachers. This work is done under the direction of the American Institute of Banking Section of the association. Over two hundred chapters, or local banking schools, are in active operation throughout the country and thousands of the younger generation of bankers are being graduated each year. These students are taught not only banking practices and policies, but they are also well grounded in the highest ideals and standards of business ethics. A proposal is now under consideration to establish a central school, which will offer advanced or graduate work to a selective list taken from those who have completed the standard courses.—F. M. Law, President American Bankers Association.

Banks Repaying Loans From R. F. C.

Although banks and trust companies have been the largest borrowers from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, they have exceeded all other classes of borrowers in the rapidity of their repayments. Since the inception of the R. F. C. in February, 1932, loans have been authorized by it to 7,080 banking institutions in the amount of $1,995,000,000. Of this sum $442,000,000 was not taken by the borrowers, the actual advances being $1,553,000,000.

Repayments against these advances through April 30, 1934, aggregated $925,000,000, or about 60 per cent. The ratio of repayments for all classes of borrowers has been only about 37 per cent. These rapid repayments by the banks are taken by competent observers as a strong indication of returning normal financial and banking conditions.

Prof. Abrams, who is spending the summer at Prattville, was a visitor in Clanton last Sunday.

Judge Reynolds and the Commissioners were in Montgomery Tuesday attending to business matters for the county.

J. Mell Martin, Percy Pitts and Dr. Gragg were visitors to Montgomery Tuesday.

Reuben Popwell made a trip to Miami last week with his truck to carry a load of dynamite for DuPont Powder Company.

MISSION SCHOOL THREE DAYS HERE

Will Be At Baptist Church in Clanton On July the 10, 11 and 12

It is not too early to turn to the calendar and mark July 10, 11 and 12 as special dates to be held open for the Mission Institute, which is to be at Clanton Baptist church on those days. This is a joint affair, Chilton and Unity Association participating equally. Therefore, every church in the two associations should be represented.

It is also a family affair. Classes and entertainment will be provided for every age. Every preacher pastoring a church in either association is urged to be present. Later the complete program will be printed.

This article is to remind you to make ready. Pastors, do not arrange to be holding a revival those days; church officers, plan to secure trucks or buses if your folks do not have many ways to come; W. M. S. presidents and members of the executive of W. M. U., be certain to attend the joint executive board to be held for both associations at Clanton, Friday, June 22, that plans may be made together. This is very important. The meeting opens at 10:30, each one brings her own box lunch; will probably close by two or two-thirty.

Plan to make this institute your family treat for the summer. You and your family will be better and happier Christians if you attend the whole three days. Plan to do that.—Mrs. S. J. Ezell, director.

The NRA is booming the nudist camps, according to an International News Service dispatch, which quotes one Mr. Knapp, a professor of nudism as stating:

"New leisure under the NRA is sending hordes of people to seek health and happiness with us. People have recently seen enough misery and suffering to appreciate the importance of a sound body and laughter."

All of which is important if true. It far exceeds the predictions of the most inveterate enemies of the NRA. Some of them have made the prophecy that the New Deal would eventually tax us out of our shirts, but none have been mean enough to say that it would make nudists of us.

Well, there's some consolation in the fact that the inscripion on the coins hasn't been changed yet, to read "In Brains We Trust."

NATIONAL AFFAIRS
(By Frank P. Litschert

Dispatches from Philadelphia announcing that the directors of the Federation of Churches of that city have given approval to the campaign of the League of Decency for cleaner motion pictures recalls the fact that there is now a nation-wide movement on the part of churches of all denominations, clubs and civic organizations, for higher order of motion picture entertainment. Patrons of the movies who belong to the organizations embraced in the movement are to pledge themselves to remain away from all moving picture shows which are considered as unwholesome or degrading.

It would seem that the critics of unclean pictures, if they are in earnest, as no doubt they are, have at last struck on an effective means to bring about higher grade movie enterainment. The motion picture industry is a business, not a public institution, and its directors will respond quicker to box office results than to any other one factor. While we all feel that there is something un-American about he word boycott, there is little doubt that motion picture fans have a right to protest against unclean or degrading entertainment and to remain away and urge their families and friends to stay away from productions which do not meet with their approval.

Such a movement, if it is carried on in earnest, will undoubtedly aid the efforts of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors under the leadership of Will Hays, to bring about a real uplift in the movies. The Hays organization has put forth strenuous efforts and has done a great deal of good. Unfortunately, however, it has to deal with motion picture producers who think of the box office above all else and with temperamental artists and directors who believe that their "artistic" creative spirit and direction ought not be interfered with. For these reasons at times recommendations of the Hays organization for the elimination of certain scenes in pictures are overruled by an appeal to a committee of the producers themselves. A little pressure on the part of the public will go a long way toward remedying this situation.

While some of the producers may resent or disagree with reform efforts of this kind, it is to be remembered that they are much to be prefferred to a fedral censorship at Washington which might easily come instead. Nobody who knows anything about bureaucracy at Washington would relish the idea of having the fitness of motion picture entertainment passed on by a band of federal appointees at the nation's capital.

We must, of course, give the movies their due. While there is a great deal of criticism just now, and some of it may be justified, it is to be remembered that as a vehicle of entertainment the motion picture is far above the average stage production and even the average modern novel in decency and moral attributes. Any comparison a fair minded citizen will make will abundantly approve of this fact. It is claimed that the reason that some movie plays are of questionable moral value is that they are taken from modern plays and novels which are not paragons of virtue. But it is to be remembered that there are still many good books and plays which are usable for motion picture purposes. "Little Women" is not the only one.

Now there is another thought worth considering. If the public is to remain away from bad pictures as a sensible way of remedying the situation, it also has a duty to patronize good, wholesome motion picture entertainment. That is only fair, and the suggestion is made in view of the charge often made that some of the bitterest critics of the movies are folks who never attend. Certainly it is not enough to discourage the bad. We ought to encourage the good.

NO MONEY—NO GOODS

It is not surprising that the suggestion of Secretary of State Hull that the debtor nations of Europe pay us in goods, rather than in money, if they don't feel they can spare the cash, did not meet with any great outbursts of enthusiasm either here or abroad. In the first place, if Europe were to send us goods in the place of cash to make debt payments, the flood of imports would seriously disarrange our national economic structure and do a great deal of damage to our own industries. As a good free trader Mr. Hull probably sees nothing disturbing in a flood of British and French goods in American markets, but there are others who are a little sharper of sight.

It may be stated however, that there is little danger that we will be submerged by a shower of European goods to pay the war debts, even if we were to lower the barriers and accept the commodities. Europe would be glad to load us up with her products for cash, but the debtor nations will not be so keen to pay their war debts with goods. The reason is not hard to find. They do not intend to pay us in any event, either in cash or goods. If they can get by without paying, why send us anything at all, unless some new advantage can be gained over Uncle Sam. If a man owes you a hundred dollars and doesn't intend to pay it there is no more reason why he should "trade it out" than pay it in cash.

BEAUTIFUL IN THEORY

One of the principal complaints one now hears, among many important groups in the cities as well as in the agricultural districts, is that the cost of living has risen faster than the income of the average citizen. Criticism has been especially strong in the rural districts. In commenting on this failure of farm income to keep ahead of increasing costs the Alexander Hamilton Institute said recently:

"The chief purpose of the Farm Relief act passed last year was to increase the farmers' purchasing power by eliminating the spread which existed between the price level of goods which the farmers buy. Up to the present time, however, this act has failed to accomplish its purpose. In fact, the figures for May show that the price spread in that month was greater than the spread last July when steps began to be taken to eliminate the spread. The price index of farm products in May, based on 1910-14 as 100, was 74, or two points lower than the index of 76 last July. The index of prices paid by the farmer, on the other hand, was 121 in May, or 14 points higher than the index of 107 last July. In other words, the farmers' purchasing power, on the basis of these price indexes, was 14.1 per cent lower in May than in July last year. The farmers' purchasing power in May, however, was 27.1 per cent higher than the low for the depression reached in June, 1932, but this entire improvement occurred prior to the activity of the agricultural adjustment administration. A satisfactory solution of the farm problem calls for a further rise of 63.9 per cent in the farmers' purchasing power.

A great many people who are not even students of economics are now beginning to see that the program of the administration at Washington a year ago, to restore prosperity by raising wages and prices, was a little too ambitious. The trouble was that while prices could be raised and wages raised in certain industries, unfortunately the income of millions of people living on fixed amounts, or in established businesses, could not be increased with the result that the cost of living went up faster than the purchasing power of the people. The theory looked beautiful when worked out on the blackboard. Unfortunately, however, there is some difference between a blackboard and the intricate economical system of the United States. This fact is generally being realized and has already resuted in some modifications in the NRA recovery program.

HOW ONE CODE WORKED OUT

The NRA codes are under fire and a recent case in Freeport, Ill., may profitably be considered in this connection. It appears that some young people from a high school close to Freemont asked the proprietor of a small job printing shop in Freeport for an estimate on a job, which this printer had done in previous years for the school. The printer examined his price schedule under the code and found that the price for the job in question was $10. However, he could make a 10 per cent deduction because his shop was in the smallest class. So the price was fixed at $9.

But this was too high for the young people, so they gave the contract to a "specialty" house which was able under the code to make them a price of $6. The small job printer, according to the Freeport Journal-Standard, which sets forth these facts, felt thwarted. He would have been glad to have done the work for $6 himself but the code would not let him. If he had done it for $6 he might have been reported to headquarters and fined, or even jailed, like the New Jersey tailor. But it was pretty hard on him because the high school job was the only piece of business that came in on the day the young people called.

Well, what can be done about such a case? It reveals very clearly the difficulty of economic planning. We are not saying that no good has been accomplished under certain codes. But evidently some of the codes were thrown together hastily and their economic soundness may be doubted. In the case under discussion there can be no doubt but what the small business man was squeezed. He was unable to get a quick hearing or any redress. It is small wonder that recovery is impeded. In all probability there are many instances wherein the small business man gets the worst of it.—Rock Island Argus.

One of the greatest comedy sketches ever put on in Washington was the one in the senate committee hearing in which Professor Tugwell announced that he was a conservative and was loudly cheered by Senators Norris and Wheeler.

MAN IN THE MOON

Looks Over All—Overlooks None

A Man With Honor

"A man is without honor in his own country." That's a pretty true saying. But once in a while there comes along a man who is honored in his own country, at least by most of the people. Such a man is Dr. V. J. Gragg. In his recent political venture Dr. Gragg received a gratifying vote of confidence in Chilton County, where he is best known. No doubt, if he could have been as well known in the other counties as he is in Chilton, he would have received a majority there, also. To know Dr. Gragg is to hold the highest respect for him, unless one be prejudiced for some reason. He commands respect. He is honest, conscientious, and a friend of the common people. He does his work in the open, where all may see. He is not a back-biter. He is not under-handed. He makes no charges that he cannot prove. I followed his campaign closely, and I must say that no one could ask for a cleaner one. Dr. Gragg's party affiliations have been attacked—unjustly, I believe. I have known him for years, and if I were to look for a Democrat, I don't believe I could find a better one. I might find a more rock-ribbed one—one who voted blindly, just because it was a Democrat ticket—but I do not believe there is a more consistent Democrat anywhere than Dr. Gragg. He did vote and work for Tom Heflin, but that was no more than thousands of other good Democrats over Alabama did. Must they be forever branded as party traitors because they voted for a man in whom they had implicit confidence? I do not believe that Tom Heflin had any connection with the Republican party, and his followers did not count themselves Democratic deserters when they voted for him. What man shall judge the thoughts and intentions of another? After all, for years the Democratic leaders have raised the cry: "Down with party lines—vote for the man!" They have been especially loud in this here in Chilton County. But when one of their own follows their advice he is branded a traitor. Is that consistency? Dr. Gragg is a man of rare worth, and one of whom Chilton County may well be proud. "And when the great scorer comes, He will not judge a man by whether he won or lost, but how he played the game." It is better to lose fairly, than to win otherwise.

The Ananias Club

By chance I walked in on a special open air meeting of the Ananias Club one day last week. It was a corker, too. These were all new members, too, and I didn't know they belonged, but they soon convinced me that they were exceptionally fit for membership. All their stories were about the old quarry near the old Charlie Cox place, up in Beat 1, and how clear the water is. It seems they had been up there for a swim, and they must have gotten water in the head or something. It all began when one of them told that the water was so clear that a swimmer couldn't get out of sight. I mentioned that it might not be very deep, and that started a barrage like I have never heard before. Deep? One of them stated that he dropped a pebble in the water, timed it for five minutes, and it had never reached bottom. Another stated that he dropped a pebble, timed it for three minutes, then dived in and caught it before it reached bottom. Another said that he looked closely into the water and believed he could see something that looked like the bottoms of people's feet, and wondered if it might be Chinamen on the other side of the world. They said, however, that the fishing at the place was no good, although there are plenty of fish in the pool. The reason is that the water is so clear until the fish can see the tip of the hook and steer clear of it. They have even invited me to go out and make pictures of them, several feet down in the water. But I haven't been, yet. Sam Jones!

Rural Electric Lines

I have heard a rumor that the coming year may see several rural electric power lines built over Alabama. I don't know if the TVA has given the Alabama Power Company a scare, or if this is according to the power company's policy of building a few rural lines every year, with a view to ultimate complete electrification of Alabama, both rural and urban. Let's hope it is the latter, and that they will continue to build these lines, more and more every year. After all, if there is any class of people who should have the benefit of electric power and lights, with the conveniences they bring, it is the farmers. Farmers are the bed rock of all industry. No country can exist without farmers—they feed us. We MUST eat. What happens when milk wars are declared? Somebody gets hungry. And this is only one farm commodity. Suppose the farmers should strike, as people in other industries do. Statisticians tell us that thousands would starve within a few days, if there was not a continuous stream of farm products moving every day. That is how important farms and farmers are to the whole nation. Realizing this, I cannot see how the farmer has been disregarded so long. It is high time he was receiving some consideration. The benefits of electric power would lessen his load of drudgery in great degree. One electric motor on a farm would work wonders. With it he might pump water, shell corn and grind it, run wood saws, and many other appliances; he could have electric lights, an all-electric radio, electric irons, fans, water heaters, and the thousand and one other electric gadgets now on the market. Now he cannot have them. While we are making life pleasant for mankind, let us not forget the foundation of civilization —the farmer. He asks for little, and surely that little might easily be granted him. Chilton County has been called "the power heart of Alabama" as well as the "heart of Alabama." In Chilton County the Alabama Power Company began its major operations. Then why not give the people of Chilton County a break? Why not make Chilton County the first all-electric County in Alabama? Chilton deserves this.

Fair Competition

Proponents of the NRA contend that one of the biggest missions of the act is to insure fair competition to all trades, and along all lines. Another thing, it has long been the aim of government officials to keep the government out of business competition. A few years ago, however, the government began selling stamped envelopes with printed return addresses on them. Printers all over the country set up a howl at this, inasmuch as it was a plain case of governmental competition, but nothing was done about it, and on account of the low cost of these envelopes, the printers tried to make the best of the situation by attempting to build a market for higher grade envelopes. They succeeded to some degree. And then came the NRA, to tell printers just what they MUST sell their goods for, and it just about killed the envelope business for the printers. Here are the figures: The postoffice will sell 500 No. 5 envelopes with 3-cent stamps for $15.98, these envelopes bearing the firm's address. After deducting $15.00 for the stamps, this leaves 98 cents for the envelopes and the printing. The NRA code book FORCES the printer to sell this same envelope from his stock for $2.48, thereby forcing the printer to charge $1.50 more for the same goods. If he cuts this price, he is subject to a heavy fine, or imprisonment, or both. This is only one instance where the NRA has worked a hardship. There are many other cases. To try to handle competition in trade is bad enough, but for the government to cut prices, and then FORCE the printer to charge a HIGHER rate than heretofore is atrocious. The printers do not want to charge this amount. These envelopes cost them about $1.20 per 1,000, and they MUST sell them for $4.05, a profit of $2.85 per 1,000. That is over 200 per cent profit. Yet, their hands are tied. They can do nothing. As a consequence, printers sell very few envelopes. Here's a question: Is this fair competition? Is this fair regulation of business? The printers think not.

Thursday's Ball Game

Did you attend last Thursday's ball game, between the two men's Sunday school classes of the Baptist church? If you didn't, you should have. Really, it was a much better game than I expected to see, but it furninshed plenty of laughs. On account of the fellows being unused to running around in the hot weather, 26 players took part before the contest was over; the young men used 15, and the old men 11. The young men made 10 hits, 9 runs and 10 errors, while the old men made 15 hits, 12 runs, and 11 errors. Once upon a time "Catfish" Eubanks was a good catcher, but when he tried to don the breast protector Thursday, he found that much eating and less exercise during all these years had enlarged his frontal department all out of proportion to the rest of him, and that the strapp on the protector lacked some 15 inches or more of reaching around him. "Cat got quite a laugh from the crowd when he tied the strap, looked up at the stands wearily, and sighed "oh-oh." Another laugh was provided by Jean Gore. Jean struck like he was trying to beat off flies or gnats or something, but, in some way, he managed to get three clean hits. J. E. "Mickey Cochrane" Easterling started on the mound for the old men but the young fellows finished him in four innings, during which Jesse Foshee belted one over the fence. It was all very funny. I have heard something about the fellows playing another game. If they do, see it. You'll certainly get your dime's worth. —Man in the Moon.

JUDGE L. H. REYNOLDS

When his present term ends Judge L. H. Reynolds will have served Chilton County as Probate Judge for twenty-four years. For the second time in his long career, he was defeated in the primary of June 12, 1934, in his race for re-election to this office. Few men have such a long record of public service to their county. We have no direct information on the subject, but we imagine that his political ambitions have closed with this chapter in his life.

The News has consistently opposed Judge Reynolds in politics throughout the years. We have failed to agree with many of his policies, and we would have opposed him for re-election had he been the Republican nominee.

But in spite of this opposition, we have and do recognize certain things about him which all of us can commend. His record of service is one which may well be commended by Chilton County citizens. That he has ability far above the average even his most bitter enemies must admit. That he has had the welfare of his county and his people close to heart is a fact the records verify. Yes, Judge Reynolds has much to look back upon with pride. We have opposed him, we would oppose him again under like circumstances, but at the same time we would be the last to deny him the glory which is rightfully his as he comes to the close of a political career which has seen many battles, and in the fighting of which he has demonstrated a leadership and personality to awake the admiration of both friend and foe.—Editorial in Chilton County News, issue of June 28, 1934.

LET BUSINESS PLAN AHEAD

While the launching of the New Deal program was effective in helping to restore confidence paradoxically enough its effect is now to jeopardize further recovery in the opinion of Ernest T. Weir, chairman of the National Steel Corporation and nationally known industrialist, in an address made recently before the Harvard Business School alumni. Mr. Weir added:

"Business is willing to follow new rules that are reasonable, but it cannot accommodate itself to a routine of almost daily change—not because of the unwillingness of men in business, but because of the nature of business itself. We must strongly temper this feeling that there must be constant change. Stability must be achieved before any movement toward lasting recovery will be possible.

"The most constructive step that could be taken would be for the administration to assure the country now that its major lines of policy are established, and that business can plan in accordance with that policy without fear of nullification of its plan by some new and sweeping governmental act a week, a month, or six months from now."

Mr. Weir's remarks are worth considering. There are a great many American business and professional men who will agree with him that from now on there should be less experimentation and more time and opportunity for business to plan the next advance in accordance with sound economic principles.

Mr. Weir stated that in his opinion the employe representation plan was the best solution to the problem of building proper relationships between employer and employe, and that out of it will come highest wages and best working conditions. That Mr. Weir's opinion in this regard should bear some weight is evidenced by the fact that when a vote for a steel strike was taken at the plant of the Weirton Steel Company, where the plan is followed, the men voted 9,801 to 460 against walking out.

As we gather it from the news dispatches, Professor Tugwell admits that he made a speech about regimentation, etc., back in 1931 but he was only kidding.

Has the Brain Trust happened to think that it might help the fishing industry by eliminating every third sardine in the can?

The Man on the Corner
Some Sights He Saw— and Some He Saw Not

Mr. Charley Walker of Shoults was a visitor to Clanton Monday. This was the first visit Mr. Walker has made to Clanton in several months. The only excuse he offered was that he is getting too old to go about much. I accepted that statement from him, but I know if I had accused him of being old, he would have countered with an objection. Mr. Walker served as county commissioner of the third district one time. He was a good official. When he was defeated, it was by the vote of other districts, not of his own. Concerning this subject I find there is a lot of favor for the adoption of legislation that will give to each commission district the sole right to elect its commissioner, without interference or influence of other districts. That question was brought to a point in the recent primary. I look for the matter to be brought before the next legislature in the form of a bill to abolish the special act under which Chilton County has elected commissioners for many years past.

A delegation went to Montgomery Tuesday to confer with Thad Holt, director of the Alabama Relief Administration, relative to the question of completing Clanton's airport. A hangar, swimming pool, golf course, and other community center projects are being considered.

Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Mims, of Clanton Route 6, were visitors at The Union-Banner office while in Clanton Tuesday. For many years they have been constant friends and readers of this newspaper, and we greatly appreciate their friendly interest and occasional visits to the office.

Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Deal, and sons, Owen and Britt, Jr., returned Tuesday from a visit of several days in South Alabama with relatives. While on their trip they spent a while at a beach resort near Panama City, Florida.

For several weeks former Postmaster, Wiley Bean, has been at Auburn, taking a study course at A. P. I. Before he became postmaster Mr. Bean was one of the leading school teachers of this county. We do not know of his plans for the future, but his actions indicate that he contemplates re-entering the teaching profession. If he does, somebody will have a chance to get a mighty fine school principal.

I understand that the contractor who is to pave the Selma Road out of Clanton will be required to employ strictly local labor as far as it is adequate to meet the needs of the job. That sounds good. Already I have had inquiry from some unemployed persons who wanted to know of the possibilities of a job. It was stated Tuesday by Judge Reynolds that a representative of the Federal Employment Bureau will be sent here to classify labor and recommend workers to the contractor.

Last Sunday afternoon I enjoyed a visit to Montgomery with Dr. Gragg. We took a look at the swimming pool and other developments which are being made at Montgomery Municipal Airport. Needless to say that while we were there the doctor took advantage of the opportunity to take a thirty-minute lesson in flying. He has progressed well in his training, and is now able to handle a ship quite successfully.

TAXPAYERS' MONEY

There came to my desk Wednesday morning a forty-six page mimeographed pamphlet from the United States Department of Commerce, Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, Washington, being a "Bibliography of Information on Air Conditioning."

The amount of time and work spent by governmental employes, first, in gathering the sources of information and, second, in indexing them, third, in preparing copy, and fourth, multigraphing and binding these pamphlets, if known to anyone, which we doubt, would we believe, run into a figure far in excess of any possible profit to be derived by the public in making use of this compilation.

It comes to this office, and except for this comment, and the mild interest we may have in finding our own publicatoin listed therein, it goes promptly into the waste basket. We have no place to store it and no need for using it, and, in our humble opinion, if such a need existed at all, it might very well have been accomplished through the facilities afforded by the Library of Congress at Washington.

This is just a sample of what the government is doing with taxpayers' money. Another example is the voluminous material that appears nearly every day or so from some bureau in Washington which is making a survey of various cities and towns to discover how many people are living in houses with three bathrooms, etc., and whether they pay their rent or not!

Of course, if you have an army you have to keep them busy, if they are soldiers you have to give them drills; if they are clerks you have to give them clerical work to do. And if you mail this clerical work out to the public, of course it will keep the Postoffice Department busy and maintain a continuous deficit in that branch of the government.—Letter by L. A. Mack to the New York Herald-Tribune.

County Farm Agent's Notes

Compiled by J. W. Fant, County Farm Demonstration Agent for Chilton County

COTTON MONEY NEAR $3,000,000

Auburn, Ala.—The government this year has paid Alabama cotton farmers $2,681,333.55 for reducing their 1934 cotton acreage, reports Dr. L. N. Duncan, director of the Alabama Extension Service, who says that other checks continue to arrive each week.

This money is being paid to the farmers by the government in an effort to reduce the enormous supply of American cotton and to increase the price farmers receive for their cotton.

Statistics furnished Dr. Duncan by Cully A. Cobb, chief of the cotton production section of the AAA, show that through June 21st 95,543 checks totalling $2,681,333.55 had been paid to Alabama cotton farmers.

HOW TO HARVEST HAIRY VETCH

Auburn, Ala.—J. C. Lowery, extension service agronomist, says that this has been an unusually good year for vetch to seed, and many Alabama farmers are letting the vetch stay in the field until the seed are mature and the vetch begins to die back. As soon as the vetch will pull off at the top of the ground they take a hay rake and rake the vetch early in the morning while the dew is still on the plants. The raking is done while the vetch is damp to keep the seed from shattering.

When the vetch is ready to thrash the top concave of a thresher is removed so that the seed will go on through. The fan is slowed down so as not to blow the seed over the chaff.

Where a thresher is not available, the vetch is put away on a tight floor until slack season when the farmers will beat the seed out with a frail.

FARMERS TO STUDY EXPERIMENTAL WORK

Auburn, Ala. — Arrangements have been made for at least 12,000 Alabama farmers to attend 10 big meetings on experimental fields and sub-experiment fields and sub experiment stations early in July and August.

The meetings are being planned so that farmers may observe the effects of winter legumes, different kinds of fertilizer, and varieties upon crop production. Economic production instead of increased yields will be emphasized.

Dean M. J. Funchess of the Alabama Experiment Station, Auburn, and the members of his staff will be in charge. They will be assisted by county agents, vocational teachers, and leading farmers.

Eight o'clock has been set as the hour for farmers to begin assembling. The tours will end at noon. Farmers living in the counties where the fields and stations are located are being urged to be present at 8:00 o'clock, and those of surrounding counties to arrive not later than 9:00 o'clock.

Farmers of Autauga, Elmore Chilton, Bibb, Montgomery, Hale, Perry and Dallas will meet at Prattville on Thursday, July 12.

Veal that it too large and old, and veal that is too small and young, do not sell for as much a pound and do not appeal quite so strongly to consumers. The weight limits are between one hundred and two hundred pounds alive. But occasionally even within these weights the ages of calves do not justify inclusion in the veal schedule.

General distribution has begun of approximately 130,000,000 in first payments among the signers of corn-hog adjustment contracts.

FARM FOLKS TO GATHER AT AUBURN THIS MONTH

Date for the annual meeting of the Alabama Farm Bureau Federation this year has been tentatively set for July 31 to August 3, during which time Farmers' Week exercises at the Alabama Polytechnic Institute, Auburn, are to be held.

The theme of the annual outing and short course for farm men and women at Auburn this year is to be organization. Prominent state and national speakers will discuss new ideas in farm organization, economic phases of the New Deal in agriculture, and many other subjects of particular interest to farm people.

It is expected that every county in the state will be represented by a good delegation.

The final program for Farmers' week and the Farm Bureau meeting has not been completed and no announcement as to speakers has as yet been made, but as in the past years it is known that the gathering will include subjects and activities in recreation, inspiration, and instruction.

Visitors will, of course, make tours of the grounds of the state experiment station where they will see practical scientific research in Alabama farm problems in progress.

During the week the farm women of the state will hold the annual meeting of their organization, the Alabama Council of Home Demonstration Clubs, according to announcement by Mrs. M. L. Batson, president.

Speaking of the annual meeting, President Edwards said, "There is every reason to believe that this will be our best annual meeting. During the past year we have reaped much benefit from the new legislation in agriculture which was passed because of the continued insistence of our great organization. The meeting at Auburn should be not only one of rededication of ourselves to a greater effort in strengthening our organization. We must hold the ground we have gained and this can be done only if more farmers join our ranks and march with us as a unit in defense of the basic industry of agriculture."

OAK HILL NEWS

Last Sunday was our preaching day. Rev. Green preached Saturday night and rendered a good sermon, and we had with us Sunday Brother Long from Birmingham. Bro. Green turned the hour over to him and he delivered a wonderful message, and Bro. Brasher Northcutt preached Sunday night. We had good crowds and good behavior.

Revival meeting starts at this place the first Saturday night in August. Everybody is invited.

Most everybody from this place attended the singing at Oak Grove Sunday afternoon, and reported a good time.

We are sorry to hear that little Niblett, grandson of Mr. and Mrs. James A Campbell, was seriously injured in an automobile accident.

Explorers have as yet found no bottom to the great Titus Cavern of California.

ALABAMA COLLEGE GIRLS WILL ELECTRIFY DORMITORY

Montevallo, Ala.—The fourteen girls who live in Alabama College's cooperative dormitory next fall are going to "chip in" and electrify their home.

Miss Blanche Tansil, associate professor in home economics, and Mrs. Mary M. McCoy, dean of residents, worked out a plan by which the girls can discard their dormitory's out-of-date equipment and modernize their kitchen for less than 50 cents a month each, by buying electrical appliances approved by the Tennessee Valley authority and financed by the Electric Home and Farm Authority.

Montevallo is in the area authorized for such sales in Alabama.

"The whole idea of the dormitory is to keep down expenses," Miss Tansil said. "We couldn't do anything about modern equipment if it increased the girls' expenses much.

"The dormitory used to be Mrs. McCoy's home. She allowed some girls of limited means to stay there during a depression year. They did their own work, and soon the house became a full-fledged cooperative, with the girls doing everything and keeping the cost of housing and food for each one down to about eight dollars a month.

"Up to now they have been using rather poor equipment in the kitchen. This summer we got hold of a little money to help them with the first payments on a range, refrigerator and water heater. The fourteen there this year, and those who follow them the next three years, can pay for the appliances by adding a few cents a month to each one's bill, if we can get them on the EHFA plan."

Miss Tansil and Mrs. McCoy intend to buy appliances sold by an authorized Alabama retailer.

ELECTRICITY IN THE HOME BEING TAUGHT FARM WOMEN

Knoxville, Tenn.—Four Alabamians are among the firty-nine home economics teachers, workers and students from ten states in the first class of the University of Tennessee's new course in electricity in the home.

They are: Miss Pertice Tucker, of Camp Hill, teacher at Notasulga; Mrs. Craig Walker, of Kennedy, Alabama; Miss Julia Price, Florala, Ala.; Miss Daisy Caldwell, Scottsboro, Ala.

They studied in a new laboratory equipped by appliance manufacturers cooperating with the university and the Electric Home and Farm Authority, which is financing sales of approved, low-priced appliances in authorized areas.

The students in the new course heard lectures by Dr. Harcourt A. Morgan and David E. Lilienthal, directors of the Tennessee Valley Authority and of Electric Home and Farm Authority, and by Miss Eloise Davison, electric service director of EHFA. Miss Davison assisted Miss Jessie W. Harris, head of Tennessee's school of economics, in planning the course.

Full credit for bachelor's or master's degrees is offered for the course, which will be a part of the summer and regular term curricula of the university.

The second three-weeks of the summer course begins July 16.

SHELBY COUNTY AREA IS MADE INTO STATE PARK

Montgomery, Ala.—Shelby County recently broke into the list of Alabama Counties in which state parks have been established, according to deeds on file with the Alabama commission of forestry which is ex-officio state park board. Tracts aggregating 440 acres located on Oak Mountain in the northwestern part of the county are comprised in the new scenic and recreational area established by the commission. The lands were purchased at a low figure from owners who were very largely influenced by the public character of the project in making liberal terms.

Oak Mountain offers some of the most picturesque views in Alabama. A waterfall in a clear running mountain stream is one of the most conspicuous features. A large spring exists in another part of the area, and bold rock cliffs add sterner elements to the landscape.

The park is about twenty miles from the center of the city of Birmingham. Of this distance seventeen miles lie along the paved Birmingham-Montgomery highway. The development of the park will include the improvement of the road from the main highway to the park area, a distance of approximately three miles.

The commission of forestry is recommending to the national park service the establishment of a C.C.C. camp on Oak Mountain state park to develop the tract in accordance with plans drawn up by the commission's engineers and landscape architects and approved by the federal government. Should such a camp be established it will probably be located on the ground shortly after October 1. In the event that a C.C.C. camp may not be available, an attempt will be made to obtain the necessary labor from the Alabama Transient Bureau, probably from the Birmingham center. In any event comparatively early development of the park is assured.

COM. SORRS FIGHTING HIGHER GINNING RATES

On behalf of 270,000 Alabama cotton farmers, Seth P. Storrs, state commissioner of agriculture, has filed a brief in oppositon to the ginners' marketing agreement which, he declares, will cost farmers of the state nearly $1,500,000 this year in increased ginning charges if the agreement is approved as proposed by ginners.

At the public hearing in Montgomery on June 18 and 19, Alabama ginners asked that the maximum rate for ginning the 1934-35 cotton crop be placed at 30 cents per 100 pounds of seed cotton, or approximately $5.50 per 1,500 pound bale, including bagging and ties.

In creased expense in purchasing new machinery required by the agreement was given as one of the principlal reasons ginners are asking the higher prices. When the ginners asked for the increase in ginning rates they also asked that they not be required to install the improved equipment before July 1, 1935.

Commissioners Storrs declares in his brief that the proposed increase in ginning charge to approximately $5.25 per bale, from the average of about $3.50 last year, should not be made effective until the improvements it is promised will be made, have been provided. Otherwise, he says, Alabama farmers will pay approximately $1,407,000 this year for improved service they won't get, thereby furnishing the financing for the gin improvements promised in 1935.

GAME AND FISH NEWS

Montgomery, Ala., July 3. — I. T. Quinn, state commissioner of game and fisheries, has been appointed a member of the Migratory Bird Treaty Act Advisory Board by Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace.

In advising Commissioner Quinn of his appointment, Secretary Wallace said it was made on the recommendation of J. N. Darling, the new chief of the Bureau of Biological Survey, which is attached to the Department of Agriculture.

The appointment returns Commissioner Quinn to a board on which he rendered valuable service for a period of nine years. He was first appointed to the board in 1922 and served until about three years ago.

The board must make recommendations to the Secretary of Agriculture and the President, in conformity with the Migratory Bird Treaty with Canada, for regulating the hunting of migratory wild fowl, fixing open and closed seasons and prescribing bag limits.

SUCCESSFUL SINGING WAS HELD AT PILGRIMS REST LAST SUNDAY

The singing at Pilgrims Rest last Sunday was a proven success. Friends met friends again and many visitors from different parts of the state were here. As far as I know everyone had plenty to eat, and plenty of ice water to drink. An old gentleman was heard to say that he had been coming to Pilgrims Rest community affairs for 45 years and had always gotten plenty to eat. We thank the old gentleman, and invite him back next first Sunday in July, As there was a unanimous request that this be made an annual homecoming day. Program for the day follows:

Called to order by R. W. Kendrick. Invocation by Rev. W. L. Carr, of Prattville. R. W. Kendrick was elected chairman of the day; Leon Brigance, H. L. Ratliff and J. L. Hooks, program committee. Directors for the morning session were as follows: Claud Traywick, Ezra Turner, A. L. Traywick, Leon Brigance, C. E. Deloach, Herman Culpepper, H. L. Ratliff, Walker Smith, Mr. Ganus and Arthur Williams. Some of the directors were from Birmingham, Bessemer and Tuscaloosa. The Liberty Hill quartet, composed of Herman Culpepper, George Chambers, Marvin Lowery and Alpheus Littlejohn favored us with several special songs.

After lunch hour we were called to order again by our chairman. He called our attention to the general improvement of the service which we noted grew bigger and better all day. Mr. Ganus arranged the choir for the afternoon, after which the directors were as follows: Walker Smith, of Tuscaloosa; H. L. Ratliff, Bessemer; Will Culp, Clanton; Zeb Mims, Clanton; Mr. Dripger, from Selma. Others from nearby communities were Devaughn, Leon Brigance, Leonard Culp, J. L. Hooks and three of the Ganus quartet.

After recess Prof. Ganus took charge and favored us with several quartets, musical selections, etc., using boith piano and guitar.

We were dismissed at 4:00 by Rev. W. L. Carr. We wish to thank those who cooperated with us to make this day a success, and invite you back again.

The 4-H Club Girls Clothing Contest was held at the courthouse last Saturday, under the direction of Miss Ruth Pardue, County Home Demonstration Agent. Eleven clubs of the county were represented in the contest by two girls from each club.

Out of the twenty-two contestants four girls were selected to represent the county in the short course at Auburn August 21 to 25. The winners were as follows:

First, Lucile Edwards, of the Isabella Club; second, Arra B. Jones, of the Maplesville Club; third, Willie Nell Owens, of the Isabella Club; fourth, Frances Kendrick of the Vermont Club.

B. Y. P. U. officers were elected last Sunday night as follows: President, Miss Roberta Anderson; vice president, Madge Williams; secretary-treasurer, Orville Williams; Bible readers leader, Claud Traywick; chorister, E. D. Langston; group captains, Maudie Deevers, Francis Kendrick and Louise Johnson. After B. Y. P. U. next Sunday night we will have prayer service led by Bro. John Cherry. Now we are looking for some more older folks.

Since there will be an all day singing next Sunday at Alpine, our neighbor church, Superintendent Anderson has asked that we meet for Sunday school at 9:00 o'clock. Are you interested in your own? Then come to Sunday school and after that let's go to Alpine.

Visitors of R. W. Kendrick this week were Mr. Tom Herrod and family of Demopolis.

A. C. Arant and family, Rev. W. L. Carr and wife were guests of Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Chandler the past week end.

Aunt Becky Lockhart is very ill at the home of Mr. Lewis Chandler.

"Just think, children," said the missionary, "in Africa there are six million square miles where little boys and girls have no Sunday school. Now, what should we all strive to save money for?"

"To go to Africa!" cried a chorus of cheery voices.

Alabama Homes Use More Power For Less Money

New Rate Plan Receives Enthusiastic Reception Thru Entire State

How Alabama's new electric rate schedule, which has been adopted as a model by the states of Tennessee and Georgia, is making possible increased use of electricity and at the same time is actually reducing electric bills is graphically illustrated in the records of your company for May.

During May residential customers of your company used 646,163 kilowatt hours MORE electricity than during May, 1933. Yet their electric bills for this larger amount of electricity were $12,000 LESS than they paid for the smaller amount in the same month last year. These are not estimated savings. They are actual figures on money paid in and electricity put out. As a result our customers received—

15% MORE electricity for 5.9% LESS money!

The average price paid by our customers for their electric service dropped from 4.87 cents to 3.97 cents a kilowatt hour, a decrease of more than 18 per cent.

Are you getting your share of these electrical bargains? Remember, there's a package of Free Electricity for you in any month of 1934 that you use more electricity than you used the same month last year. Thousands of our customers are already using theirs and the number is growing every month.

From windmills, a horsepower costs 5 cents. From large electric power companies, the average horsepower-hour costs the farmer 5 cents—the same as from windmills. And wind is free! The average rating of a windmill is a half horsepower. Imagine a farm with 40 windmills.—C. M. Ripley, G. E. Co.

TAXES

Taxes paid by Alabama Power Company in 1933 amounted to $6,052.26 for every day in the year, including Sundays and holidays.

Range-Water Heater Sales Set 4-Year Record

Lower Prices and Lower Rates Combine To Boost Sales

Happy days are here again in Alabama, if electric range and water heater sales are any indication. Both of these appliances are selling at a faster rate today than anytime within the past four years.

And there's a reason—in fact four good ones. First, of course, is the pick-up in the general business situation. What with folks on the farm getting higher prices for their crops, and folks in the cities going back to work, the sky is unquestionably getting just a little bluer every day in Alabama.

But right along with the general business build-up is the fact that never in the history of the Alabama Power Company, have ranges and water heaters of such outstanding merit, been available at such low prices as they are this season. New low prices have made it possible for many more customers to own them. And new low rates have made it possible to operate them far more economically than ever before. Customers, who in the past have been using only lighting and small appliances, can now add "large appliances" like the electric range and water heater, for surprising little additional expense. In fact, it is now actually possible to enjoy the cleanliness, convenience, and comfort of electric cooking for as little as 3-1/3 cents a meal!

Latest models of electric ranges and water heaters are now on display at our stores throughout the state. Our customers are cordially invited to inspect them, and discuss with our representatives prices, terms and operating costs.

DIVIDEND CHECKS MAILED JULY 1ST

Dividend checks aggregating more than $585,000 were mailed July 1st by Alabama Power Company to more than 15,000 stockholders.

COUNTY PICNIC SET FOR JULY 26

Ben Sims Grove is Chosen for The Location of Annual Outing

After completing his investigation of possible places for holding the county picnic, County Agent J. W. Fant announces that he has decided the Ben Sims Grove, two miles north of Clanton on the paved highway, offers the best general facilities for the occasion.

The grove is located to the west of the highway just back of the Ben Sims filling station and barbecue stand. It is a densely shaded woodland of several acres, easily accessible to the highway, and offering a delightful situation for carrying out all phases of the annual picnic program.

Plans are rapidly taking shape for formation of the program of the picnic, the date of which has already been set for Thursday, July 26th. This will be the biggest picnic of the year, an event in which all people of Chilton County are urged to take part.

Further and more complete details will be announced as plans are perfected in the next few weeks.

STATE SCHOOL MEN PLAN FOR A TOUR OF DIXIE

Montgomery, Ala., June 27. — Five men prominent in the public school life of Alabama left here Wednesday on a two weeks' tour to study academic and financial organizations in other southern states.

The party includes J. A. Keller, of Andalusia, who becomes state superintendent of education next January; H. G. Dowling of Tuscaloosa, president of the Alabama Education Association; Grank Grove of Montgomery, secretary of the A. E. A.; Dr. E. L. Morphet and Johs Crump, of the state department of education.

The tour will include Tennessee, Kentucky, North Carolina, Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland, and a three-day stop at Washington next week for the annual convention of the National Education Association.

Particular attention will be paid to new developments in the educational setups in other states that might be installed in Alabama by Mr. Keller when he assumes office next year.

Every time a chick dies it costs money. It costs the actual money invested in the chick as well as the profit that bird would have brought later on, either as a broiler or pullet. Many chick losses, leading authorities say, can be traced directly to disease and parasite infestation, most of which can easily be avoided or controlled by a simple program of sanitation.

"Keeping things clean and comfortable for the flock goes a long way toward making money with chicks," says Wm. Chilson of Purina Mills' Research staff. "That's why every chick raising program should include proper sanitary measures especially when this is so easy to do and costs so little. To help keep chicks healthy and growing the following sanitation program is recommended, because it is being used so successfully in the Purina Laboratories and on the Experimental Farm.

"Before chicks arrive, everything movable should be taken out of the brooder house. Ceiling, walls, and floors should be swept thoroughly and all dirt and litter cleaned out. The next step is to scrub the walls and floor and spray the ceiling with a solution of 1/3 tea cup of cre-so-fec in one gallon of water.

"If possible the brooder house should be moved to fresh ground and left open to sun and air. When the brooder house cannot be moved to new ground, provide a gravel apron three inches deep, 15 feet each way from the house. The gravel should be stirred with a garden rake at frequent intervals and sprayed with the same strength cre-so-fec solution already recommended.

"The importance of furnishing clean litter for the chicks and keeping it clean during the brooding period, is another point to be observed. Good ventilation, without drafts, is essential too, and plenty of room should be provided for the chicks. Overcrowding is dangerous.

"Drinking fountains and feed hoppers must be kept clean at all times by scrubbing the equipment regularly and disinfecting with a solution of six chlorena tablets to a gallon of water. As a further aid in preventing the spread of disease, one chlorena tablet should be used in each 3 gallons of drinking water.

"These few simple control measures against disease will go a long way toward guarding successfully the health of chicks and keep them up and growing. These are the ounces of prevention that mean pounds of healthy profits for the poultry raiser who includes them in his management program."

LABOR OFFICE IS OPENED HERE

To Supply Workers For Jobs To Be Done in Near Future

An office of the United States Department of Labor, with Mr. W. B. Kelley in charge, has been established at the courthouse this week for the purpose of registring and classifying applicants for labor on the various projects of public works to be instituted in Chilton County in the near future.

The following construction projects are listed by the labor office to which workers will be furnished:

Thorsby waterworks, $28,000; Selma Road paving, $42,000; Clanton Post Office building $55,000.

Workers of all classes, both skilled and unskilled, for these projects, will be supplied from available people in Chilton County. Mr. Kelley estimates that these jobs will mean the employment of 250 to 300 men over a period of six to eight months.

According to the present set-up it appears that the Selma Road paving will be the first work to start. It will likely get under way in about a week. Before this job is completed the others will likely be under way. All of these will be contract jobs, and workers will be paid in cash.

Mr. Kelley, director of the labor office, wishes to have it distinctly understood that selection for workers on these projects will be made strictly on the basis of qualifications and experience for the work to be done, with no connection whatever with relief. Consideration of the needs of applicants will not enter into the matter. Qualification to do the various jobs will be the primary consideration.

The office of Mr. Kelley is in the grand jury room up stairs in the Chilton County courthouse.

Eligibles Named For Postmasters

Reports Received For Officers At Clanton, Thorsby and Jemison

According to information current on the streets this week, the results of Civil Service Examinations for postmaster at three offices in Chilton County have been announced from the Civil Service Commission at Washington, as follows:

Clanton, Hosea F. Downs, Reuben W. Lowe, and J. Hugh Jones, rated in the order named.

Thorsby, Donald Merchant, Miss Anna Werness, and Jerome Wilson, rated in the order named.

Jemison, Howard Roper, Mrs. A. C. Wells, and Jack Johnson, rated in the order named.

It is understood that notification of the ratings of the above-mentioned persons came direct to them personally from the Civil Service Commission.

When the time comes for naming a permanent Postmaster at these places, appointments may go to any one of the three persons on the eligible list at the places named. No indication is available as to when appointments will be made.

JESSE SAM GOWAN IS LICENSED DENTIST NOW

The name of Dr. Jesse Sam Gowan, of Clanton, appeared last week in a list of names announced by the State board of examiners as successful applicants for license to practice dentistry in the State of Alabama.

Jesse Sam is the eldest son of Dr. and Mrs. J. Earle Gowan, of Clanton. This year he completed his course and graduated at the Atlanta Southern Dental College. He took the examination before the State Board a few weeks ago.

It is announced that Jesse Sam will remain in Clanton for the practice of his profession, and will be associated with his father in the firm of Gowan & Gowan. Their offices will be at the same location where Dr. J. E. Gowan has been for many years.

TOM ARLEDGE GONE TO DECATUR

It is understood that County Engineer, Tom Arledge, who resigned last week, has accepted a position in Morgan County, similar to that which he has held in Chilton County for the past year.

Mr. Arledge is a very efficient engineer, a hard worker, and it is regretted that Chilton County officials chose to accept his resignation rather than give him the cooperation which he had a right to expect in such a capacity.

The best opinion is that Chilton County would fare much better in a business way to have an efficient engineer to direct its business, rather than revert to the old-fashioned "fist and skull" way of trying to do things.

250 ATTENDED WOMEN'S CLUB

Miss Lena Downs Elected To Headof the County Council

With an attendance of 250 women, representing every Home Demostration Club in Chilton County, the annual women's club rally was held on Tuesday at the Chilton County High School Building in Clanton.

Hon. J. Lee Smith, Mayor of Clanton, made an address of welcome to the visiting ladies, to which a fitting response was made by Miss Lena Downs.

The prize for the club having the largest attendance at the rally went to Mt. Pleasant club, which had repsentation of 21 members.

County Superintendent, Luther E. Little delivered an address to the group at ten o'clock.

Thirty entrants were enlisted in the sack and mill dress review, with appropriate awards to each participant.

Probate Judge L. H. Reynolds entertained the audience with an address of much interest concerning present-day county questions.

Miss Blanche Tansil, of Alabama College, Montevallo, spoke on the subject, "Developing a Home and Community Program through the Growth of Leadership."

Miss Ruth Dobyne, of Auburn, awarded certificates to twenty club leaders of the county.

Mrs. J. C. Jones was present representing the Music Appreciation Club of Clanton. The Clanton Study Club was represented by Mrs. John VanDerveer.

After lunch the group reassembled for perfecting permanent organization of the County Council of Club Women. Officers were elected as follows:

Miss Lena Downs, president; Miss Mattie L. Crew, first vice president; Mrs. Horace Popwell, second vice president; Mrs. Charles Cooper, secretary and reporter; Mrs. Lloyd Mims, treasurer.

Miss Lena Downs was elected to represent the Chilton County Council of women's Clubs at Farmers week at Auburn.

At the suggestion and under the direction of Miss Ruth Pardue, County Home Demonstration Agent, the Council adopted some plans for providing food arrangements for the County-Wide Picnic to be held at Ben Sims Grove, near Clanton, July 26th.

HUGH L. SMITH DEAD

On the evening of July 3 at 8 o'clock Mr. Hugh L. Smith passed away at his home near Randolph. He was around 70 years of age. His illness continued for a few weeks previous to his passing. He is survived by his wife and several children.

Mr. Smith was a big-hearted man, a good citizen, a good neighbor, a natural born leader among his many friends. He will be greatly missed.

He was born and spent his life here. Well and favorably known in both Bibb and Chilton Counties. He was buried on July 4th in the Randolph cemetery by the Masonic fraternity. Funeral services by Rev. Buford Lawrence. Martin & Son of Clanton in charge. We hope for him life in the beautiful coming day.

SIDNEY NELSON MAKES GOOD SUNDAY SCHOOL ATTENDANCE

Last Sunday finished up the fifth consecutive year that Sidney Nelson of Clanton has attended Sunday school without missing a single time. He goes to Sunday school at the Clanton Methodist church, and has attended church all the time with the exception of a very few Sundays.

He is the twelve-year-old son of Mrs. Nelson, operator of the Nelson Lunch Shoppe. Sidney finished the seventh grade at the county high school last year, making grade "A" on all subjects. He has been delivering papers for the Birmingham News for the past four years, and is an energetic, hustling young fellow. He makes friends readily.

Joyce, the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ted Hammett, has been quite ill recently as a result of measles. She is reported better now.

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. (Doctor) Robinson are sick in bed at their home in Clanton. Their many friends are uneasy about their condition.

ABOUT SUPPORTING THE TICKET

Since the Republican primary on June 12th talk has been rife about whether or not so and so would support the Republican nominees. This is always the case following primaries, but is probably more so this time than in previous instances.

If there is any doubt in the minds of the people as to the attitude of The Union-Banner, we want that matter set right at this time. We are going to support every nominee named by the Republicans in the two primaries, and we mean by "support" that we are going to do all we can, legitimately and fairly, to get the entire ticket elected in November. And if and when our nominees are elected, we expect to offer our services in every way that we can to help them make the very best officials possible.

We believe that the safest and sanest thing for the people of Chilton County to do is to elect every Republican nominee in November.

High School Elective Courses For Students Who Do Not Intend To Go On To College

(By L. C. Warr)

This article is intended for the student who likely will never go to college. Will you please read it carefully

Elective courses are offered in high schools which are adapted not only to the needs of those who are to attend college, but also to those who will not attend college.

A recent survey, results of which reveal that two-thirds of Alabama's high school graduates do not enter college.

By an elective course is meant that pupils are offered the opportunity of elecing such immediately practical subjects as manual arts, an extra year of home economics, or a choice between some of the foreign languages or some of the commercial subjects. The above courses will offset the traditional subjects of higher mathematics and the classical languages more frequently selected by the professional group. In other words, if you are of the opinion your boy or girl might not succeed in college, or if you are financially unable to send him to college, it is a wise idea for him not to take the traditional courses offered in our high schools.

Through proper guidance the elective features of the high school curriculum attempt to take care of natural differences between individuals and to prepare the young citizen for community service as well as to promote the type of standardship required as preparation for college work.

In 1922 the number of pupils graduating from the white high schools of Alabama was 4,196. Ten years later, 1932, there were 9,939 in the white high schools, or an increase of 137 per cent.

During the same period the number of these graduates entering Alabama colleges increased from 1,680 to 2,067, or 21 per cent. However, in 1928 the number of graduates entering colleges within the State was 2,735, an increase over the year 1922 of 62 per cent. Since 1928 the number entering college annually has gradually diminished while the number of graduates has increased by approximately 2,000 students.

In 11 years the number of graduates from Alabama white high schools has amounted to 79,480, a number grater by several thousand than the population of either Mobile or Montgomery according to the latest Federal census. Of this number 24,638 or 31 per cent enrolled as freshmen in the 16 higher institutions of the State. A few, possibly 2 per cent, enrolled outside the State in other colleges. It is evident that the other 50,000 or more of these high school graduates have not attended college at all. In other words, two out of every three students graduating from high school disappear from school life. That the tendency is still smaller is evidenced by the fact that only one out of every five in the 1932 graduating classes enrolled in Alabama colleges and higher institutions.

The school exists for all the children of all the parents, and not for the type altogether who might succeed in college perhaps better than some others. We therefore, want you to counsel and advise with us any time about the best interest of your boys and girls.

A Personal Interview With Ocie D. Rutherford, Driver In 100-Hour Non-Stop Chevrolet Drive

Apparently the person least interested in the 100-hour non-stop drive which ended last Saturday, is the driver himself. Mr. Ocie D. Rutherford.

When interviewed Tuesday he could not be worked into any degree of frenzy about the long sleepless nights and the monotonous restful hours of the days, with nothing in sight but the road constantly rolling up on the wheels of his new Chevrolet.

"The first and third nights of the drive were the sleepiest," he said. "All the rest of the time I went along with scarely any more exertion felt than one experiences on any kind of a hit-and-miss automobile trip of short duration.

"Very little physical exhaustion was felt. I was comfortable all the while. The handcuff on my left arm worried me the first day and night a little bit. The ease with which one can handle the machine I was driving contributed much to the comfort of what ordinarily would seem a distressing ordeal.

"The most refreshing events of the drive were the daily shaves performed by Dick Bean. Feeling rather droll and uninterested in the scenery each morning, it was indeed vitalizing to feel the whiskers slip off my face, and have those hot towels applied to the back of my neck, with a liberal degree of massaging. It just exactly fixed me up for the day.

"Eating a carefully regulated diet served to me in transit by the Dixie Cafe, of course supplied the proper energy to keep me fit for the exhausting hours.

"I want to say one thing in this little interview. I most sincerely appreciate the cooperation and attention given by the different people who acted as sponsors of this interesting feat. My car was inspected daily by Arthur Watson, shop foreman of the Hayes Chevrolet Company. Mr. Watson took a very extraordinary interest in the machine, and I appreciate that, because it is obvious that the machine, as well as myself, had a very great part of the responsibility for the success of the effort that we made.

"That is about enough for me to say, I think. I have slept some today, and have been in swimming. I got water in my head and I feel a little groggy. In fact, I find that a little water on the brain is worse for one's mental alertness than driving a Chevrolet one hundred hours without stopping."

When the drive was completed at two o'clock on Saturday afternoon, Mr. Rutherford was carried to the hospital and examined. He was found to be in perfect condition, except, of course, needing a little sleep. When he had slept four hours he was awakened, and came down town for three hours to walk around.

Back to bed about 10:30 Saturday night, and he snoozed this time for twelve hours, after which he awoke of his own accord, and everything was perfectly normal again.

During the 100 hours a total distance of 1,277.9 miles were covered. When the Chevrolet was checked up at the end of the drive it had exactly the same amount of oil it had at the start. It took one cupful of water to fill the radiator. During the drive the average mileage was 20.63 miles per gallon of gasoline.

This event was put on jointly by Ocie D. Rutherford, driver, and Alex Callen, promoter.

This is the third endurance drive that has been made by Mr. Rutherford. On prior occasions he drove 159 hours one time and 100 hours another time.

$3,000 ALLOTTED FOR THE AIRPORT

Local Agencies May Help To Secure A Swimming Pool

Last week a delegation of local officials and other interested parties went to Montgomery for a conference with Thad Holt, director of relief work, and Mr. Crowe, relative to completion of the Clanton airport, together with the possibility of a club house and swimming pool in connection. The delegation included Judge Reynolds and the County Commissioners, Mr. W. A. Cone, director of relief work for Chilton County, and J. Mell Martin and Percy Pitts, representing the Kiwanis Club.

Upon their return it was given out that there is already made an appropriation of $3,000 for the completion of the landing field at Clanton airport.

Another angle of this offer involves the willingsess of the county, city, or other community groups to make donation of certain amounts toward the project, the best version of which seems as follows:

Labor for whatever further improvement or development may be attempted at the airport will be furnished by the relief work administration.

If the county, city, or other interested agencies will provide trucks, tools, gasoline, tractors, and such ohter necessary appliances to finish the landing field, then the $3,000 which has been appropriated to finish the job may be used to provide material for erecting a club house or swimming pool. In this event, all labor can be provided by relief workers.

In the event the county, city, or other interested community agencies do not provide that which they may furnish as above outlined, then the $3,000 will be used strictly for the purpose of completing the landing field, and the other projects, a club house and swimming pool will be out of the question entirely.

In other words, the matter is reduced to this: If the people of Clanton and Chilton County want to make a community center, with recreational facilities, at the airport, it is up to us to find means wherepy a few hundred dollars can be supplied locally. When we show a spirit of interest and cooperation to the extent of these few hundred dollars, then we can have available a much larger amount of federal funds to make the place one of delight and convenience for the future.

There is another phase to the question. By supplying the amount the community is called upon to furnish, it will mean that the work can go forward to completion, with many days work provided for many people who need it, all with but very little cost to this county or community.

Negro Escapes Jail Last Sunday

Walked Out and Locked Jailer Sam Johnson Inside

Roosevelt Young, alias Henry Smith Young, negro prisoner in the Chilton County jail, charged with larceny, pulled a smooth walk-out last Sunday night, leaving jailer Sam Johnson securely locked within the walls.

The jail guard had gone inside the prison to take some things to the prisoners. As he went in he left the jail yard gate open, and left the keys in the front door. In some manner, the negro had gotten out of the cell quarters, and was concealed in the corridor.

As the jailer went in the negro stepped to the front door, took the keys and came outside, locking the door behind him. He walked quietly out of the gate and made his escape without being noticed by anybody. Jailer Johnson, locked inside, had to call the Sheriff to let him out.

Sheriff Gillespie said the negro's home is at Rockford in Coosa County, and that he has hopes of locating him and bringing him back to answer the charges for which he was arrested here.

BOB JONES

COMMENTS ON HERE AND HEREAFTER.

This is the season when young people are thinking about going off to college. Going to college is serious business. A boy's of girl's whole future life depends largey upon the contacts made in college. Many of my best friends are the men and women whom I met when I was a college boy. Most of these friends have succeeded in life. Of course, some have failed. However, that is to be expected. Jesus had twelve in His school. One of the twelve wound up a traitor and a suicide. Eleven of the group turned the world up-side-down.

About five years ago last March I met a little black-eyed girl who was just finishing high school. She was the valedictorian of her class. She had been given a free scholarship in a great university. Her mother didn't like the idea of sending her seventeen year old daughter off to a large university. She wanted her daughter to have personal attention. 'I want to put her in a school where I know she will be safe. I am going to send her to the Bob Jones college," her mother said. "It is a long way from home, I know," the woman continued. "What does distance matter? What is a thousand miles in this day and time?" I asked the mother. The girl traveled more than a thousand miles and enrolled in the Bob Jones college. The first year this girl met an Alabama boy. Since that time the Alabama boy and the girl from a distance have both been graduated from the Bob Jones College. A few months ago they were married. They now live in Michigan. How little this girl from a distance realized that the first year in college she would meet the man to whom in less than five years she would be happily married.

"We walk by faith and not by sight." It is far better to let God do your seeing than to try to do it yourself. But God wants us to use common sense. I tell the boys and girls in the Bob Jones College that God is not the author of a foolish thing. One of our students in the college said some time ago, "God is leading me to do a certain thing." I said, "God isn't a fool. What you are about to do is a foolish thing. Don't tell people that God is back of that. God is an intelligent personality." God wants us to use good sense, but nobody can see the future except God. It is wonderful to trust One who doesn't only know the past but who knows the future. I am glad I have surrendered my life to Him who promised that if we will commit our way unto Him and trust in Him that He will bring it to pass.

GAME AND FISH NEWS

Montgomery, Ala.—Commissioner I. T. Quinn of the game and fisheries department, has received a copy of an opinion by the attorney general advising Solicitor William G. Lindsey, of Chatom, that it is a violation of the law for a hunter to stand on a public highway and shoot game crossing the highway.

The opinion of the attorney general stated that "it was the legislative intent to protect the public against indiscriminate hunting on lands of others" and that "it was the intent of the law to give the owner of the land such protection."

"It has long been a violation of law for anyone to discharge a gun or any kind of firearm along or across a highway," said Commissioner Quinn, commenting on the opinion, "and, by the ruling of the attorney general and his interpretation of sections 4204 and 5447 of the code of 1923, it is made a violation of law to hunt, shoot or discharge a gun or any other kind of firearm at any wild bird or animal moving along or across any public highway in this state."

Solitictor Lindsey made specific reference to persons taking a stand on a public highway and shooting deer without having a permit on the land adjoining either side of the road.

Misses Peggy Page, Olive Rainer Elmore and Theda Wyatt are spending a few days this week with Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Stapp, at their home in Selma.

GOD'S CARE FOR ELIJAH

LESSON TEXT—I Kings 17:1-16; 19:1-8.

GOLDEN TEXT—For after all these things do the Gentiles seek: for your heavenly Father knoweth that ye have need of all these things. Matthew 6:32.

PRIMARY TOPIC—How God Took Care of Elijah.

JUNIOR TOPIC—How God Took Care of Elijah.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How Does God Provide?

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—God's Constant Care.

I. Elijah's Message to Ahab (v. 1).

This was a most startling message, for Ahab had not only led Israel into idolatry but into the repudiation of the living God.

1. "As the Lord God of Israel liveth." Elijah knew that he represented the living God when he came into the king's presence.

2. "Before whom I stand." Because Elijah stood before God he could stand before Ahab.

3. "There shall not be dew nor rain these years but according to my word." The suspension of moisture continued for three and a half years and was given in answer to Elijah's prayer (James 5:17). Drought was predicted as a punishment for idolatry (Deut. 11:16, 17) and the prophet was now applying the divine judgment.

II. Elijah's Retirement (vv. 2, 3).

As soon as he had delivered his message he retired from the king's side while the penalty of the king's sin should be visited upon the land. Though God's prophets must be separated from men they are in God's presence.

III. God Provides for Elijah (vv. 2-16; 19:1-8).

1. At the brook Cherith (vv. 2-7). God offered a hiding place for his servant who so fearlessly declared his message. He was sustained in a twofold way.

a. By drinking of the brook (vv. 4-6). While drinking of the literal waters of the brook he was being nourished by the living water from the throne of God.

b. By being fed by the ravens (vv. 4-6). The ravens brought him bread and flesh both morning and evening. Elijah thus enjoyed two meals each day with water to drink. The same God who sustained Elijah still lives and we should trust him for our daily bread. At last the brook dried up because there was no rain in the land. The Lord then instructed him to move.

2. At Zarephath (vv. 8-16). Observe

a. The place (v. 9) Zarephath was at the west side of Palestine near the Mediterranean sea in Gentile territory. In order to reach this place Elijah had to cross the country from the Jordan to the sea. Perhaps he did this at night in order not to be seen. Zarephath was only a few miles from the home of Jezebel's father.

b. Sustained by a widow (vv. 10-12). "Bring a little water and a morsel of bread," was the request which he made of the widow. This was a great trial to her but God had touched her heart and stirred up faith in her. Her reply reveals her deep distress.

c. Elijah's reply (v. 13). This made plain to her that it was a case of mutual interest to do as the prophet said. "The barrel of meal shall not waste, neither shall the cruse of oil fail." May we learn from Elijah's experience.

(1) The particularity of God's providence. He by prearrangement meets our daily needs. There are no happenings in God's providence. The woman of Zarephath going out to gather sticks to prepare the last meal met Elijah and is helped for two years.

(2) No matter how small our resources we can do something for God if we will. Let no one be discouraged because he is poor and unknown.

(3) We should give our all to God and trust him for further supply. The best way to help ourselves is to help others. This woman gave one morsel to God's prophet and obtained a supply for herself and family for two or more years.

(4) God often allows us to get down to great extremity in order to teach us that all is from him.

(5) God's dealing with this Gentile woman is a foregleam of his dealing with the Gentile nations.

IV. He Sent an Angel to Cook Elijah's Meal (I Kings 19:6,7).

Elijah was greatly discouraged and despondent over the strain of his struggle which culminated on Mt. Carmel. God was very tender in his dealing with him. He not only gave him sleep (v. 5) but provided food for him at the hand of an angel.

Difficulties

Difficulties are here not to be sidestepped, but to be met fairly and squarely. A religion that doesn't get you into trouble isn't worth having, and a religion that doesn't get you out of trouble isn't worth having. Remember Daniel and his three friends.—E. G. Krampe.

Submissive Heart

The Bible, the open Bible, the studied Bible, the Bible in the heart is the only hope of our land today.—H. M. Parsons.

TO YOU WHO DIE

If you want to sleep in a first-class coffin, made by hand and of first-class material, you may obtain such a casket at the Verbena One-Man Casket Manufacturing Emporium.

Why pay a large price for a showy coffin when you can put your loved ones away in a decent coffin for $15? This price does not include a box, but it does include a plank top.

These coffins are painted inside and outside and are lined with white cloth. They have a white pad in the bottom and a white pillow. They also have handles on the outside and there is not a nail hole showing.

Bring your truck or wagon to Verbena and your cheap coffin is on hand. There is no reason for a child to die, but there are eight small coffins at Verbena for $8 each. Let's be sensible. This is a recovery act, and for the benefit of those whose income is meager.

WAREHOUSEMEN TO MEET AT AUBURN

Auburn, Ala., July 11.—A program containing many important features for warehousemen in the State is being planned for the annual meeting of the Alabama Bonded Warehousemen's Association to be held here on July 19, said E. C. Bassett of Troy, State president.

There are this year, he said, many problems that should be worked out by members of the association. Chief topic to be discussed at the meeting will be the application of the Bankhead act limiting the amount of cotton to be ginned this season, and plans for carrying out the provisions of this act.

More than 100 members are expected in Auburn for the meeting, sessions of which are to be held in Langdon Hall. There are in Alabama 298 warehouses, 23 of this number having federal licenses.

STORES SILAGE AT LOW COST

Brewton, Ala.—V. D. McCreary, Escambia County, has discovered a method of storing silcage at a cost of only $1.38 per ton. Last fall he dug a trench silo with a square foot area of cross section equal to the number of cattle and a lengh in feed equal to his proposed feeding period.

When the time came to fill the silo, he fastened a disc of sheet iron over the rar wheel of his car, to which he fastened a cutting blade off-set two inches. The wheel was set over the trench silo and a trough placed against the blade. This made an efficient cutter, as it cut the sileage as fast as it could be handled and cost only $1.33 per ton to fill the silo.

BAKER SCHOOL MEETING

The trustees of Baker School request all patrons of the school to meet at the schoolhouse Friday night, July 13, at 7:30 o'clock. The purpose of the meeting is to discuss some very important school matters, and all patrons are urged to attend.

This experience in grazing hogs in velvet beans and sweet potatoes encouraged Mr. Patton to the point that he is this year growing approximately 100 hogs the same way.

PRIVATE FORESTRY FUNDS MATCHED BY GOVERNMENT

Montgomery.—That certain private expenditures made by landowners in advancing forestry on their holdings may be used by the State as a basis for Federal matching is quite generally known, but according to Col. Page S. Bunker, Alabama State Forester, the conditions under which such expenditures are accepted are not so widely understood. "In order for the State to receive credit," says Col Bunker, "private funds must be expended under State supervision and be satisfactorily accounted for by the Commission of Forestry. A written agreement is required to be executed between the Commission and the individual landowner or association controlling the areas upon which the expenditures are made. This agreement may contain among other things a statement of the division of expenditures between the owner and the State, provision for inspection by the experts of the Commission and stipulations as to compliance with protection plans prepared jointly by the owner and the State."

Expenditures made independently of the terms of the agreements do not aid in obtaining Federal funds, according to Col. Bunker. Since Federal contributions based upon private expenditures are to be spent mainly on and near the holdings on which such expenditures were made, it is most essential that the private outlay be of a nature and extent approved by the Commission of Forestry. The act of Congress under which matching of forestry funds is permitted contemplates their use for fire protection. While the principles and practices of prevention and suppression of forest fires are comparatively simple they nevertheless are quite exacting, and it is entirely possible for an owner to make heavy expenditures in ways that do not contribute materially to the protection of his holdings . In fact, in extreme cases it has been found that the landowner would have been better off had such expenditures not been made. Naturally, costs of this sort are not recognized either by the State or the Federal Government. On the other hand, expenditures made under State approval and supervision pursuant to the terms of regular agreements may result in adding to the total forestry funds available for use in the community a very considerable amount with consequent increased security of the forestral property involved.

IT'S A GIRL

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. McEathern are the proud parents of a new baby girl who arrived at their home last Saturday.

You're The Loser

I have been using Dr. Miles Anti-Pain Pills for thirty years. No matter what kind of pain I have, they stop it almost instantly. Never without them in the house. Mrs. Chas. W. Webb, Indio, Calif.

WHEN you allow Headache, Neuralgia, Muscular, Rheumatic, Sciatic or Periodic Pains to keep you from work or pleasure.

You can't go places and do things when you are suffering—and the work or good times won't wait for you.

Why allow Pain to rob you of Health, Friends, Happiness, Money?

DR. MILES ANTI-PAIN PILLS have been used for the relief of pain for more than forty years. They taste good, act quickly, do not upset the stomach, nor cause constipation, leave no dull, depressed feeling.

Thousands have used them for twenty, thirty, forty years, and still find that nothing else relieves pain so promptly and effectively.

Why don't you try them? Once you know how pleasant they are to take, how quickly and effectively they relieve, you won't want to go back to disagreeable, slow acting medicines.

You too may find quick relief. Why wait forty minutes for relief when Dr. Miles Anti-Pain Pills will relieve you in ten to twenty minutes?

As a household remedy I have never found anything that equalled Dr. Miles Anti-Pain Pills. Mrs. Silas D. Keller, Penfield, Pa.

I never found anything that was so good to stop pain as Dr. Miles Anti-Pain Pills. I have told many about them and I find they are all using them. Mrs. Martha Lacy, Davenport, Iowa

I have been using Dr. Miles Anti-Pain Pills for years. I keep them on hand all the time. I can certainly recommend them for pain. Miss Audra Seybold, 2417 W. 2nd St., Dayton, Ohio

Your Anti-Pain Pills have been a wonderful help to me. I have used them for three years and always keep them on hand. Mrs. E. Pierce, Lapwai, Idaho

I have used quite a lot of Dr. Miles Anti-Pain Pills. They are fine pills to stop pain. Mrs. J. L. Kester, Shickshinny, Pa.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

(By Frank P. Litschert

One of the commonest questions now heard from people discussing the later phases of the depression is why there is no building boom in the United States. Once our so-called heavy industries are busy again, so they say, we will be well on the way toward normalacy, and such a gain in heavy business is not possible, until we have another upsurge in building. It is pointed out that Great Britain, which nation is recovering from the depression perhaps faster than any other, shows much improvement in its heavy industries, the decrease in unemployment being especially pronounced in the British heavy industries. Along with this has come a building boom in the British Isles. Building last year in Great Britain was pretty good and this year it is running far ahead of last. The majority of new buildings come in the dwelling class but there has been a substantial increase in factory and business building. In view of all this activity in Great Britain, and with some American economists telling us that there is a shortage of building construction in our own country amounting to twenty-five billions, it is no wonder that we ask why building construction and heavy industries are not gaining in the United States.

The reason is not so hard to find. From many parts of the country come reports that business costs have doubled during the past year and that it costs as much to put up a building now as it did during the boom days of 1929. One man from the Middle West, who contemplated additions and improvements to a city dwelling and a farm house this year, told the writer recently that he was compelled to forego improving the farm house and put what money he could spare on the city dwelling because he found it would cost him twice as much to do the work as he had figured on. This means a reduction in use of labor and material, and if repeated thousands of times over the United States would amount to something in the aggregate.

Now why have costs increased so rapidly during the year? According to the Alexander Hamilton Institute: "Because of high wage rates fixed by codes, it is difficult for manufacturers of building materials to reduce their prices. Moreover, the market for building materials which the government is providing for its public works program is tending to deprive these manufacturers of the incentive to demand code revisions. In addition, manufacturers feel that, even if the codes were revised, they would not be able to reduce prices sufficiently to stimulate much of an increase in building activity. Building costs would still remain unduly inflated despite lower quotations by manufacturers of building materials because of high wages in the buliding industry and the high costs of transporting materials to sites of construction work. While there is a possibility that wages in building trades might be reduced, there is no prospect of an immediate reduction in freight rates in view of the recent agreement to restore railway wage rates to the level prevailing prior to the ten per cent cut."

And there you are. High taxes are another bar to a building boom and there does not seem to be much prospect of remedy here either, under present conditions. A great many people have professed to believe that there is little building because no money or credit for building was available. They expect a building boom now because the government is going to furnish the money. But there will probably be disappointment here, too. Few builders who expect to pay back what they borrow are going to take a long chance with high costs and little prospect for increase in rents or reduction in taxes. It begins to look as though we got the cart before the horse, that it would have been better to have stimulated industry and buying first, and to have let higher prices and higher costs come as a logical sequence, as they always do come in times of rising prosperity.

We are frequently told by its sponsors on the platform and in public press that the New Deal is to be a permanent part of American life, that regimentation is here to stay whether the old fashioned individualists like it or not. Certainly the college professors at Washington seem to feel that they have come to stay and that no future election is going to hand them their walking ticket—perhaps they cannot see how the people of the United States could be so old-fashioned as to repudiate the work of their regimenters.

But a new note was struck the other day when Harry L. Hopkins, according to press dispatches from the national capital, stated that the problem of relief must be put on a permanent basis. Mr. Hopkins added that there are now 16,000,000 people on the public relief rolls in the United States. This may surprise a great many of us who have been led to believe by the publicity experts that the depression is about over.

Even more significant, however, is that it may be gathered from Mr. Hopkins' remarks that in spite of the New Deal the relief problem is to be a permanent one and the government must in some form or other take care of an important part of our population either by doles or government jobs, from now on.

The administrator, according to the press, outlined a plan of social reform in which there is to be publicly financed public works to supplement the incomes of the farmers and the workers, with the decentralizing of industry, and moving large sections of population out of the cities into the country. All of this will, of course, cost money but Uncle Sam will furnish it and will then take it off the producers of the country. Of course the higher taxes are, the less production there will be, and the greater the burden, but the Brain Trust can be counted on to solve a little problem like that, so long as there are plenty of blackboards and a full supply of chalk.

Probably now and then some inquiring mind will ask whether it wouldn't be better to practice a little economy and budget balancing, thus giving industry a little more confidence to go ahead and so furnish jobs for some of the people who are now depending on the government. Lack of confidence now seems to be one of the big clouds in the industrial picture. But of course all such mutterings on the part of the "rugged individualists" will be brushed aside by the Brain Trusters as old-fashioned. We are going to have a permanent new system, with permanent relief, and the government playing father to all of us. It sounds fine, but where will it end?

SUPPLY AND DEMAND

According to the latest reports the Kansas wheat crop will turn out better than the government's estimate and may total anywhere from 75,000,000 to 80,000,000 bushels. News dispatches tell us that the Kansas farmers who are selling the wheat from the machine are getting 75 cents a bushel for it. This is three times the price they got for the bumper crop of 236,000,000 bushels harvested in 1931.

But let's do a little figuring. Eighty million bushels or a little less at 75 cents a bushel brings in just about the same amount of money as 236,000,000 bushels at 25 cents. In other words, the Kansas crop in 1934 at 75 cents is worth just about as much as the 1931 crop at 25 cents. The answer, of course, is that the law of supply and demand is still working. The only difference is that a bumper crop, as in 1931, makes more work for labor, and more traffic for the railroads and trucks.

It can be seen therefore, that scarcity and high prices do not always bring greatly increased wealth. It is the theory of the brain trust that the way to create wealth is to destroy part of our goods in the hope of getting a much higher price for what is left. But no nation has ever yet become wealthy through destruction of its tangible wealth.

Which reminds us of a little story we heard the other day. A western farm politician was congratulating a western "drougth" farmer on the theory that scarcity of crops would bring him higher prices for what he raised. The farmer's reply was: "Well, you can't get rich selling what you haven't got, no matter how high the price is."

One of the plans for the future, evolved by our social engineers, is that which visualizes the moving people from our congested centers of population out into the wide open spaces. Mrs. Rosalie Sampinelli of somewhere near Washington square is to become Mary of the Vineclad Cottage, amid the hills of old Kentucky. All of which is fine, if it will work. But there are some difficulties. In the first place the average city dweller, one born and raised on and near the cement pavements and by the busy roar of traffic, has some distorted ideas of rural life, and the kind of people who live there. The average native New Yorker thinks that civilization ends a few miles west of the Hudson River and that life would not be worth living away from the bright lights, the beach at Coney, and the rish and roar of subway traffic. To him "Joisey" is some distant land across the river in which there may still dwell monsters of the kind the boys used to read about in the tale of "Jack the Giant Killer." And Indiana is a place where the Indians still chase the buffalo and scalp the unwary white pioneer. And he wants none of the "hick country" for himself. He prefers the milk that comes in bottles to that which comes fresh from the cows—when he prefers milk at all—the smell of the city street to the odor of new-mown hay. Dwellers in other great cities are no different.

Of course it may be possible for our social engineers to change this psychology but we doubt it. The country boy naturally turns with longing eyes to the city, but few city boys look toward the country as a place for a career. A few of them did in the Horatio Alger stories, but no place else. And if the psychology can be changed, just how good a farmer will one of these dwellers of the city canyons make? Of course he might be lodged in a small factory town but we doubt whether this would very much improve his esthetic spirit or his outlook on life.

It may be and has been possible to put over on the Russian worker, and move him about like a load of goods, but it is going to be a little more difficult in the United States. And those who think that tenement folks in the city are just waiting for a chance to rush out into the wide-open spaces to live are due for some disappointment.

Some of them might try it as a lark, but most of these would drift back to the bright lights as soon as Uncle Sam got tired putting up the money.

The Jinx on Jack

I set out, at the beginning of the big league baseball season, to give an exact record, week by week, of the work of Jack Hayes, who does a lot of second-basing for the Chicago White Sox. On May 10, however, old Lady Luck frowned on Jack, and he came down with a bone ailment in his throwing arm, and had to undergo an operation. That was hard, as Jack is regarded as one of the best second-basemen in the country. But the worst was yet to come. On June 29, he got back into the game, with that old right arm well and going like a house afire, and played through July 3. In the 6th inning of a double header on July 4, the White Sox infield had started a double-play, with Jack taking the throw at second. The runner coming down from first base slid under Jack, knocking him from his feet, and making it impossible for him to catch the ball with his gloved hand. However, he went after it with has bare hand, anyway, and suffered a fractured thumb, which is expected to keep him out another month. The Chicago sports writers are high in their praise of Jack and his playing ability. They had much to say about him and the effect he has had on the whole White Sox team, on the next day after he got back into the game. One sports writer says: "The White Sox look like a different team altogether, with steady reliable Hayes at second." Another says: "The second base post is not the only position strengthened by the return of Hayes. The make-shift arrangement of Chamberlin and Boken had the whole team, especially the pitchers, somewhat flighty, but with Hayes in the game, Boken goes to short, where he works best, especially since he has the almost infallible Hayes to work with." Another says: "Hayes is the spark plug of the White Sox inner works." Another says: "Hayes is one of the best, if not the very best defensive infielder in the game today." That's saying a lot, too, for you can be sure there are some good ones up there in the big time. Here's hoping for a speedy recovery for Jack, and that he will soon be back at his post. And I think I'll write him a letter and tell him that he can't go poking his fingers into saw mills, and the like, and expect to get by with it. He made a trip home when he was injured before, but will stay in Chicago this time, possibly making road trips with the team.

The School Census

Last Monday morning, school census enumerators began their work in every beat in the county. Their job is to list every person from six years of age to 20, both inclusive. From the experience of enumerators in the past, it is the opinion of many people that this is an attempt to gather information from which to work in forcing children to attend shool, but such is not the case. Here are the facts. The county receives a great part of its school funds from the state, and these receipts are based upon the actual number of people in school age—6 to 20. This census must stand for the next two years, and for each person enumerated, white or black, big or little, old or young, each year the county will receive approximately $4.00 for educational purposes. From this, one may see just how important it is that every child be enumerated. Every one we miss costs the school system about $8.00 during the next two years. Realizing this, all should do everything in their power to see that their children are enumerated, if they are within the age limit. It makes no difference what the condition may be, every one should be enumerated. Here is an instance. Suppose there is a married couple—the man 19 years of age and the woman 17 or 18—they should be enumerated, just as if they were 10 or 11 years old. Try to see that your children are registered, and if the enumerator in your Beat misses you, for some reason, report it to Mr. Little, the Superintendent, and he will see that the enumeration is made. The enumerators are anxious to get every name, but some might be missed, and patrons can be a great help in the work. It is to the interest of the schools that every person cooperate in this work, and your interest will be highly appreciated by the enumerators, the Superintendand the board of education.

Were They Right?

Before the 18th Amendment was repealed, the repealists kept drumming into our ears that less liquor would be consumed, and that conditions would improve correspondingly with repeal. To me (and to many others, I imagine) that didn't sound reasonable. And, to tell the truth, I am not at all convinced that it will prove true, after all, as we still have a state prohibition law for liquor violators to contend with, although it isn't very strictly enforced. However, if we may take the past July 4th as an example, we must admit that the repealists were right. It was after the prohibition law had been enacted before I began to take notice of things of this kind, but I have grown up to unconsciously connect such special occasions as Christmas Day, July 4th, and the like, with much drinking and subsequent disorder. However, July 4th, the first one since repeal, was by far the best we have had in many years. Almost evrey year I spend the glorious 4th in Clanton or close around, and every year there is a pretty good crop of drunks. But last Wednesday I saw only one drunk man (and I have seen that man drunk many times when there was no special occasion.) There are a few, you know, who will get tight at times, no matter what is happening—they don't pick the time and place—just when the urge comes on, they pitch one. It is human nature to want what it is not allowed to have, and to lose its desire for that article, when the restrictions are removed. Now, human nature doesn't change much, and it may be that when people can get all the liquor they want, the desire for the "fire water" may lessen somewhat. Tell a person he is not allowed to do a thing and he will do that very thing or "bust" something trying. The repealists may have been right.

The Stars and Stripes

As I looked at "Old Glory" flying from the flag pole near the athletic field at the high school on July 4th, I could not keep from thinking just what those red and white stripes, and that blue field with 48 stars, means. I wonder just how many people realize the full meaning of our national flag. It is said that General Washington, when he gave Betsy Ross her orders about how to make up the first American flag, had this to say: "The red stripes are for the blood of our heroes that has been shed that we may become a free and independent country. The white stripes are to commemorate the purity of our purpose and the honesty of our intentions in making war on our mother country. May this flag never wave over an army or a people who aspire to tread on the natural rights of people. The blue field is to forever commemorate the sacredness of our word of honor as a nation. And the several stars are for the several states, which, although retaining their sovereignty as states, yet are bound together as one, for the common good of all, and are here gathered together as one in this blue field of truth and honor. Our country, the most of whose history is yet to be made, may well bear in mind these few facts. And, if our successors will cling fiercely to these tenets, as those who have died in our cause have done, I have no fear for the future. Our nation will grow to be great." Washington lived to see his words proved, in part. However, since his time, much American blood has been shed that the red bars may rightfully stay in the flag. Many have been the instances when the honesty and fairness of America was attested, that the white stripes may remain. The blue field is still there, and the word of the American nation is accepted and respected all over the world. The original thirteen stars have grown in number until now there are forty-eight of them, and yet they remain together — one and inseparable. As an American views the flag, flying free to the breeze, he may well feel proud of the history behind it. He knows that the stars and bars are not there just for the sake of color, but that everyone of those stars means a sovereign state, with millions of people, and that every one of those stripes is there because it means something great and noble—mute reminders of great and noble deeds well done. He hopes, too, that "Old Glory" may wave her message of liberty to the world long after he is gone.—Man in the Moon.

LESS ACRES MORE FERTILIZER

They certainly understand this New Deal down South. It will be remembered that the AAA has paid the farmers of the cotton belt something like $112,000,000 to reduce the number of acres put into cotton. Reports of the Federal Reserve Bank state that the money expended for fertilizer in the South is 45 per cent greater than a year ago. This means that about $50,000,000 of the $112,000,000 of the taxpayers' money which the AAA gave the cotton farmers to reduce their acreage, has been expended for fertilizer to grow more cotton.

When the allotted two out of each five acres of cotton land to remain idle, the farmers naturally picked out the poorest acres for a "rest." But now, with an increased use of fertilizer, if Dame Nature is kind, a bigger crop than ever may be raised on fewer acres. Of course, the Bankhead law discourages production by providing that the cotton grower must pay a heavy tax on all the cotton he produces above a certain amount. This may discourage the farmers but it won't discourage Dame Nature.

Now some of the Southern politicians are said to be worrying about what may happen if the cotton farmers produce considerably more than the legal number of bales and are compelled to pay a tax which will reduce the price of this surplus from ten to six cents a pound. The average Southerner, in spite of the lectures given him by the Brain Trust remembers his Thomas Jefferson and his Andy Jackson and is still a rugged individualist. And when it comes time to pay the exhorbitant cotton tax he may show some of his individualism in a way that will be detrimental to the peace and quiet of the politicians of his community. The AAA ought to be praying for a short cotton crop, in order to avoid possible unpleasant complications.

RECENT ELECTIONS SHOULD BE VOIDED

If the State Democratic Executive Committee possesses the sovereign power, it should weild it, by meeting and declaring the two recent party primaries held in this state null and void on account of wholesale frauds, and by fixing the dates for new elections. Probings and contests are now in full swing or on docket in more than a dozen counties. Irregularities and open and wanton violation of the law featured the elections practically all over the state. Ballots were bought and sold freely in many places, the registration and poll tax requirements were ignored, vast numbers of non-voters voted, ballots were substituted on a wide scale and the absentee voting privilege was so flagrantly violated, it has become a stench.

The investigation in Jefferson County reveals that many persons away from home on election day on their vacations voted in violation of the law, which stipulates that the only valid ground for voting an absentee ballot is absence from home "on account of business or in performance of business duties." Thousands of these ballots were cast by persons who had no business excuses whatever, contrary to the clear intent of the law.

It is a well known public principle that "fraud vitiates all contracts," and an impartial, searching, courageous investigation would disclose that the recent primaries held in this state reeked with fraud, and they should be voided and set aside as being repugnant to the welfare of the Democratic party and public decency. Many precedents might be cited in other states in justification of such a proceeding.—Selma Times Journal.

Dief Says G-3's Are Good Tires

Unprecedented sales have resulted since the public announcement of the Goodyear G-3 tire on April 29, according to L. E. Diefenderfer, local dealer for The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co.

"The new G-3 All-Weather skyrocketed to success," Mr. Diefenderfer asserted. "It took Goodyear over 24 months to perfect it, but it met with immediate public acceptance within 24 hours after its announcement.

"There are a number of reasons why the G-3 has become so popular. Included are a wider, flatter tread, giving greater road contact; more diamond blocks in the center of the tread for additional safety; an average of two pounds more rubber per tire; wider riding ribs; narrower and deeper grooves—all of which sum up to 43 per cent more non-skid mileage in the G-3 over old style tires.

"In addition, the tire may be purchased for the present at the same low prices, but restrictions on crude rubber may affect tire prices, and it seems reasonable to expect that anyone purchasing tires now will be saving money and getting the benefit of new tires during the hot summer months, and sure-footed traction during the winter when wet, slippery streets are the rule," Mr. Diefenderfer concluded.

CANE CREEK

Last Saturday and Sunday were our regular preaching days. Bro. Robinson delivered some fine sermons. We didn't have service Sunday night on account of the rain. Let's every body come back next Sunday with a well studied lesson.

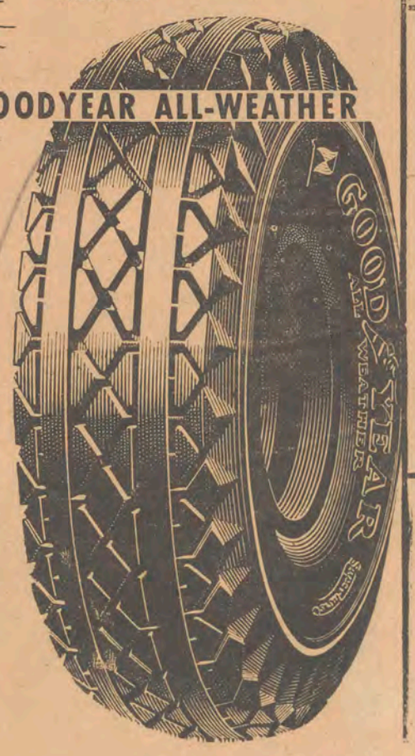
Our protracted meeting begins on Saturday night before the 5th Sunday in this month. We are praying for a revival. Let's each one look forward for the meetings.

Our Sunday school was really good Sunday. We have 68 on roll and had 60 present. We hope they will all keep coming. We had a good little singing Sunday afternoon, considering the crowd. We were glad to have the visitors, especially the Friendship folks. Everyone always welcome at Cane Creek.

THE WHOLE COUNTRY HAS GONE "G-3"

Tremendous welcome—huge sales—follow announcement of sensational new Goodyear tire—keeps us and factory on jump—Users say "43% more non-skid mileage" understates it.

MARVELOUS NEW "G-3" GOODYEAR ALL-WEATHER



Look What You Get—No Extra Cost: 43% More Miles of real non-skid safety . . . Flatter Wider Tread . . . More Center Traction (16% more non-skid blocks) . . . Heavier Tougher Tread (average of 2 lbs. more rubber) . . . Supertwist Cord Body (supports heavier tread safely)

We've never seen the equal of it—the way car owners have flocked in, looked, listened, bought new G-3's these last ten weeks—and it's the same everywhere we hear. What's more, people who got G-3's months before the public announcement, report it's better than claimed! They cite mileage records to prove they're getting better than the 43% more non-skid mileage averaged by Goodyear's test fleet. Buy no tires until you let us show you this wonderful new Goodyear All-Weather which gives so much more safety and service without costing you a cent extra!

Sure, we have Goodyears at ALL Prices! Because Goodyears are the largest selling tires, you get more for your money no matter what you pay.

WHAT NEGROES ARE DOING

Annual N. F. A. Conference Held

The "New Farmers of Alabama" held its annual conference at Tuskegee July 6th and 7th. The local chapter had as its representatives, Clinton Colloway, Charles Calloway, Frizzell McKinney, William McKinney and Arthur James Benjamin.

This state-wide organization meets each year at Tuskegee, where its members compete in judging farm animals, as swine, dairy cattle, mules and poultry, and such crops as corn, sweet potatoes, and the identification of crop and vegetable seeds. In addition to this they compete in an oratorical contest. The subject of the oration this year was a "Live-at-home Program for my Community."

The Chilton County boys came away with the highest honors, winning more prizes than any other chapter in the state.

I feel like this organization is very important, vitally so. It affords an opportunity for boys from all sections of the state to visit Tuskegee Institute. It gives them new inspiration and aspiration to do better supervised practice work in their community. It has educational values and that something which makes better leadership. It is my eager desire to have all my N. F. A. Club boys attend the conferences and compete in the various activities each year.—Benj. Anderson.

"Dear Miss," wrote a particular mother to the teacher, "Don't whip out Tommy. He isn't used to it. We never hit him at home except in self-defense."

"I want a very careful chauffeur—one who doesn't take the slightest risks," warned the would-be employer.

"I'm your man, sir," answered the applicant. "Can I have my salary in advance?"

Mr. Wiley M. Bean will return this week from Auburn where he has been taking a special course of study for the past few months.

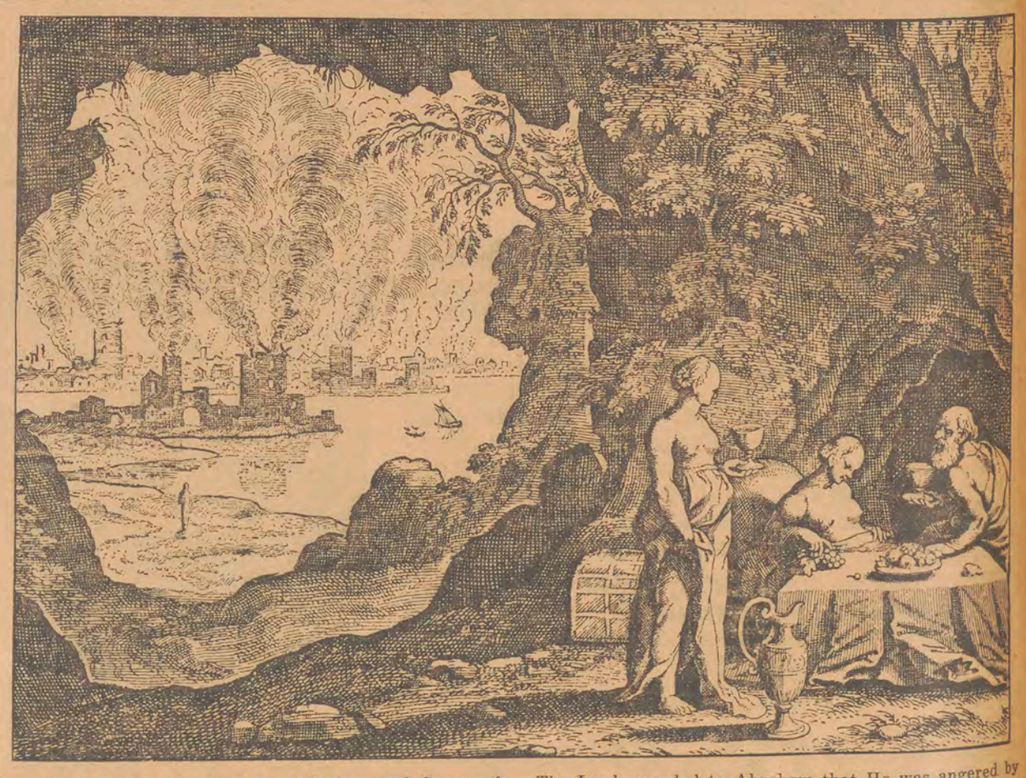
The Story of the Bible Told in Pictures



Lot's Flight; Destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah.—The Lord revealed to Abraham that He was angered by the wickedness of Sodom, and Abraham pleaded with Him for the righteous few in the city. And God promised Abraham that if ten righteous souls should be found in Sodom He would spare the city. Two angels then visited Lot in the city of Sodom. The angels commanded Lot and his family to flee from the city, enjoining them not to look back upon the city. "But his wife looked back from behind him, and she became a pillar of salt."—Gen. 19: 26. Her figure may be seen at the left of the accompanying picture in which Matthew Merian portrayed the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah. "And Lot went up out of Zoar, and dwelt in the mountain, and his two daughters with him; for he feared to dwell in Zoar; and he dwelt in a cave, he and his two daughters."—Gen. 19: 30. From an engraving made by Merian in the Seventeenth century.

MEMORIAL SERVICES TO BE HELD IN BIRMINGHAM

Birmingham, Ala.—Legionnaires over Alabama are now making their plans to attend the greatest convention in the history of the department that opens in Birmingham, Monday, July 23, and continues for three days.

A tentative program of the convention was outlined by those high in the legion council meeting in Birmingham recently and a review of this outline indicates that there will not be an idle moment when the horde of World War heroes advance upon the Magic City.

A number of persons high in the national organization have been invited to attend and address the convention. Among them are John James Taylor, vice chairman of the Legislative committee of the National organization. In addition, Thomas M. Owen, Jr., of Montgomery, national historian of the legion will be on hand to greet his fellow Alabama Department members.

In addition to the outstanding national speakers, plans call for addresses by Mrs. William H. Beister, Jr., Philadelphia, National President of the Auxiliary, Mrs. Charles Miller, Little Rock, National Auxiliary Vice President, and Mrs. C. L. Salter, state department head of the Auxiliary.

Commander Abramson will also address the gathering and preside over the sessions and introduce such speakers as Col. Bibb Graves, governor-elect of Alabama; Maj. Frank Dixon, a member of the national legion committee to study veterans legislation and others high in legion affairs in the state.

In addition to the brilliant array of speakers, there are a number of gala entertainment features planned for the visitors. Col. Wm. S. Pritchard, head of the Jefferson County Legion Council and his aides have been working night and day on the arrangements for the convention and report satisfactory progress.

The airshow at the Municipal Airport Monday evening, July 23, will be the most outstanding event staged at any Legion convention in Alabama. A number of notables in the aviation world will be on hand and crack stunt teams from Pensacola, Montgomery, Ft. Benning and other naval stations have been invited to attend.

Addition to the airshow, which will be free to the public as well as to legion members and delegates, there will be the wrestling match at the Municipal Auditorium Monday night to which 1,000 or more registered delegates will be admitted free by displaying their official badges.

The Grand Ball will be held Tuesday evening at the Municipal Auditorium, scene of all the official convention sessions. This ball will be featured by the presence of a number of beautiful belles of Birmingham and Alabama on hand to glide the light fantastic with the boys who answered the call of their country in 1917 and 1918.

The grand ball will be led by Commander Abramson and Mrs. Salter and corresponding lesser officers in the department will be paired.

Preceding the grand ball there will be an old fiddlers convention with Luther Patrick, Birmingham attorney and popular radio favorite as the master of ceremonies.

There will also be a One-Won dance at the Tutwiler Hotel Monday evening to which only members of the club with certificates will be admitted.

There will also be a golf tournament, Wednesday afternoon and the Junior Baseball tournament, Tuesday and Wednesday afternoon.

The convention parade will be held Tuesday afternoon with Gen. J. C. Persons in the caddle at the head.

Legionnaires will also be given free swimming, tennis and golf privileges at all of the Birmingham Municipal parks and also those who display their badges will be given full privileges at the Central Y. M. C. A., located across the street from the Hotel Tutwiler, convention headquarters.

Special reunion, the Fidac luncheon the memorial services, flag retreat and the legislative banquet are just a few of the other features that will prevent the delegates and visitors to the Sixteenth Annual convention from spending an idle moment during their three days stay in Birmingham.

DEATH OF EUL RUFUS GENTRY

Mr. Eul Rufus Gentry, age 58 years, passed away at his home at Lawley last Saturday, June 30, 1934, about 5:30 o'clock. He had been in bad health for the past several years but was sick only a few hours when the death angel came.

He was kind to everyone and always greeted you with a warm welcome smile and an open heart. It was so sad to give him up here on earth, but not as sad as those that have no hope hereafter. He was prepared to meet God in peace.

The funeral was conducted by Rev. Sam Dunlap of Lawley on the following day in Rehobeth cemetery with Jones & Spigener in charge. Pallbearers were Howard Littlejohn, Thomas Jefferson, Vinson Kelly, Earbie Watson, Charlie Littlejohn, Heron Collins.

He leaves to mourn his loss one daughter, Miss Pearl Gentry, and six brothers, two sisters and a host of other relatives and friends. A great array of flowers bore testimony of esteem in which he was held. The funeral was attended by many of his sorrowing friends. He is gone but not forgotten.

Written by ones who loved him.—Mr. and Mrs. Earbie Watson.

A WEST CHILTON REPUBLICAN ADVISES ABOUT COUNTY POLITICS

The smoke of the battle in the recent primary has cleared away, and everything is so quiet. We say battle, it should never have been a battle, but only a family selection of standard bearers to meet the enemy and perpetuate the rule and doctrines of the Republican party. Of course, we all secured our choice or the choice of someone else.

Foes on the outside cannot injure us, but foes within can do us irreparable harm. Past experience justifies the statement. When those within knife the ticket as has been in the past that is he most serious injury of all.

We have among the defeated candidates some of the finest and most efficient men in the county. Their past record has proved them without a peer in the history of our county. Men of noble aspirations and unquestioned loyalty. Able young men of sterling worth, unselfishly anxious to serve their people. Can we forget them? No. We are proud of every one of them. Among them are some of the battle scarred veterans of former conflicts. On such men young and old rests the structure and hope of the Republican party in our county. No wonder we are proud of them. The question of temperance and prohibition is coming. We hope every nominee of our party stands strictly for temperance. Every one knows our present and two preceding probate judges are friends of temperance, and we do not want the standard lowered, not even a vote for beer or light wines. We older ones remember the open saloon. Conditions are bad enough now, without the saloon. So we oppose it to the last ditch. We cannot drink and destroy our way to prosperity.

A recent editorial in The Union-Banner said, "Some things Republicans do not want a voice in," No, thanks.—A Republican Voter.

COACHES TO BE JUDGED AT CENTURY OF PROGRESS

Detroit, Mich., July 9—Model Napoleonic coaches submitted by the American youths in the 1934 Fisher Body Craftsman's Guild competition will be judged in the General Motors Building at a Century of Progress Exposition, Chicago, beginning late this month, it is announced in the June issue of "The Guildsman" official magazine of the educational foundation.

The "Windy City" will be the Mecca of literally millions of persons in the next few months," the publication says. "Since the judging of the miniature Napoleonic coaches always has been of widespread interest, it finally was decided that in fairness to the public it should be held at the World's Fair, where many more would be able to witness it than would be possible otherwise."

"This decision does not affect the closing date. All models, to be considered for honors, must be shipped by their builders not later than midnight of Saturday, July 21, and we would like to caution entrants once again to determine the closing hour of their local express agencies."

Preliminary judging of models submitted by Canadian boys will be held simultaneously at the Royal York Hotel in Toronto, according to the magazine

"Arrangements have been concluded with the management of the hotel to throw open one of the rooms on the mezzanine floor so the public may have an opportunity of inspecting the handicraft of boys from all parts of the Dominion during the last 10 days of July, the period during which the judges will be at work," it states.

Fifty-one thousand dollars in university scholarships are being offered by the guild this year to the youths submitting the best coach models. There are six $5,000, six $2,000, six $1,000 and six $500 awards. Sixteen of them will go to the winners in the United States, and the remainder to those in Canada.

BAYER CO. REDUCES PRICES ON PRODUCT

A new schedule of prices for Bayer Aspirin tablets — the lowest in the history of the Bayer Company—went into effect yesterday in all Clanton drug stores.

The Bayer Company introduced Bayer Aspirin in this country 35 years ago. It has since become one of the most widely used of all drug products and the price reduction will mean a saving to millions of consumers.

Reduction Increased Sales

Last year the Bayer Company reduced the price of its 100-tablet package and, according to officials of the company, the distribution increased so definitely that it was decided to extend the lower price to include the dozen and two dozen packages and to again reduce the large family size. In announcing its new consumer price schedule, the Bayer Company issued the following statement:

"Bayer has always kept faith with its customers by giving them the finest, most uniform product that science can produce. Its decision to reduce prices is evidence of Bayer's desire to extend even further its service to its customers."

The new consumer prices of Bayer Aspirin are now effective in 60,000 drug stores throughout the United States.

The elderly man had returned to his native village after many years abroad. Suddenly he stopped in the street, and laid his hand on the head of a small boy who was just passing.

"Ah! a new face," he said.

"No, sir, it isn't," was the prompt reply. "It's just been washed—that's all."

Democrats Plan To Safeguard Primary

Law Will Be Proposed To Require Voters to Tell Party When Registering

(By Atticus Mullin in Mont. Advertiser)

A method by which Democrats will vote in Democratic primaries and Republicans in Republican primaries will be presented to the legislature next January in the form of a bill further regulating the primary system of the State.

The bill is now being worked out and will probably be discussed by the new Alabama Democratic Executive Committee when it meets early in January next yead prior to the convention of the legislature.

The system that will be proposed in Alabama is modeled along the lines of the system in vogue in several States and provides for registration prior to a primary wherein a voter will have to say whether he or she will take part in the Democratic primary or in the Republican primary. If the voter desires to take part in the Democratic primary, the voter will so declare in the regisration and cannot vote in a primary of any other party in the same year.

To Correct Old Abuse

The purpose of the measure is to have a declaration beforehand from voters as to their party preference and inclinations. This will prevent a recurrence of what has happened in many Alabama Democratic primaries wherein Republicans have gone into the primaries holding the balance of power as between Democratic candidates and by their combined vote have nominated a Democrat for public office in a Democratic primary.

There are approximately 45,000 Republicans normally in Alabama. There have been times when the Republican vote exceeded this figure but certainly there are not more than 50,000 regular Republicans in Alabama. In many past campaigns these Republicans have gone into Democratic primaries by approximately 70 per cent and they usually vote as a unit and determine the results in a race between Democratic candidates for public office.

Little Extra Expense

The registration machinery which will be included in the bill is being worked out. It is regarded as an easy problem to solve with little if any additional expense to the state. Certain county officials may be selected to hold the registration. This, of course will not interfere with the present system of county registrars who determine whether applicants for the voting privileges are entitled to it.

It is stated that measure is not aimed to correct anything that might have happened in the recent Democratic primary. Republicans went into that primary as they have always done. But the idea is to correct a situation which has proved detrimental to the Democratic party in Alabama for several decades. Other States have solved the same problem as between the various parties.

And while the measure to require party preference through registration is being drawn, several bills will go into the legislative hopper designed to correct the abuses of the absentee voting system. It is said that Montgomery County is not the only guilty county insofar as crooked practices regarding the corraling of absentee votes are concerned. Several other counties had absentee ballot frauds in the last primary. Several of the bills will be designed to throw further safeguards around absentee voting while at least one bill will be introduced to abolish absentee voting altogather.

Considerable legislation will be considered at the next legislative session regarding Alabama's primary election laws. Sufficient experience has been had with these laws now to determine the weak spots and it is expected that the next legislature will plug them up.

FARMERS RECEIVE $50,000 RENT

It is stated by County Agent, J. W. Fant, this week that the cotton farmers of Chilton County have received to date $50,012.02 from the Agricultural Adjustment Administration as rent on land taken out of cotton production in 1934.

The county agent received 46 more checks for Chilton County farmers last Saturday. Notices have gone out to the farmers concerned asking them to call for these checks.

The farmers received payment on 2,051 contracts. There are 589 contracts on which no payments have been received. Most of these contracts were sent back to the county for some reason or other and the errors cleared up and returned to Washington for approval.

Mr. Fant expresses the hope that it will not be many days until all farmers under contract will have received their first payment on the rent.

Committeemen for the county started July 11 measuring the cotton land under contract. Both the land planted in cotton and that rented to the government are being measuered. The committeemen were all in Clanton on Monday, and reports given out by Mr. Fant indicate that most of the farmers have less cotton planted than they might have planted under their contracts. Very few farmers have over-planted their allotment under the contracts.

SINGING SCHOOL — LIBERTY HILL

All who are interested in music are invited to attend and especially we ask that the community cooperate in every way possible to make the school a success.—Marvin A. Lowery 2t

Permanent Relief Agencies Planned

Creation of permanent state organizations to carry out President Roosevelt's long range program to operate through county or local units, was proposed yesterday by Thad Holt, director of the Alabama Relief Administration, for the consideration of State leaders and the public.

The announcement was made, Mr. Holt said, with the express purpose of "working the Alabama Relief Administration out of a job," and as a suggestion for an intelligent and forword looking program which necessarily must be devised for the state.

The proposals calls for:

1. Creation of a State Public Welfare Department and a State Planning Board for Public Works, both to be "conceived on a sound basis and operating through local units."

2. Transfer of the State rural rehabilitation program, once soundly developed and underway, to a state-federal agricultural service as agencies.

3. Establishment of a state employment service to be operated as a division of a department of labor "together with some agency which can officially determine prevailing wage rates."

The proposed state department of Public Welfare, Mr. Holt explained, need be no more than an enlargement of authority and activities of the present nationally recognized State Child Welfare Department. It would include child care and family welfare service.

The proposed State Planning Board for Public Works, Mr. Holt said he believed, should inaugurate a long range program of public works. The relief administration, he said, was now pioneering in this effort and "our experience is showing that local authorities welcome a cooperative effort to make their own public works program more effective without any attempt to infringe upon their prerogatives."

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Robinson and Hilma Collins returned last week from a visit of several days with Mr. and Mrs. Horace Rutherford, at Tarpon Springs, Florida.

Alabama Legionnaires Looking Forward To Birmingham Convention Next Week

Birmingham, Ala., July 17.—Birmingham is draping itself in blue and gold as it prepares for the greatest invasion of the city by veterans since the World War. Legionnaires from the four corners of the state will advance on the Alabama Metropolis, on Sunday, July 22, for the three day session of the 16th annual convention of the Alabama Department of the American Legion, which officially opens Monday, July 23rd.

WM. S. PRITCHARD

Members of the Jefferson County Council of Legion Posts have been working for months to complete all arrangements for the convention and Col. Wm. S. Pritchard, general convention chairman, now announces that the Magic City is ready to entertain its visitors as they have never been entertained before.

Col Pritchard, head of the convention; Hugh Starnes, convention secretary; John P. Newsome, finance chairman; Miss Maude McLure, auxiliary convention chairman and numbers of other committee heads state that all of the details have been worked out for the convention which is expected to bring 5,000 visitors to Birmingham.

Each day as details of the various entertainments features are announced, it can be seen that the officials in charge have spared no expense to make the 16th annual convention the greatest in the history of the Alabama department.

The air show at the Municipal airport will headline the array of entertainment features. Airmen from over the nation will come to Birmingham to compete in this show which will be held Monday afternoon and to which the public as well as the legionnaires are invited to attend free of charge. Navy teams from Pensacola, Army planes from Montgomery, planes from Ft. Benning, Nashville, and Atlanta will also be on hand to add to the event which promises to be one of the most spectacular in the history of the city.

Another feature will be the formal guard mount to be engaged in by the 69th Coast Artillery and members of the Alabama National Guard at Woodrow Wilson Park, Tuesday afternoon. Many of the veterans have not seen this inspiring sight since their days in France and committee officials believe this will bring back many memories to the boys who served overseas in the years of 1917-1918.

The official parade featured by the appearance of the 69th Coast Artillery band, the drum and bugle corps, of Anniston, Ala., Post No. 26; the drum and bugle corps of Alabama Post No. 111; the Gen. Gorgas Post band; the Avondale Mills Band; the police band and numerous other music producing units from over the state. The parade will start from Woodrow Wilson Park at 4:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Tuesday evening will witness the timers fiddlers contest, followed by the grand ball at the municipal auditorium led by State Commander W. A. Abramson and State Auxiliary President, Mrs. C. L. Salter, Mrs. William Henry Biester, Jr., of Philadelphia, National Auxiliary President, will be in the reviewing staud and will acknowledge the leaders and their partners as they pass her in the grand march.

The memorial services at Legion Field, with George Lewis Bailes in charge, is a forerunner to the convention opening. This will be held at 7:30 p.m. Sunday. Convention headquarters of the Legion will be opened at the Tutwiler Hotel at noon on Sunday and the auxiliary members will open their headquarters in the Thomas Jefferson Hotel at 3:00 p.m. Sunday.

The first official business session will be held at the auditorium at 9:00 a.m. Monday with Commander Abramson calling the meeting to order. After the introduction of various guests and the welcoming addresses, Senator Hugo Black will address the gathering. Another feature of this session will be the introduction of Mrs. Chas. Miller, Little Rock, National Vice President of the Auxiliary.

John Thomas Taylor, vice chairman of the National Legislative Committee of the Legion, will be the principal speaker at the Tuesday morning session. Mrs. Biester is scheduled to arrive at noon Tuesday and will probably address the auxiliary in the afternoon.

The election of officers and selection of the 1935 meeting place will mark the concluding business session Wednesday morning.

Manager Bill Young of station WBRC plans to broadcast several of the convention sessions. His schedule calls for a broadcast of Senator Black's address around 10:30 a.m. Monday; broadcast of a portion of the old fiddlers convention and the grand march Tuesday afternoon and the result of the election of officers and selection of next year's meeting place, Wednesday morning.

In addition to the principal convention features there will be a 4 and 8, 8 and 40 banquets; the dance of the One-Won Club; the legislative and Unit dinners and the wrestling match at the municipal auditorium Monday afternoon to which official legion delegates will be admitted free of charge.

Athletic contests will also be held in conjunction with the convention. The American Legion Junior Baseball Tournament will be played at Howard College, Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons and a golf tournament for the legionnaires will be held Wednesday afternoon. There will also be a swimming meet for the youngsters at the Birmingham Athletic Club at 9:30 a.m. Wednesday and the city municipal pools and the Y. M. C. A. Facilities will be available during the three days by all registered delegates.

TWO BALL GAMES FOR THURSDAY

Thursday afternoon (today) the Clanton baseball club plays the Plantersville team here on the local field. This club has already beaten Clanton one game this year, and our boys are out for sweet revenge. This will be a good game—one of the best of the season. This game will begin at 2:30 o'clock.

Immediately after the Clanton and Plantersville game is over, the team of the Clanton Fire Department will play the Alabama Power Company team, made up of Power Company men from Lay Dam and Mitchell Dam.

Come at 2:30 and see these two games. There should be lots of good baseball, and loads of fun.

Sale Of Progress At Local Store Begins

Friday Morning Set As Opening of Big Sales Event At The Leader

Mr. Maurice Lande, proprietor of The Leader, popular and widely patronized dry goods store, in Clanton, announces an event that will impress the people of this territory more than anything of the kind in many years.

He calls it "The Sale of Progress," the opening date of which is set for Friday of this week. It appears from the manner in which Mr. Lande has prepared for this occasion that it is more than just a mere sale. It is something that marks a very definite and important step in the progress of a servicable institution, and is in fact, real news to the thousands of people whom The Leader is proud to have numbered in its list of friends and customers.

In conveying to our readers the full story of what this occasion means, we choose to use the following words of Mr. Lande:

"From a meager beginning in October, 1919, we started this store with a small stock of dry goods and notions.

"This business has steadily grown until today our stock is one of the largest ever assembled in Clanton. The growth of this business has been made possible not by the management and its sales force, but by the hundreds of its loyal customers who have shown their faith and confidence in the policies of this organization and the quality of its merchandise handled.

"For several years our sales have been offered in the face of declining market. Today all products are advancing in prices and we now have on hand an enormous stock of new merchandise bought on the bottom of the market. This merchandise is steadily advancing in price.

MR. M. LANDE

"In announcing this Sale of Progress, we feel that you will really appreciate the bargain opportunities we are offering.

"An urgent invitation is extended everyone to take advantage of this sale for we honestly believe merchandise is lower in price in this sale than you'll have an opportunity to buy again.

"We are especially anxious to call your attention to our different departments, and to inform you of the efforts made by us to take care of the needs of our customers for this 'Sale of Progress.'

"Merchandising today is so revolutionized compared to old methods that a merchant without connections and consolidated buying power in quantity is handicapped in pricing his goods. Through our association with other large retailers, we are able to make advantageous purchases that we pass on to our customers.

"Make up your mind now to attend this sale. You owe it to yourself and to your family to make your needed purchases at prices that will lighten the load of obligations. And we, too, want you to visit our new remodeled store and see the many changes that have been made as well as to gather new ideas, new inspirations, a new feeling of confidence in the future and to acquire a more intimate knowledge of what is going on in our store.

"To mention all the many bargains you'll find in our store during this Sale of Progress would be impossible, so we extend to you a hearty welcome to visit us and see the real values that await you."

County Picnic Put Off To Future Date

Fant To Announce Date When Big Speakers Can Attend

County Agent, J. W. Fant, advises that it has been necessary to postpone the date of the county-wide picnic. Plans are going forward as rapidly as possible, and the exact date will be announced in the near future.

Mr. Fant is making every effort possible to arrange a program that will fully entertain the large crowds that are expected to attend the picnic. A number of speakers and entertainers of note have already been secured.

Dr. L. N. Duncan, of Auburn, director of the Extension Service in Alabama, will appear on the program for an address.

Preacher Salser, the comedy policeman, of Birmingham, will be here again with a fresh full supply of wit and fun. He has been the high light of former picnics, and everybody will be glad to know he is to return this year.

Another entertainer who stands at the head of the list in Alabama, is Luther Patrick, of radio fame. Mr. Patrick has consented to come to the picnic and help supply the fun mill. With Preacher Salser and Luther Patrick on the job, there can be no doubt about plenty of fun and entertainment.

"We want everybody to make their plans to attend the picnic," said Mr. Fant. "We intend to make this occasion equal to or better than former picnics, and we want everybody to be ready to enjoy it when the definite date is announced, which will be done just as soon as we can definitely settle the time when certain prominent leaders of the state can come and take part on the program."

SUPERINTENDENT KELLER VISITS IN OTHER STATES

Montgomery, Ala., July 14.—"From the standponit of organization, Alabama has reason to take much pride in her educational system," said J. A. Keller, state superintendent of education-elect, when interviewed in Andalusia Saturday just before leaving for his vacation on the Florida coast. "Alabama, for example, is not handicapped by the district system," explained Mr. Keller, "as are certain other states, Indiana for instance. In such states there are hundreds of administrative units instead of the 112 city and county units which we have in Alabama."

Mr. Keller in company with four other school officials returned to Alabama on Wednesday of the past week after a tour of eight southern states, including North Carolina, Virginia, Maryland, West Virginia, Ohio, Kentucky, Tennessee and Indiana. Accompanying Mr. Keller on the visit to other states were H. G. Dowling and Frank L. Grove, president and secretary respectively of the Alabama Education Association, and E. L. Morphet and John W. Crump, staff members of the state department of education.

Mr. Keller stated that at least three distinct trends in administration of public education were evident in these states: namely, the financial support from state and county funds necessary to maintain a term of eight and nine months for all the children of the state, rural as well as urban; second, an increased emphasis upon the elementary schools resulting in improved facilities for children in the lower grades; third, the development of larger units of administration, such as the county, with the elimination of the district and the small urban systems. Mr. Keller's group also gave particular attention to the organization, the personnel, and the costs of the several state departments of education visited.

While in Kentucky and Tennessee, Mr. Keller explained, special attention was given by the members of his party to the studies made by educational commissions in those two commonwealths. Kentucky's study was completed last year and its recommendations embodied in legislation effected during this legislative session just ended. The Tennessee commission is now at work preparing its final report and recommendations for the legislature which convenes next January.

President Dowling, of the Alabama Education Association, reports a marked increase in professional organizations among the teachers of the eight states visited. The bitter experinecs of the past few years, Mr. Dowling said, have served to unify the various types of teachers into a militant body that is outspoken in its determination to recover the opportunities lost to the children of the country since the onset of the depression.

Peter Williams, colored, world war veteran, died Tuesday afternoon in veterans hospital at Tuskegee, where he had been for treatment the past month. His body was shipped to Clanton Wednesday for burial.

Peter was well-known about Clanton, where he had the confidence of many friends, both white and colored.

He was born in Jacksonville, Fla. He came here during the construction of Lay Dam, where he was employed as a cook in the camp of McArthur Brithers. He married Lula Monroe, and settled permanently in Clanton.

When the World War came on he volunteered his services, and spent close to two years with the A. E. F. in France. At the end of the war he returned to Clanton where he has lived since.

KILLINGSWORTH REUNION

An event of considerable interest of last Saturday was the reunion of the descendants of Peyton, Lyle, Felix and James (Jim) Killingsworth, held in the oak grove at the home of Mr. Jim Killingsworth, near Calera, who is one of the grandsons of Lyle Killingsworth. There were approximately 125 children grandchildren and great grandchildren present. The greatest number present were descendants of John Killingsworth oldest son of Lyle K. A goodly number came from Birmingham, Montevallo, Calera, Thorsby, Jemison and Lomax. Many were unable to attend the reunion because of age, distance and illness.

Everyone enjoyed a bountiful dinner spread on tables under the shady oak trees. Mrs. Nannie Williams, lovely daughter of Mr. Jim Killingsworth, assisted by her two sisters, Mildred and Frances, served the lemonade. The day was made more pleasant by music furnished by friends who were skillful players upon the violin, guitars and mandolins. The reunion was the first one held in 20 years. It was agreed upon that the reunion be an anual event to be held the 2nd Saturday of July each year at the same place held this year, unless otherwise notified.

REFUGE NEWS

Our Sunday school was very well attended Sunday, although there was room for more. We also had a good B. Y. P. U. Sunday night. The crowd was not as large as it should have been or as it could have been, but we had some real discussions. We realize that there is lots of sickness in this community. There is some that are providentially hindered and cannot come, but there are some that are only careless, seeking pleasure and finding none. We remember God promises eternal peace and happiness while the devil only promises eternal punishment. So let's try to do what God wants us to do and think more seriously about our life hereafter.

As our revival begins next Sunday let us as God would have us to, pray that this will be a great revival. Everybody is cordially invited both day and night. Our pastor, Rev. M. Lockhart, will do the preaching. We hope that those that are now sick will soon be able to be with us again.

Miss Glennie Mahan and Mr. R. J. Edge of Montgomery spent Sunday with home folks, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Mahan and family.

DR. HINKLE WRITES

To the Voters of Chilton County:

Information has reached me that it is being rumored over the county that I will not support the full Democratic ticket in the general election in November. Anyone circulating this report is doing so without my knowlege or permission.

Shortly after the first primary I stated positively in my letter to the voters in the May 17 issue of the Chilton County News that I would whole-heartedly lend my support for a Democratic victory in November.

I still believe the best thing for Chilton County will be the election of every man on the Democratic ticket, thus joining hands with the National Democratic Administration in its efforts to restore prosperity in this country.

Following is my former letter:

"I am profoundly greatful to my friends throughout the county who gave me such a strong vote of confidence. The count of the county Democratic committee gives me 936 votes. My campaign was carried on in the open, I spoke the truth at all times on every issue. I had nothing to say against my opponent.

"The first issue in this campaign is the good name of our county and state. I am a Democrat and believe in a majority rule, so each and every candidate may expect my vote in the Democratic election in November.—P. T. Hinkle.

Miss Joyce Lohman, of Cleveland, Ohio, spent Thursday night and Friday of last week with Rev. and Mrs. L. L. Stanley, and Saturday went to East View to help in summer service work.

Mrs. R. L. Primm was a Sunday visitor in the home of Mrs. Martha Primm, who has been ill for the past few days.

A. B. MANNING WRITES

Editor Union-Banner:

Well it won't be long before election day. Some that I voted for in the primary were defeated. In the fall I aim to vote for all of the elected candidates in the Republican party. And I ask all Republicans to do the same, and all Democrats that wish to vote for us.

Don't forget Hughes for Sheriff. In some ways the sheriff is the most important officer in the county. He is the man that keeps the peace. I have known Hughes all his life. He is a man that will treat a man like he would like to be treated. I am glad to learn that the editor will support all the ticket.—A. B. Manning, Thorsby, Route 1.

Taylor Brothers Enter Prattville

Buy Out Nettles Grocery, Will Re-Model and Open for Business Saturday of this Week

An important business transaction was made last week when Taylor Brothers, wholesale grocers, of Clanton, bought out the Nettles Grocery Store at Prattville.

Confirming this report Tuesday, Mr. Roland W. Taylor said: "We are gratified at the opportunity of entering the retail grocery field at Prattville. This week we are engaged in completely remodeling and improving the store formerly occupied by Nettles, and we will on next Saturday open the Prattville Cash Store for business.

"Mr. J. A. Hunt, former manager of Nettles, will remain with us in the management of our store. We expect to make our business in Prattville the most attractive and serviceable place in the city. We appreciate the cordial welcome that has been extended us by the people of Prattville, and we are determined that they shall have from our organization there every courtesy and every service they may expect."

The Prattville Cash Store is the twelfth unit in the Taylor chain of grocery stores. From a modest beginning a few years back the Taylor organization has progressed steadily into its present position of one of the most important grocery distributing systems in this section of Alabama.

When asked how he accounted for the phenomenal growth of his business organization, Mr. Taylor said: "We have found that success, like money, does not grow on trees. Neither can you pick it up out of pig tracks. Our most gratifying success has been attained by hard work. We set out not alone to sell people groceries, but to give them the kind of service they have a right to expect. We let people know by our actions that we are with them and for them. When we go into a community, we go there to work with them, to serve them, to live with them and to die with them. It has meant our success, and we are proud of it and thankful for it."

Mr. Taylor invites all of his Chilton County friends who can to attend the opening of Prattville Cash Store next Saturday. There will be many interesting demonstrations, and refreshments for all.

The many friends of Mr. Roland W. Taylor are glad to see him at his work again, after being under treatment of Dr. Fred Wilkerson, in Montgomery, for several days.

For several weeks Mr. Bean has been at Auburn, taking a course of study.

The many friends of Mr. Bean will be glad to know that he is to manage the Thorsby store. Concerning the employment of Mr. Bean, Mr. Roland W. Taylor, one of the owners of the Taylor chain, said: "In line with our policy to place the very best available men in charge of our stores, we are delighted to announce the placing of Mr. Wiley Bean at the head of the Thorsby Cash Store.

"Mr. Bean is widely known, is a fine business man, and a man in whom the public has already learned they can place the utmost confidence. To our friends and customers in the Thorsby territory we commend Mr. Bean, knowing that he will fully carry out with you our policy of rendering the very best possible service in filling your every need and desire."

Mr. Edwards, former manager at Thorsby Cash Store, will be transferred to another location in the Taylor chain, it was stated.

May Sell Some Cotton Tax-Free

Each farmer will make application and receive tax-exempt certificate to sell a certain amount of cotton tax free. If he exceeds this allotment, he will be required to pay fifty per cent of the value of the cotton as a federal tax.

Farmers who fail to sign contracts will receive allotment on the same basis of those who did sign contracts. The difference is that those who failed to sign contracts will receive no rental and parity payments.

County Agent Fant announces the appointment of Chester Wingard, son of Mr. D. A. Wingard, of Clanton, as special assistant to the county agent to help with the administration of the Bankhead Cotton Act. He will also have other duties in connection with measuring the land under contract.

JEMISON BOY ELECTED PRESID'NT OF ALABAMA FUTURE FARMERS

At the annual F.F.A. meeting at Auburn on July 12-14, Ernie Lee Robinson, a student of the Jemison High school was elected state president of the Alabama Future Farmers of America. With his election as president of the state association, Ernie Lee was conferred the highest honor that can be given an F. F. A. student This association has a membership of 2,000 boys.

There were 750 students in attendance at the annual convention. Dr. L. N. Duncan, in addressing the F. F. A. students said in substance, that Auburn looks upon this organization with the keenest interest, for out of it will come Alabama's future agricultural leaders both in the services of the state and as leaders in their respective farming communities.

Mr. R. E. Cammack, state supervisor of agricultural Education and state F.F.A. advisor was enthusiastic over the growth and development of the state F. F. A. and looks forward with optimism to the future of the association.

It was a distinct honor to Chilton County to have a boy selected as president. Ernie Lee Robinson, in addressing the body, outlined some of the objectives of the association for the ensuing year, and the members feel that they have a capable and determined leader.

Clifford Manning, another Chilton County boy, of Isabella High School, was state reporter this past year and served this position with merit and credit to his school and the state association.

A complete list of the state officers for 1934-35 are: Ernie Lee Robinson, president; Enis Young, Mt. Hope, vice president; J. P. Dodd, Walnut Grove, secretary; Seales Menefee, Ramer, treasurer; Sammy Pate, Columbiana, reporter.

Chicago's New Fair From the Air

This is A Century of Progress exposition as the airman sees it, looking south from one of the Sky Ride towers. At the upper right is the Street of Villages which offers visitors a "tour of the world" in one day.

Progress

From a meager beginning in October 1919 we started this store with a small stock of dry goods and notions.

This business has steadily grown until today our stock is one of the largest ever assembled in Clanton. The growth of this business has been made possible not by the management and it sales-force, but by the hundreds of its loyal customers who have shown their faith and confidence in the policies of this organization and the quality of its merchandise handled.

For several years our sales have been offered in the face of declining market. Today all products are advancing in prices and we now have on hand an enormous stock of new marchandise bought on the bottom of the market. This merchandise is steadily advancing in price.

In announcing this Sale of Progress we feel that you will really appreciate the bargain opportunities we are offering.

An urgent invitation is extended everyone to take advantage of this sale for we honestly believe merchandise is lower in price in this sale than you'll have an opportunity to buy again.

We are especially anxious to call your attention to our different departments, and to inform you of the efforts made by us to take care of the needs of our customers for this "Sale of Progress."

Merchandising today is so revolutionized compared to old methods that a merchant without connections and consolidated buying power in quantity purchases is handicaped in pricing his goods Through our association with other large retailers we are able to make advantageous purchases that we pass on to our customers.

We wish to describe some of our departments helped by this buying:

Make up your mind now to attend this sale. You owe it to yourself and to your family to make your needed purchases at prices that will lighten the load of obligations. And we, too, want you to visit our new remodeled store and see the many changes that have been made as well as to gather new ideas, new inspiration, a new feeling of confidence in the future and to acquire a more intimate knowledge of what is going on in our store.

To Mention All the Many Bargains You'll Find in Our Store During This Sale of Progress Would be Impossible, so We Extend to You a Hearty Welcome to Visit Us and See the Real values That Await You.

Men's Clothing

In paying our clothing department a visit we assure you that every suit shown you will be of the newest fabrics and latest styles. We make no "wild claims." If you are tired of "wild claims" you will be glad to seek a pleasant repose in a clothing department where the wilder claims come from the customers and not from our salesman.

SHOES

A gain of more than 1,000,000 pairs of shoes shipped for the first five months of 1934 as compared with the same period last year was announced recently in a letter from Mr. Rand, president of Roberts, Johnson & Rand Shoe Co., of St. Louis to the Compan's customers. This increase was shown in the face of almost half of the Company's nineteen plants being on a strike during the month of May.

Commenting on the figures released by Secretary of Labor Perkins showing an average increase of 26.2 per cent in factory wages over a year ago.

With a mere handful of shoes our Dept. was opened in October, 1919. Today we believe that our stock of men's women's and children's shoes, every pair all leather and purchased from one of the world's largest manufacturers, International Shoe Co., and shipped us through the Roberts, Johnson & Rand Branch—this stock we believe to be as complete as any to be found in Central Alabama. To say that we appreciate the faith shown in the style, quality, and prices of our shoes by the public, but half expresses our satisfaction and appreciation.

To those who have never worn our shoes we insist that you ask a neighbor or a friend as to their quality and we will rest the growth and success of this department upon the verdict of our past customers.

Put your foot down in smart fashion —wear Star Brand Shoes! They'll take you everywhere, see you through a busy day and play with you at night.

They are exclusively Star Brand Shoes and very moderate in prices.

Ladies' Apparel

In the first sultry days of July there is a desire to discard the heavy Spring wardrobe and become interested in the new Summer (hot Weather) fashions.

During the last few weeks we have noticed a keener interest in the new Summer fashions than for several seasons, and our buyer, with the assistance of our New York buyer, placed more stress on our Summer selections than ever before.

There is a distinction in new fabrics and patterns that carries that deep, cool feeling most appreciated in those hot days of July and August. These Summer frocks, known as 'Nellie Don," designed by Mrs. Donnally (recently becoming the wife of Senator Reed of Missouri) and her slogan is "Just try one on."

The Leader has a delightful collection to suit your particular style, and pocketbook.

COTTON STILL SELLING WELL

Eyelet Batiste Frocks in Jacket Styles Popular

We mention here an article of Market news that may be of interest to our 'ady customers.

Cottons, which have been so successful this season in dresses for all occasions, are expected by retail buyers to continue to sell during the next few weeks of the hot weather.

Women have become so accustomed to the comfort, smartness and laundering qualities of cottons, that they will not want to discard them until the weather turns somewhat cooler, one buyer pointed out.

Eyelet batiste frocks in jacket styles are still selling well, particularly in white, navy and brown. Linen, seersuckers and ginghams are in demand for daytime wear. Dotted Swiss and voile in darker tones are holding up for street and afternoon wear.

Formals of organdie, net, lace and mousseline de soie are featured in pastel shades. Some models have jackets of matching or contrasting shades.

Shorts for sports have carried through the summer just as they were expected, and will no doubt continue during the hot weather. Blouses and skirts to match are made of gingham, linen, pique, seersucker and broadcloth in stripes, checks and plaids.

Ten Commandments Obtained By The Sales Force From Customers

1. No matter how hard up the husbands may be, most housewives have a lot of spending money in their pocketbooks.

2. In selling most articles, a minute of demonstration is better than a quarter-hour of cajolery.

3. Few women can appraise any article without feeling and stroking it.

4. In spite of the lures of the stylists, most people remain chiefly interested in only six things—Hunger, Thirst, Sex, Money, 'Shelter and Death."

5. A man customer never grows up, and will spend twice as much time choosing a trout fly as stair carpet or refrigerator.

6. People are steadfastly unwilling to skimp on the things they buy for their own children.

7. The great art in pricing is credibility; most people are just as much afraid of a price that looks too low as of one that looks too high.

8. No sales-talk, no matter how lavish, will cause people to buy what they don't want.

9. All women long to be beautiful and are eternally credulous about anything that holds out this hope.

10. Unless a store can satisfy most of its customers whenever they call, it converts them not merely into absentees, but into sharp tongued critics and destroyers.

Maybe the government ought to employ snoopers to see if the naughty Republicans have a certain "brain" group in mind when they talk of reviving the anti-trust laws.

The only person who has a right to be an anarchist is a woman who has to work over a hot stove all day, week after week, year after year, while her husband loafs around talking politics.

A local woman says that the hog corn program will start at their house as soon as the roasting ears are a little cheaper.

You frequently hear it said that "He's a man of few words," suggests the Kansas City Kansan, but did you ever hear the same expression refer to a woman? Wel, yes, we have heard of women of only a few words, but it was immediately added that their turnover was terrific.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS
(By Frank P. Litschert

Two speeches of more than ordinary importance delivered over the radio during the past several days, give rise to the belief that the coming campaign will be one of more than usual interest. One of these addresses by Chairman Henry P. Fletcher, of the Republican National Committee, accepted the New Deal and foreshadowed an intensive campaign on the subject during the summer and fall by the Idaho senator.

In accepting the gage thrown down by the so-called Brain Trust, Mr. Fletcher said:

"The New Deal is now generously heaping invective upon everything which went before the advent of the new dispensation on March 4, 1933, and we are all told now that the principles of government which made our great progress and prosperity possible are no longer worth while. We believe that those principles are worth while and that the injustices and inequalities which have developed can be cured and corrected without twisting and deforming our American institutions. We do not want to see these alphabetical bureaucratic agencies become permanent fixtures in our national political life. If the next Congress is not more self-respecting and conscious of its duties than the last they may easily become permanent. The Republican party accepts the issue of the New Deal. It will seek to return to Congress enough members to oppose effectively these innovations. We believe we will be successful in this."

All of which indicates that the campaign will soon be on in full force and there will be no mincing of words or beclouding of issues. Which is as it should be.

In his address on the night of July 4th, Senator Borah in his inmitable way stood spokesman for our constitutional government and paid his respects in no uncertain terms to the growth of bureaucracy in America. He called attention to the fact that a complete dictatorship is not necessary for the taking away of human rights. Now a democracy this can easiest be done by a bureaucracy which he said, "is that form of government which steals away a man's rights in the name of public interest and taxes him to death in the name of recovery.' Continuing the Senator said: "Of all forms of government which has ever been permitted to torture the human family, the most devasting to human happiness, and the most destructive of human values is a bureaucracy. It has destroyed every civilization upon which it has fastened its lecherous grip."

Referring to the recent fight made by the newspapers of the country to preserve the freedom of the press from what they termed the dangers of suppression under the newspaper code offered them, Senator Borah declared that while a free press is essential to a free government, "the government has just as much right to say there are too many newspapers as to say there is too much cotton being grown." He continued: "It has as much right to reduce the size of the newspapers and turn the printers on the street as it has to force the reduction of cotton and turn the share croppers on to the highways. The government has as much right to say under the Constitution that the great newspapers of the country should be limited in circulation and curtailed in issue as it has by law to curtail the acreage of our wheat fields. * * * If the government can take away the right to grow cotton and force the grower to plant according to some bureau's judgment and thereby force hundreds to the point of starvation, it is only a question of time, and it has always been so, until this creeping paralysis of bureaucracy benumbs the hand of the editor."

Senator Borah in conclusion announced his intention of "taking these matters to the people of the country" during the summer and fall. Yes, this sure does promise to be an interesting "off year" campaign.

WARNING TO REPUBLICANS

Something new in the annals of the Republican party in Chilton County happened Tuesday of this week. A meeting of Republican voters, called to be at the courthouse, was transferred to the private offices of Reynolds and Reynolds, attorneys, where only a hand-picked few were permitted to sit in on the deliberations.

Following is the call that was sent out to certain Republicans in different beats of the county inviting them to the meeting:

"At the request of many Republican voters and supporters of Judge Reynolds, we are requesting you to meet at the courthouse in Clanton Tuesday, July 17, at 2 o'clock, p.m. The purpose of this conference is to discuss the political situation and the best interests of the people of the county."

The following names were signed to the above call: J. L. Abbott, J. J. Johnson, W. J. Moates, W. M. Benson.

It is of particular interest and significance to Republicans that the meeting was called to be at the court house, but was held at a private law office. Accurate details of what was done and said at the meeting are not available.

Some life-long Republicans and supporters of Judge Reynolds, who sought to attend the meeting were turned away from the door because they did not possess a card of admittance. That is a history making event in the annals of the Republican party of Chilton County, which has always stood for and advocated and practiced the policy of open meetings concerning public questions, and stoutly denounced the practice of holding secret sessions of a select few behind closed doors.

It has been learned on good authority that the secret meeting planned to organize and send out cards over the county, offering the people an opportunity to sign the card and accept membership in the "League for Better Government." The pledge to be signed is as follows: "In consideration of the privileges extended and the benefits to me, I hereby accept membership in the League for Better Government, and pledge myself to uphold by ballot or other honorable means the principles for which the League stands."

It is not yet revealed what privileges will be extended by the League, nor what benefits will be derived by those who sign. Neither is it revealed what are the principles for which the League stands.

Apparently, it is the purpose of those behind the proposed movement to solicit the signatures of Republican voters, for a purpose which is not yet made public, and for all we know, may not be made public for some time to come.

In view of the unusual circumstances and the peculiar methods of the procedure, it is thought wise to warn Republican voters of Chilton to go slow in signing for membership in "The League for Better Government." The proposition is too indefinite to warrant the enlistment of Republicans who believe in our time-honored principle of doing things openly and above-board.

It appears that the Republicans of Chilton County have already had ample opportunity to express themselves in the selection of candidates for the county offices. We have had two primaries for that purpose. There is something specious about the purposes of those who purport, at this late date, to be seeking to find out what the people of the county want to do about candidates.

If you want to know what the people want done, you only have to look back to the results of the recent primaries. Both the Republican and Democratic parties nominated their candidates by majority votes. Now, there is but one thing in front of us, and that is perfectly clear:

The people of Chilton County shall, in November, have the privilege of electing their county officials from among those who were nominated by the two parties in the primaries. Those who want to vote for Democrats will be permitted to do so. Likewise, those who want to vote for Republicans will be permitted to do so.

Any political move at this time can have but one purpose, to seek to accomplish the ultimate election of either Democrats or Republicans in November.

As stated before, The Union-Banner is now and will continue to support the Republican nominees, and we hope that the Republicans of the county at large will remain true to the expressed desire of the majority of the party. The Republican ticket needs and wants the support of every Republican. We urge Republicans of the county to go slow and find out what it means before you sign up for membership in any kind of a new and untried secret scheme.

MAN IN THE MOON

Looks Over All—Overlooks None

Faith of Our Fathers

Much has been said and written of late in regard to our national officials disregarding the Constitution of the United States, practically if not theoretically. Some say that times have changed, and that the Constitution belongs to ox-cart days. Let's compare a bit. We have a boy, growing up under the watchful care of his parents. They have watched his every move, and he has heeded their advice since infancy. He has, therefore, stayed on the straight and narrow way, and has developed into a fine young man. Then, he begins to go places, get ideas that are new to him, of which he has never even dreamed. He comes to believe that his parents are old-fashioned—that they belong to the old school. He soon finds himself disregarding the early teachings of his parents. He can see no danger. He only sees what he thinks is something better for himself. He decides that his parents very probably mean well, but that times have changed, and that his parents have not changed with them. He decides to back his own judgment for a while. In nine cases out of ten, unless he is very careful, he winds up behind the bars—in trouble. Then he has plenty of time to think of "ma and pa," and lots of time to think over his own new ideas. He realizes that these new ideas have gotten him into all his troubles, whereas, as long as he listened to mother and dad everything went smoothly for him. Finally "ma and pa" come to see him and get him out of trouble, and, since he has had time to see the wisdom of their ways, more than apt, he will go back to those early teachings. He has learned his lesson. Now, the Constitution has been the guiding hand of this country since birth. By its tenets we have grown to be the richest and most powerful nation on the face of the earth. And now comes the talk of the "old fashioned" Constitution. We may discard our "ox-cart" Constitution, but if and when we do, we are as certainly headed for trouble as the boy who disregards the advice of his parents—and it won't be long in coming, either. Then, when it comes, if our officials are wise, they will lead us back to the Constitution to get us out of the trouble we are in by our new ideas, and will again let it be our guiding hand in directing our affairs. If they are not wise, they will be headstrong, and persist in following their own ideas to the everlasting destruction of our nation, our government, and our people. When our government was set up, it was the object of world-wide scorn. Happily, at that time, we had men at the head of affairs who were wise, and who had seen the new nation born of the blood of themselves and their relatives. They loved their country, and wanted to see it prosper, so they gave their best to it. They had no axes to grind. And their followers took the trouble to follow closely the rules set down by those first nation builders. When a question came up, they tried as best they could, to find just what consrtuction the Constitution made of the matter, and conformed with it rigidly. As a result, this country has prospered. The scoffers remained to wonder and to applaud the success of the new American republic. We have never once had cause to regret conformity with our great national table of laws, the Constitution. Then why discard it now? It has mothered a people and built the greatest nation in all the history of the world. The great document that has built the United States of America can most certainly preserve it. I believe that whatever America has lost, as a nation, has not been because we adhered to our Constitution, but that our loss has been in direct ratio to our gradual lack of adherence to it. As long as we stuck to the teaching, "America for Americans," as emphasized in the constitution, we commanded more and more respect from the nations of the world. Now, as they see us depart from the faith of our fathers, they, of course, rejoice, but at the same time they despise us for our weakening. Let us return once more to the sound doctrine of the founders of our country—let us form our national policies by the same rule of faith and practice that has made us a great nation, and we will remain great. In departing from it, we are leaving a proved course, to embark on unchartered seas, with the chances for survival against us.

Flies and More Flies

Some time ago, just about the time summer opened, Mr. Fant had an article in the county papers, which read something like this: "If at the beginning of spring, one pair of flies be hatched, and all their offspring be allowed to live, during the year this offspring would raise enough flies to allow eight to the square inch and cover the face of the earth to the depth of 47 feet." Having lots of time on my hands, and lots of nothing to do with it, I decided to figure this out and see just how many flies that would be. Well, here goes. You may check it, if you wish, and if you find it wrong, I will not be surprised in the least, but I think this is right. There are 218,096,860 square miles on the face of the earth. There are 4,014, 489,600 square inches in a square mile. Then there are 875,547,576,-262,656,000 square inches on the face of the earth. Multiplying this by 564, the number of inches in 47 feet, we have 493,808,833,012,-137,984,000 cubic inches on the face of the earth up to a depth of 47 feet. Allowing eight flies to the cubic inch, as Mr. Fant said, there would be 3,950,470,644,097,103,872,000 flies that one pair would be responsible for if none of their offspring were killed for one year. I got a fellow to read the number for me and here's what he said it was: "3 sextillion, 950 quintillion, 470 quadrillion, 644 trillion, 97 billion, 103 million, 872 thousand flies." And that's SOME flies, believe me. In that case I think there should be a "Swat-a-fly Week," or Andy might say, a "Swat-two-flies Week". If one pair can raise that many in a year, just think how many you could prevent by killing all you could find in a week.

The Road Hog

If you drive an automobile, you undoubtedly encounter some auto drivers who try to keep to the middle of the road. The common name for these is "road hogs," although, just after meeting one of them, it is very probable that you give him a different name from this, maybe an unprintable name. An authority on the subject says we should not be too hard on "road hogs," however. There are many kinds of road hogs, and just as many reasons which cause them to be such. There are some who are not the best of drivers, any way, and it just about takes all they can do to keep the old bus between the ditches, at best. He does extremely well to keep in the middle of the road—if he will just do this, then the better driver can know that he must move over, and does so. Then there are some who seem to think that both sides belong to them, and sometimes it seems they think both sides AND the middle are theirs. When you meet one of these, about all you can do is pull over as far as possible and pray for luck. We encounter drunken drivers, too, sometimes. Of course, no matter how careful you may be, your life is in his hands. But happily the laws are very strict on drunken drivers, so they are few and far between. Outside of the drunk driver, though, I believe the most contemptible road hog is the one who, while in full control of what sense he has, deliberately holds his car in the middle. He doesn't seem to care if he hits you or not. He is arrogant and overbearing. He is the only type that a uniform driver license law would not affect. He is usually a person who COULD be a good driver, if he would. A strict license law would take care of the novice, and the person who does not know the traffic laws; it would take care of the habitual drinker; but it never could handle the man who is a hog at heart and is determined to prove it on the road. Auto salesmen speak often of road tests for their cars. Why not have a drivers license law, with an examination which would contain actual tests of driving on the road, including road courtesy?

He's a Good Boy

"He's a good boy. He's my boy, and I've known him all my life. I ought to know. If I could just keep him out of bad company, he would never be in trouble." How many times have you heard these words from doting mothers and fathers? And the funny thing about it all is that every father and mother feels the same way. You can let a boy be as mean as he can; you can let him be in prison for a bad crime; you may let him be led to the chair for murder; yet, to mother or to dad he is yet a good boy at heart—a good boy who went wrong on account of bad company. I remember, not many years ago, the case of two boys who were arrested for stealing. I heard the parents of both these boys talking about the matter. Both had about the same to say—they both blamed the other boy's company for their son's plight. And, in a way, they were both right. I have an idea that either of these boys, alone, would have been a good boy; maybe neither of them would have done the deed they pled guilty to, if they had been by themselves. But, together—that was another story. Maybe each wanted to show that he was not afraid—boys hate to show up weak in the eyes of their comrades. The chance to show himself off was mutually recognized by each of them, and rather than show the white feather, they went through with the job, when, if either had been alone, he would have backed down. They are all good boys—and girls; and they are all bad. It all depends on whose boy or girl it is.

WHAT IT WILL COST

One of the questions which will frequently be asked about the so-called New Deal in the coming campaign is whether it is worth what it cost. There will of course be answers to the questioning varying with the political beliefs of those making the answers. One of the first things to determine, when launching on an inquiry of this kind, is just how much is the New Deal costing? Before we know whether it is worth what it costs we must know two things: first just what it has really accomplished of itself, and second, just what the cost has been. Laying aside such academic questions as what the cost may have been to our individual liberties, which is a matter for debate, we can at least ascertain something about the actual financial cost of the new deal.

Official figures indicate that the last fiscal year, which closed on June 30, was the most expensive one is the peacetime history of the United States. The estimated expenditures during this first fiscal year of the New Deal were $7,105,000,000 and the receipts from taxes and other revenues are estimated at $3,116,000,000. This leaves an estimated deficit of over four million dollars for one year! How far we have gone on the road toward government regulation and control of the individual and his business can be judged from the fact that there are a great many people still living who remember how much criticism there was of the first Congress that appropriated a billion dollars to run this government for a year. Some change in a few years!

But that is not quite all of it. Already we are looking forward to possible receipts and expenditures for the new fiscal year, on which we have just entered. In the fiscal year 1934-35, the Chicago Tribune estimates that the expenditures of the government under the New Deal will be $11,361,000,000, an increase of more than fifty per cent over the year just closed, which was the most extravagant in our peace-time history. The same newspaper estimates that the deficit of the new fiscal year will be nearly seven and a half milion dollars.

The official statement of the Treasury Department at Washington indicates that the public debt has now risen to the staggering total of more than twenty-seven billions and it is estimated that at the end of the present fiscal year, just now starting, the total debt will be thirty-four and a half billion dollars. The sum is so great that it almost staggers the imagination of the ordinary individual.

Now there is one fact which must not be lost sight of. This debt sooner or later must be paid. Uncle Sam will have to foot the bill for the experimentation of the Brain Trust professors. And Uncle Sam can only get his money from the people of the United States.

According to the Tribune, eight college professors are now busy mapping out new legislation to be passed by the next Congress. Others, it is said, will be sent to England to study that country's terrifically high income tax.

It will no longer be a question of soaking the rich. There are not so many rich as there once were, and those left have a way of avoiding paying more than they consider their share of the taxes of the nation or passing it on. The necessity for more money has now risen to the place where before long all of us, rich and humble alike, are going to have to "pay through the nose."

There may be still room for argument about how much or how little the New Deal itself has accomplished. There can no longer be any debate on how much or how little it is going to cost. The "how little" has been eliminated. We are up against the greatest debt burden Uncle Sam has ever known.

The president says it is a good thing to have brains in the government at Washington. We heartily agree with him and would go even a little further and say that we ought to be careful about the kind we have.

Webster's dictionary calls the troublecinch bug a "fetid hemipterous insect." If General Johnson were in charge of the insect regimenting division we'll bet he could think of something even worse than that.

WHEN THE PAPER DON'T COME

My father says the paper he reads isn't put up right.
He finds a lot of fault, he does, persuin' it all night.
He says there ain't a single thing in it worth while to read,
And that it doesn't print the kind of stuff the people need.
He tosses it aside and says its strictly on the bum—
But you ought to hear him holler when the paper doesn't come.

He reads about the weddin's and he snorts like all get out,
He reads the social doin's with a most derisive shout,
He says they make the paper for the women folks alone,
He'll read about the parties and he'll fume and fret and groan;
He says of information it doesn't have a crumb—
But you ought to hear him holler when the paper doesn't come.

He's always first to grab it and reads it plumb clean through,
He doesn't miss an item or a want ad—this is true.
He says they don't know what we want, the durn newspaper guys.
I am goin to take a day sometimes and go and put them wise;
Sometimes it seems as though they must be blind and deaf and dumb;
But you ought to hear him holler when the paper doesn't come.

UNCLE SAM SETS A POLE

This week a very reliable and highly respected Taney County farmer gave us the following information as to the way the New Deal government at Washington sets a telephone pole. He gave the pole to the government free of charge and being interested he watched the procedure.

A boss came along in a car, a truck brought 24 men. These 24 men cut the pole, peeled it and hauled it one mile to the place where it was to be set; they set the pole, these 24 men and the boss. Time consumed, one day of eight hours; pay $3.60 per day each for the men equals the neat little sum of $86.40. Pay of boss and car cost would easily make the cost of that pole to the taxpayers $100.00

If we figure the bosses super-bosses, district managers, state managers, Washington managers, supervisors, inspectors, paymasters, and professor-planners, the cost of that pole to the taxpayers would reach unknown figures. The reader's guess is as good as ours. We would figure it possibly ran well up to $1,000.

But this Taney County farmer can account for the more than $86.00 that pole cost the taxpayers after he had given the pole to to government. Any Taney County farmer would have taken that job for $5 and figured he was making good money, a lot more than in farming under the brain trust scheme.

ABOLISH UNEMPLOYMENT

The college boys who have converted our government into a laboratory and our citizens into experimental guinea pigs have a new and original theory for combating unemployment.

The theory, in brief, is that there are too many industries here. Therefore, in order to cut down unemployment, we will cut down the industries, at least we will not start any new ones.

You understand that, of course!

We admit that to us the idea seemed a little obscure at first, but the college boys explained it and no wit's so darned obscure that we can't see it at all.

This marvelous theory was developed by the college boys in the Department of Agriculture. It grew out of a proposal to create a business in the South which would have meant about $170,000,000 a year in new business to the country and consequently would in the mind of the layman, have put quite a few men to work.

But the college boys promptly saw that that wasn't the way it would work at all.

It would mean, they declare, that that $170,000,000 which it was proposed to spend in this country would not be spent abroad. This would cut down the income of the other countries by just that amount and the result would be that those other countries by just that amount and the result would be that those other countries couldn't spent that $170,000,000 here.

Now the college boys can carry their theory one step further. If, by creating a new industry in the South through utilization of slash pine in making paper base stocks, we would increase unemployment, the logical thing is to abolish all American industry and with it all unemployment.

These college boys of ours can't be beat.

The Story of the Bible Told in Pictures

Rebekah at the Well.—"And Abraham was old, and well stricken in age; and the Lord had blessed Abraham in all things." Abraham called his eldest servant and made him swear that he would not take a wife for Abraham's son, Isaac, from the daughters of the Canaanites. Abraham sent the servant into his own country and among his own kindred to seek a wife for his son, and the servant departed into Mesopotamia, unto the city of Nahor. "And he made his camels to kneel down without the city by a well of water. And he said, O Lord God, I stand here by the well of water; and the daughters of the men of the city come out to draw water: And let it come to pass, that the damsel to whom I shall say, Let down thy pitcher, I pray thee, that I may drink; and she shall say, Drink, and I will give thy camels drink also; let the same be she that thou has appointed for thy servant Isaac. And it came to pass that, behold, Rebekah came out, who was born to Bethuel, son of Milcah, the wife of Nahor, Abraham's brother, with her pitcher upon her shoulder."—Gen. 24: 11-15. And the sign was fulfilled as the servant had prayed it would occur. The Story of Rebekah is the first romance in the Bible. From an engraving made by Merian in the Seventeenth century.

GAME AND FISH NEWS

Montgomery, Ala., July 17.—When the Alabama hunter planks down his dollar for the new federal hunting stamp at his nearst postoffice, he will receive no ordinary carrier of mucilage.

Nearly twice the size of a special delivery stamp, the hunting stamp shows a waterfowl scene which is the work of J. N. "Ding" Darling, who was a nationally known cartoonist long before he became chief, a few months ago, of the Biological Survey, U. S. Department of Agriculture.

"No one, however," says Mr. Darling, "is under any obligation to kill a duck because he owns a federal hunting stamp, nor is there any rule to prevent a man who wants to help restore the migratory waterfowl from purchasing several of these duck-saving stamps. Every dollar will be devoted to the cause of conservation."

Authorized by the recent congress and to be issued shortly by the post office department, the new stamp will be on sale at postoffices in all county seats, in all towns with population of 2,500 or more, and in certain waterfowl centers. The sale of stamps will provide funds to help conserve ducks and geese and other migratory waterfowl by the establishment of sanctuaries.

Everyone over 16 years of age who hunts migratory waterfowl is required to have a federal hunting stamp in his possession, affixed to the regular state hunting license or to a special certificate furnished by the postmaster if a hunting license is not required. The distinctive qualities of the stamp, it is believed, will also stimulate its sale among stamp collectors as well as sportsmen and conservationists.

THE ANNUAL GATHERING AT AUBURN IS CHANGED

Auburn, Ala.—Due to extra work in measuring cotton acreage and making allotments under the Bankhead Act, Farmers' Week at the Alabama Polytechnic Institute has been postponed. It had been scheduled for July 31 through August 3. Dr. L. N. Duncan, director of the extension service, said today that the date of the meeting will be announced later.

The annual meetings of the Alabama Farm Bureau Federation and the Council of Home Demonstrtion Clubs have been postponed also.

GOOD MATTRESSES ARE MADE AT HOME

Auburn, Ala.—A comfortable bed is one of the most important human requirements, believes Miss Nell Pickens, extension specialist in home management at Auburn. Good and comfortable mattresses, she says, are fundamental and can be made in the home at a cost not exceeding $2.75 if home grown cotton is used.

Gins will prepare the cotton in long and thin sheets, making unnecessary the labrious task of handcarding. With an expenditure of $2.75 and by following a few simple directions, excellent mattresses may be made by farm women valued up to $12 to $18, said Miss Picknes.

Complying with wide-spread demand, Miss Pickens is publishing an illustrated circular on "Mattress Making" which is free.

POOR HANDLING OF EGGS COSTLY

Auburn, Ala.—A burden of $45,000,000 a year is paid by the American poultrymen because of improper methods of producing and handling eggs, according to extension service poultry specialists of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute.

This staggering loss can be greatly reduced by removing male birds from the flocks when not needed for breeding purposes, gathering the eggs more often, caring for them properly, and observing other methods of good flock management, they say.

Fertile eggs will start hatching when exposed to sufficient heat for a short time, but infertile eggs may be left in a temperature of 103 degrees Farenheit for 72 hours and still be good for food.

Vigorous males removed from the flock should be penned separately and saved for breeding purposes the next season. The other males should be disposed of, since they will eat more food than they are worth if kept over the non-breeding season.

In hot weather, eggs should be gathered twice a day in wire baskets and removed immediately to a cool cellar or room where the temperature is 68 degrees or less, and where there is a relatively high himidity. The eggs should then be spread on a table or wire screen to cool thoroughly before packed.

The use of good nesting material and proper sanitation around the hen houses will decrease the number of dirty eggs produced. Many good eggs are sold at low prices simply because they do not look fresh and clean.

At least 20 nests, 12 x 12 x 14 inches should be provided for each 100 hens. The nesting material should be changed frequently.

Middling 15.16 staple sold for 21 points or $1.05 per bale and middling 1 inch for 59 points or $2.95 per bale premium over middling 7-8 inch on the Central Markets, according to report of July 3 of the Division of Cotton Marketing of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, Atlanta, Georgia.

Because they are valuable for hay, grazing, and soil improvement, soybeans constitute one of the most important forage crops in Alabama.

ALA. FARMERS HAVE GOOD FOOD AND FEED CROPS

Alabama farmers are this year producing much larger food and feed crops than they did last year, according to the July 1 crop report issued by F. W. Gist, state and federal statistician.

"The weather of June was rather unfavorable for cotton but quite favorable to the growth of all food and feed stuff," Gist said.

Present indications are that farmers of the state will this year produce nearly 10,000,000 more bushels of corn than they did last year. The corn production is estimated at 46,279,000 bushels compared with 36,710,000 last year.

In the crop report Mr. Gist also estimates production of 63,000 bushels of wheat, 1,914,000 bushels of oats, 3,760,000 bushels of Irish potatoes, 9,240,000 sweet potatoes, 467,000 tons of hay. This is a big increase in each of these crops over last year.

The total production of apples is forecast at 562,000 bushels, peaches at 1,089,000 bushels and pears at 245,000 bushels. This is an increase in peaches and pears but a decrease in apples from last year.

BRIEF NEWS ITEMS

Hog prices at the seven principal markets in the middlewest increased more than 30 per cent during the month of June, it is reported by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. This is one of the largest percentage increases in price on record for a similar length of time.

In pecan groves of central Alabama the pecan weevil has been known to cause a loss of as high as 80 per cent of the entire crop of Schleys. This insect pest is regarded by entomologists as one of the most destructive pecan insects prevalent in northern and central Alabama.

Fostered by a grant from the FERA, the Tennessee Valley project of the government is now branching out into the intensive cultivation of sweet potatoes for glue-making purposes.

MORE ABOUT GINKGO BILOBA

Montgomery, Ala., July 17. — The prominence given the Ginkgo tree by the Alabama Commission of Forestry in its published statements of April and June has aroused much interest as evidenced by the number of inquiries being received at the office of the state forester. "The desire of so many people to be better informed on this remarkable tree is most gratifying," said Col. Page S. Bunker, Alabama State Forester. "As has been observed, the Ginkgo is a surviving relic of a group of plants that flourished in ancient geological periods, but which, with the exception of a single species, have entirely disappeared from the earth. The Ginkgo is sometimes referred to as a living fossil.

"There are two main groups of the flowering plans," pointed out Col. Bunker, "the Gymnosperms and the Angiosperms. The Yymnosperms comprise the plants of which the seed may be said to be naked; that is, not inclosed in a special chamber. The Angiosperms include those whose seed develop within a compartment known as the ovary. The Ginkgo belongs to the Gymnosperms. This group of plants has loosely been referred to as the conifers, but the latter term is best reserved for the true cone bearing plants such as the firs, pines and cypresses. Among the Gymnosperms the Ginkgo and its extinct near relatives are included by paleobotanists and taxodermists in the phylum Coniferophyta, order Ginkgoales, family Ginkgoaceae, the phylum being the largest group the members of which show definitely connected relationships. The earlier botanists placed this tree in the family Taxaceae. However, the inconsistency of this position was made evident in 1896 when Horase discovered motile antherozoids in the pollen-tube, an event in morphological investigations referred to as the most remarkable of the decade.

"The genus Ginkgo probably dates back to the Permian, and possibly somewhat earlier. It reached its highest development, however, during the Jurassic. Other genera of the Ginkgoales flourished both before and during these times. Of these the genus Baiera was perhaps the most prominent. This group was somewhat older than the Ginkgo and has long since disappeared. The genus Ginkgo persisted fairly plentifully as late as the Pleiocene, with a single species, Ginkgo biolba, continuing to the present time. Other species of the same genus such as G. digitata (Brongn.) Heer, G. obstrutschewi Seward and G. sibirica Heer, flourished in early periods.

"The present day Ginkgo was named Salisburia by Smith in 1797, Salisburya by Link in 1822 and Pterophyllus by Nelson in 1866. However, Linnaeus had adopted the name ginkgo for this genus in 1771, and according to the priority rules of botanical nomenclature this is the current name. Linnaeus also established the specific name for the single surviving species, the latter technically being known as Ginkgo biloba Linnaeus."

L. & N. News

Switching crews in the L. & N. yard at Radnor, Tenn., near Nashville, are daily doing exceptional work in putting freight trains through in record time, according to the L. & N. Employees' Magazine for July.

Under the speedier fast freight schedules established on the L. & N. June 1, a maximum time is allotted for yard movements and the Radnor men, it is stated, take great pride in doing their work in less than the specified time. The magazine describes the rapid handling of Nos. 57 and 73, fast freights from St. Louis and Cincinnati, which are re-iced, inspected, classified and consolidated at Radnor into one train for the South. Allowed one hour and 20 minutes to do this work, three Radnor yard crews do it every day in less than 60 minutes, it is stated.

The Louisville & Nashville Railroad ranked sixth among Class 1 roads in 1933 in employe safety. The L. & N.'s employe casualty rate, as quoted in the July magazine, was 4.98 injuries per million man-hours worked, a reduction of 85.09 per cent under 1923 injuries.

The air conditioning of some of its passenger train cars is announced by the Louisville & Nashville Railroad in July issue of its employees magazine. It is expected that by the middle of july the dining cars and club lounge cars on the Pan American will be air conditioned and cooled. Dining cars on other main line trains are being air conditioned at the L. & N.'s South Louisville Shops and will be placed in operation as soon as possible. Air conditioned sleepers are now in operation on a number of L. & N. main line trains.

The first prize in the Louisville & Nashville Railroad's terminal safety contest in 1933 went to St. Louis Terminals, for the fifth consecutive year, it is announced in the July issue of the employees' magazine. St. Louis yardmen are credited with 2,722 consecutive ways without a reportable injury.

Available reports of passenger business on the L. & N. for May, 1934 indicate that they will exceed revenues for May, 1933, by 17.5 per cent, according to the July L. & N. Employes' Magazine.

Reviewing the L. & N.'s experiences with the reduced fares since they were inaugurated in April, 1933, the magazine reveals that in the first 12 months under the lower fares the number of passengers increased 54.1 per cent. Revenues for the same period increased 1.4 per cent, climbing steadily from a more than 30 per cent decrease in March 1933 to a 54.7 per cent increase in March, 1934.

B'ham Balloon Races

All Alabama is invited to Birmingham, Saturday, July 28th, to see the start of the National Balloon Races for 1934, the most important lighter-than-air event in American aeronautics this year. Elaborate plans are under way to make the occasion interesting and entertaining to the vast crowds that are expected.

Many of the most important figures in flying will be in Birmingham for the races and a number of internationally known balloon men are entered for participation in the races. Two army balloons and a navy balloon will take part as well as a number of other well-known giant bags. The races are open to all registered balloon pilots in the country using bags up to 80,000 cubic feet capacity.

The contest will be for the Litchfield Trophy and $1,750 in cash prizes. In addition, the races serve as elimination matches for entry in the Gordon Bennett Cup races to start from Warsaw, Poland, September 20th. The three entries in the Birmingham race who make the best scores (the greatest number of miles from the starting point) will go to Poland as the United States team in that contest.

The Races will start at 9:30 p.m. from Legion Field, Birmingham's municipal stadium. This is the first time since the national races were started in 1909 that the start has been made at night. Two gigantic government searchlights will be on duty at the field to follow the courses of the giant bubbles as they leave the field and the field itself will be flooded with light from the batteries of flood lamps mounted along the sides of the stadium.

The races are being sponsored by The Birmingham Post and the proceeds from the sale of reserved tickets and boxes will go to the crippled children's clinic. This clinic is a charitable agency for the treatment of crippled children from all over Alabama who are unable to obtain proper treatment because of lack of funds.

Major Ray Cooper, general manager of the National Aeronautic Association, has been in Birmingham for several weeks making arrangements for the races. Cooperating with him are a dozen or more committees of the leading citizens of Birmingham who are preparing an all day program to precede the hour of the races and visitors are urged to come early and spend the week end in the city.

Thousands of miniature balloons will be given to the sponsor and the finder of the small balloons that cover the greatest distance before coming to earth.

The start of the big balloons from Legion Field will be one of the most thrilling and spectacular sights imaginable. The giant balloons will be inflated and leave the field in full sight of the crowds. Hundreds of members of the American Legion will assist in handling the starters, removing the sand bags and setting free the great bubbles which may travel, with the pilots and assistants, a thousand miles before coming down. It is hoped that some new world records may be established.

Mrs. Briggs Crumpton, Briggs Jr., and Pat Crumpton, of Greensboro, are spending this week with Dr. and Mrs. J. P. Crumpton in Clanton.

A birthday party was given in honor of Miss Lera Glenn Monday, July 2nd, at 8 p.m., at the home of Mr. Arthur Mims. The room was decorated with four o'clocks. There was music from the victrola. A guess cake was won by Mr. Henson Kelley. A racing vote on the ugliest boy was between Mr. Oliver Glenn and Mr. Maurice Gunlay. Mr. Oliver Glenn was elected for the ugliest boy. Mr. Gunlay said, "You didn't give me time to canvass or the Democrats would have won instead of the Republicans." Mr. Oliver Glenn and Mr. Henson Kelley cut and served the cake. Games were played and everyone reported a nice and delightful time.

The guests who were present are as follows: Mrs. W. O. Glenn, Misses Elsie, Lera and Helen Glenn, Gladys and Jewel Culver, Eva Kelley, Mrs. Bill Wise, Mrs. Arthur Mims; Messrs. It was a most charming and delightful setting, evoking the spirit of mirthfulness in every person present.

The guest list was as follows: Mr. and Mrs. Frank Callen, Mr. and Mrs. Grover Walker, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Page, Mr. and Mrs. Hosea Downs, Mr. and Mrs. J. Lee Smith, Mr. C. At the conclusion of the dinner, cutting of the birthday cake was a most delightful mixture of pleasure. When the big table was cleared of edibles it was piled high with many gifts which his friends brought for Mr. Alred.

When the guests departed, expressing their happiness and good wishes to Mr. and Mrs. Alred, Mr. Alred extended to everyone an urgent invitation to come back to his centennial celebration on July 10, 1984, assuring all that he would have plenty of rolling chairs to accommodate those who might need them.

FARMER'S WEEK PLANS ARE MADE

Auburn, Ala., July 11.—An interesting and instructive program for Farmer's Week, annual outing and short course for farm men and women at the Alabama Polytechnic Institute, is being arranged, according to Dr. L. N. Duncan, extension service director.

Dr. Duncan issued a special invitation to all farm people and others interested to attend the meeting this year which will be held from July 31 to August 2. Approximately 1,500 people, representing every county, are expected to attend.

Features of the gathering will be annual meetings of the Alabama Farm Bureau Federation and the Alabama Council of Home Demonstration clubs organizations representing the men and women of the farms.

The program will include recreation as well as instruction.

Farmer's week will be held at the Alabama Polytechnic Insitute, Auburn, this year, July 31 to August 2.

THE BALDWIN ROEDO PRIZE TROPHIES LURE FISHERMEN

Foley, Ala.—The largest accumulation of prize awards ever offered in an Alabama fishing rodeo are being assembled here for winners in the annual Baldwin County Fishing Rodeo, which will be held August 2nd and 3rd.

Governor elect Bibb Graves, who has participated in each and every one of the Baldwin Fishing Rodeos, was again the first entrant to register for the 1934 event. Gov. Graves will try his luck at deep-sea fishing, a favorite hobby of the state's next chief executive.

The best deep-sea rod and reel outfit on the market tops the prize list. There are to be prizes for first and second place for every known variety of fish that may be caught not only in the Gulf, but in the fresh water lakes and streams as well. The trophies are valued as high as $100 each, and will include everything imaginable in fishing accounterments from minnows to complete fishing tackle boxes or rods and reels.

Huge schools of ling, cavalla, king and Spanish mackerel have been encountered by fishing parties going outside during the last few days, while in the fresh water class the state limit of bream, bass, etc, should readily be available on the dates for the rodeo.

Besides the exceptional fine fishing and diversification offered in both salt and fresh water classes, the close proximity to civilization, modern conveniences and comforts will be an added drawing card. Within an hour one may return from the open sea, weigh in his catch and be back in Foley, if he so desires.

Salt water fishing, in general, has been very good the past few days and large crowds of fishermen are driving down daily. Sam T. Maddox and family, of Atlanta, Ga., while out fishing from the Swift Fishing Camp at BonSecour, caught two nice large blackfish Tuesday.

Dr. Goldner, expert registered optometrist from Brackin's will be in Dr. Hayes' office in the Exchange Hotel Building in Clanton, on Monday, July 23rd, hours 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. and on Monday once every two weeks thereafter. Twenty-five years practical experience.

Lesson for July 22

ELIJAH HEARS GOD'S VOICE

LESSON TEXT—I Kings 19:1-21.

GOLDEN TEXT—Therefore Eli said unto Samuel, Go, lie down: and it shall be, if he call thee, that thou shalt say, Speak, Lord; for they servant heareth. So Samuel went and lay down in his place. I Samuel 3:9.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Elijah Listening to God.

JUNIOR TOPIC—When Elijah Was Ready to Give Up.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How Does God Speak to Us?

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Hearing and Obeying God.

This lesson story proves Elijah to have been a man of like passions as we are (James 5:17).

I. Elijah's Flight (vv. 1-14).

Upon Ahab's return from the excitement on Mt. Carmel he told his wife all that Elijah had done—that even all her prophets had been hewn to pieces by the sword. This so enraged her that she sent a message of death to Elijah who seemed to have been waiting at the gate (vv. 1, 2). Though Elijah had courageously stood before the king and the priests of Baal, he now cowered before this woman and fled for his life.

1. Elijah under the juniper tree (vv. 3-7). The juniper tree was a shrub of the desert which afforded shelter and protection to travelers from the burning sun by day and the cold wind by night.

a. His request (v. 4). This was that he might die. The discouragement and despondency of Elijah was due to the nervous strain of nearly four years of unusual service for God which culminated on Mt. Carmel.

b. God's tender treatment (vv. 5-7).

(1) He gave him sleep (v. 5). The Lord knew that Elijah needed sleep.

(2) He sent an angel to cook Elijah's meal (vv. 6, 7). The angel of the Lord is usually understood to be the second member of the Holy Trinity. Thus we see Jehovah-Jesus preparing food for his servant Elijah just as he did afterward for his discouraged disciples by Galilee (John 21:19). God again gave him sleep and food.

2. Elijah at Horeb (vv.8-14). God had kindly ministered to his discouraged prophet so that he would be in a fit condition to receive the needed instruction and correction. Elijah had erred in running away from his field of ministry. God as a tender Father nursed back to health this runaway and erring child of his before issuing the needed and just reprimand.

a. God's interview with Elijah in the cave (vv. 9, 10).

(1) God's question (v. 9). "What doest thou here Elijah?" This was a stinging rebuke though most kindly given. It implied that his appointed messenger was now far away from the field of duty. Elijah was not where God wanted him but God sought him where he was.

(2) Elijah's answer (v. 10). Elijah tried to vindicate himself by asserting his jealous loyalty to God. Because of this loyalty the people had not only rejected his message and dishonored God, but had sought to destroy him.

b. God's interview with Elijah on the Mount (vv. 11-14). While standing before the Lord on the Mount, God caused a mighty demonstration of wind, earthquake and fire to pass before him, to show him the nature of the work which he had been doing for God, and to show him what was lacking in his work for the fullest attainment of success. Elijah had about him much of the whirlwind, earthquake, and fire. His work had been terrifying and alarming, but it lacked in gentleness and love. The world is not taken for Christ by the energy of the flesh and the enthusiasm of conventions, but by quiet hearts proclaiming God's word in the energy of the Holy Spirit, trusting him to do the work.

II. Elijah's Return (vv. 15-18).

Though Elijah had erred, God brought him again into his service. It is most comforting to know that God does not reject his servants because of their failures in times of despondency. He deals with them after the motives of their hearts. Before God would come in his chariot to take Elijah home, he sent him upon a threefold ministry:

1. To anoint Hazael king over Syria (v. 15).
2. To anoint Jehu king over Israel (v. 16).
3. To anoint Elisha as his own successor (vv. 19-21).

III. The Seven Thousand Faithful Ones (v. 18).

It must have encouraged Elijah greatly to be assured that seven thousand had not yet bowed their knees to Baal. Though Elijah's time of ministry was soon to close, the work must be carried on. His mantle fell upon Elisha.

To the Glory of God

Paul said: "Whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God." If we do these little things under the compulsion of a great motive—the glory of God—we will some day find that God has led us through these paths of obscurity in order that he might bring up up to some great deed that will advance the interests of his kingdom.

Shuts Out the Gospel

When people base their culture solely upon the wisdom of this world, the Gospel has small chance with them.

QUARTET CONTEST AT COURTHOUSE JULY 19

The ladies of the Clanton Baptist Church, Circle No. 4, will sponsor a quartet contest at the courthouse in Clanton on Thursday night, July 19, beginning at 8 o'clock. A grand prize of $10 will be given and a second prize of $5 will also be given. All quartets wishing to compete will please come at 7:30 o'clock that the program may be arranged.

An admission charge of 15c and 25c will be collected at the door. The public is invited to cooperate and the quartets are urged to compete for the prizes.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Robinson, and son, James, of Havana, Florida, arrived in Clanton last Friday to spend a few days with relatives and friends.

Recently the writer had a letter from a very lovely Christian girl who is in a certain college. She said, "I walk in rooms here in the girls' dormitory and see girls smoking and hear them using profane language. It is so disgusting." There was a time when smoking, painted, drinking, and cursing women lived in one section of town and had no standing with decent people. How things have changed in my life time, and I am not very old.

I believe in colleges. Why should not I? I am the founder and president of the Bob Jones College. I believe in education. However, there are a lot worse things than not going to college. If I had a daughter I had rather she would stay at home and manicure her finger nails at a wash tub than to go off to some college and come home cursing, smoking cigarettes, and not believing in God and the old time decencies.

Some time ago one of the friends of the Bob Jones College was riding on a train with a blatant infidel. This infidel was criticizing religion, preachers, and churches. He, not realizing that he was talking to a friend of mine, said, "Take Bob Jones and the Bob Jones College. I haven't any use for them. I wouldn't send one of my boys or girls to that kind of school." My friend let him make his speech and then quietly asked, "Have you any children?" The man said, "I have two—a son and a daughter." "Well," said my friend, "in the Bob Jones College they don't drink and gamble. They don't stay out at night. They live decent lives. Had not you rather your son and daughter would go to the sort of school even though you don't believe in religion?" The man hesitated for a moment and said, "To be honest, I believe I had rather they would go there even if they do have to take the religion than to go off to some schools where they are exposed to a lot of temptations." This country needs more colleges which stand for the real old time everyday religion and old time chaperonage and discipline.

MEMORY OF ELBERT CHANDLER

Elbert Chandler, age 19, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Chandler died in a Selma hospital July 5. Elbert was a brave sufferer and bore his affliction with patience. Elbert knew no lack of parental care, love or affection. They were ever devoted to the interest of his health; and no effort was spared that could be put forth for his comfort. All was done that skilled physicians, nurses and friends could do until God in His all-wise power saw fit to call him to that great celestial city beyond, where all is peace and rest. He is now with the greatest of all Physicians. Weep not, dear loved ones, for the Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away.

So let us look to Him who is able to sooth our sorrows and heartaches, our Heavenly Father, who is too wise to make any mistake, too great to be unkind, grant us the spirit of reconcilliation and submission, and enable us to say, "Thy will be done."

$40,000 REVENUE PAID BY T.V.A.

Montgomery, Ala., July 10. — The TVA today paid $40,000 on account into the State Treasury of Alabama.

A check for this sum was handed Governor Miller by John Neely, manager of the TVA Muscle Shoals property.

"The TVA is pleased that it can contribute in this substantial manner to the tax revenues of the state," Mr. Neely told the Governor.

"I am sure the State Treasury can use this amount to good advantage in providing for its public school system and other uses.

"The state may expect to receive greater sums with the TVA yardstick program in full swing. This $40,000 represents a payment on account from revenue during our first year of operation which, as you know, started from scratch."

The act of congress under which the TVA was created provides that five per cent of the gross proceeds received from the sale of power generated at Wilson Dam, or from any other dam built within the state, should go annually to the state of Alabama. The same provision guarantee the State of Tennessee an equal percentage of gross sales from power generated at dams in that state.

That this initial payment will be low compared with future obligations is indicated, officials say, by the growing sale of TVA power.

Payment of the $40,000 indicated the sales from Wilson Dam were in the neighborhood of a million dollars.

"I am happy that the authority has thus been able to make a substantial payment to the State of Alabama," David E. Lilienthal, director in charge of power, said in asking Mr. Neely to present the check to the governor. "The people of Alabama have shown a fine spirit of cooperation with the work of the authority. It should be pointed out that the people of the state are benefitted in two ways from the operations of the industry. Not only will they be in a position to receive personal dividends in the form of very much lower electric rates, but as a unit of government they will receive these lump sums to help ease their tax burdens."

MAN KILLED IN AUTO ACCIDENT

G. B. McAllister of Birmingham Victim of Accident Last Sunday a.m.

George B. McAllister, age 34 years, painter and interior decorator, of Birmingham, was instantly killed about four o'clock last Sunday morning, when his car turned over on a steep curve near Ed Mims's camp about two miles down the river below Lay Dam.

Mr. McAllister with his wife accompanied by his brother, John D. McAllister and wife, were on their way to Ed Mims's camp to spend Sunday. The latter were riding in the rumble seat of a Flint roadster driven by George B. McAllister. As the car rounded a curve on a steep hill near the river, the driver lost control of the machine. It turned over and rolled down a steep embankment about fifteen feet, pinning the driver underneath, and crushing his life out instantly.

The wife of the dead man, who was with him in the front seat of the car, was the only member of the party who was not trapped in the wreck. She succeeded in helping Mr. and Mrs. John B. McAllister get out of the car. Help was summoned from the Mims Camp, and the body of the dead man could not be rescued until the car was lifted by a block and tackle.

Mell Martin was notified and hastened to the scene of the wreck. Mr. and Mrs. John D. McAllister were brought to the hospital here and treated for minor injuries. The body of George B. McAllister was prepared for burial by Martin and sent to Birmingham Sunday night.

Mr. Martin stated that the place where the wreck occurred is a very treacherous curve, where another wreck happened a few months ago.

John J. Dillinger Killed By Officers

Noted Criminal Trapped In Theatre in Chicago On Sunday Night

The biggest piece of news of the past week was the killing of John Dillinger, America's most notorious modern day criminal, by Federal officers in Chicago.

For more than a year Dillinger has blazed a trail of crime across the United States, robbing banks by the wholesale, and killing ruthlessly all who came in his way. He has been hunted constantly by federal and state officers.

Sunday night federal officers in Chicago found out that the noted criminal planned to attend a certain picture show. Fifteen officers surrounded the place and saw him buy a ticket and enter.

For two hours they waited for him to come out. When he emerged and started down the street five officers drew guns on him. He backed into an alley, reaching for his gun at the same time. The officers had the drop on him and riddled his body with bullets. He died on the way to a hospital.

SITES INSPECTED FOR POSTOFFICE

People Had A Chance to Express First, Second and Third Choice

In accordance with his prior announcement, Mr. T. C. Gibbs, postoffice inspector, came to Clanton last Wednesday for the purpose of making a personal inspection of the ten different sites that have been offered to the government for the erection of a federal postoffice building in Clanton.

Accompanied by Acting Postmaster, Billy Smith, and J. Mell Martin representing the Clanton Kiwanis Club, Mr. Gibbs visited personally all of the proposed sites, and took special note of all the details surrounding each place with a view to suitability for the building proposed.

A photographer was secured to make pictures of each of the ten proposed locations, which pictures were taken by Mr. Gibbs, and made a part of his report.

In order to determine somewhat the wishes of the people of Clanton relative to the location of the new postoffice, Mr. Gibbs consented to allow the people to vote on the question, expressing their first, second, and third choice of a location from among the ten proposed.

Acting Postmaster, Billy Smith and J. Mell Martin prepared a box and ballots to be used. Mr. Gibbs sealed up the box, and Mr. Smith and Mr. Martin obtained votes from every business man they could contact in town. The vote was not made known to anyone here. It will be used solely by Mr. Gibbs in making recommendations to the department.

THANKS SENT TO MRS. REYNOLDS FROM BRYCE HOSPITAL PATIENT

Miss Johnnie Hayes, young girl from near Jemison, who was carried to the insane asylum by Mr. and Mrs. Claude Reynolds a few weeks ago, writes back to Mrs. Reynolds expressing her gratitude to them for treating her so nicely on the trip over there. Some excerpts from the letter follow:

"Some little time has slipped by since I came back to the hospital, and daily I have intended to write you and thank you for the kindness snown me while in your care. You may have thought me unappreciative because I acted so indifferently, but I was in no condition at that time to show appreciation. I shall never forget how thoughtful and kind you and your husband were to me. Thanking you for your kindness, I am, very sincerely.—Johnnie Hayes."

Baptist Pastor And Son Charged With Killing Aged Mr. Pickens

Moulton, Ala., July 23.—The Rev. L. P. Royer, pastor of the Moulton Baptist church, and his son, William Royer, were placed in jail here today on murder charges in connection with the ambush slaying of Frank Pickens, 81, widely known farmer and deacon in Mr. Royer's church.

Picken's body, bearing a wound in the chest from a load of buckshot, was found half a mile east of here about 10 a.m. today by Hoyt Turner, a neighbor.

Mr. Royer and his son were arrested this afternoon on warrants sworn to by Paul Pickens, a son of the slain man.

Sheriff Kumpe Ayers said he was told that the minister and his son were seen driving their automobile from the vicinity of the slaying. The Sheriff also confiscated a shotgun from the Royer home.

The Sheriff said Royer was arrested in the basement in the church while the minister was reading the Bible. The son was taken into custody when he went to the county jail to visit his father.

Sheriff Ayers said the investigation would be continued and that bloodhounds were being brought here to put on the trail of the slayer.

Pickens was shot while riding a mule from his farm into Moulton. Sheriff Ayers said his body apparently was dragged for some distance by the frightened animal.

Royer has been pastor of the Baptist church here for three years. The church is the leading church of the denomination here.

Sheriff Ayers said there had been "considerable criticism recently" of the Rev. Royer.

The Sheriff also said that, when he went to the church to arrest the minister, the Rev. Royer told him that he had heard something about the slaying of Pickens, but expressed surprise at being accused of the slaying.

"However, they've accused me of about everything else," the Sheriff quoted the minister as saying.

The Rev. Royer, members of his congregation said, had promised to resign from the pastorate on September 1.

Recently, however, members of the church had attempted to prevail upon the minister to make his resignation effective at once.

This the minister had declined to do.

The dead man, Mr. Pickens, is the father of J. J. Pickens, formerly of Clanton, and grandfather of Mr. Grady Heflin. Mr. and Mrs. Heflin went to Moulton Tuesday to attend the funeral.

Bankhead Cotton Law Will Be Put Into Operation In Chilton County

Organiation and plans for the administration of the Bankhead cotton act in Chilton County are rapidly being completed according to announcements of our county agent, J. W. Fant.

Every detail that will help speed the work up when the necessary forms arrive from Washington is being attended to by the county agent and committeemen. These forms are now expected daily from the Washington office.

When the forms are received and gotten in shape, meetings will be called at convenient points in the county where a headquarters will be established and cotton growers may come to make their applications for allotments and tax exemption certificates, more commonly called gin certificates.

Each 1934-35 cotton acreage reduction contract signer will make application for all cotton grown on lands covered by his contract. In such applications all tenants and croppers will be listed and the gin certificates issued to each individual cropper, tenant and landlord in accordance with the amount he is entitled to.

In case of cotton growers, growing cotton on lands not covered by 1934-35 cotton acreage reduction contracts the following types of farmers will make applications:

(1) Landowners. (2) Renters paying cash rent. (3) Renters paying standing rent in cotton. (4) Share tenants or croppers operating an entire farm.

Letters are being received by the county agent from growers making application for gin certificates. All these applications will be made on an official form furnished by the government.

There are only two forms, one an application and the other for listing each farmer's quota on a given farm.

The plan is comparatively simple and can be speedily put into operation when the proper forms are rereceived.

When applications are finished they will be sent to the Alabama State allotment board who will issue the gin certificates, forward them to the county agent's office to be distributed to the growers.

Applications covering all cotton growing on July 1st will be necessary if the grower is to secure gin certificates and sell any of his cotton tax exempt. The tax is half the average market price not to be less than 5c per pound. The tax rate will be set by the Secretary of Agriculture as the price varies from time to time.

Due to the large number of cotton growers in Chilton County and the large numbers of papers to be handled, the committeemen and county agent emphasizes the importance of full cooperation on the part of every grower in the county in getting their applications properly made out in order that the work may be carried on as speedily as possible, and to insure the issuance of the gin certificates as soon as possible.

HUGH THOMPSON TAKES OVER OLD JOE MADDOX GIN OUTFIT

Through recent transactions Hugh F. Thompson became the owner of the gin and warehouse property located on the highway and Fourth Avenue, which for the past quarter of a century has been operated by Joe Maddox. The business was probably more familiarly known as Clanton Mill and Gin Co. It will now be known as Thompson Brothers Gin and Warehouse No. 2.

This outfit becomes the third unit of gins owned and operated by Mr. Thompson. For some time he has been operating in both Thorsby and Jemison. The Clanton unit will likely be placed under the direction of Mr. Joe Maddox, said Mr. Thompson.

Last week Mr. Thompson moved his family back to Clanton from Thorsby, where he has been living for the past six or eight years. He will live in his old home on First Street near the cemetery.

His many friends in Clanton will be glad to learn that Mr. Thompson has resumed his business connections here and that his family has moved back to Clanton.

CLANTON VOTES NEXT MONDAY

On Propositions of City Hall and Extension of Waterworks System

Next Monday, July 30, is the day upon which the people of Clanton will express themselves by vote upon the proposition of borrowing $32,000 from the Public Works Administration, to be used for the erection of a city hall and extension of the city waterworks system.

The town council has already received approval of its application for the loan for this purpose, but will not proceed further with the matter until and unless it is approved by a majority vote of the people of the town.

Thirty per cent of the amount of the loan will be an outright gift from the federal government through the Public Works Administration. Seventy per cent of the loan will have to be paid back over a period of thirty years, with interest at four per cent.

It has been pointed out that a definite location for the city hall has not been selected by the council. At least one piece of property has been tendered them at an attractive price. It is understood that the council intends, if the proposition is approved by the voters, to ask for other property to be submitted for the location, and it is very likely that quite a few possible locations will com ein for consideration before the matter is finally settled.

Extension of the waterworks system is a very important matter. It means additional convenience of water for many homes in the city that have not had it heretofore. Also it means much needed additional fire protection, which will result in reduction of insurance rates on many pieces of property in the city.

The city officials are anxious that all citizens of the town study these proposals thoroughly and express themselves in the election next Monday. They want to do what the people of the town want them to do, and the result of next Monday's balloting will tell the tale.

COUNTY PICNIC PLANS COMPLETE

Will Be Held at the Ben Sims Grove on Thursday August 2

The date for the county-wide picnic has been definitely set for Thursday, August 2, which is Thursday of next week. The place selected for the picnic is the Ben Sims Grove, on the Birmingham Highway, 2 miles north of Clanton.

Complete program for the day has been arranged under direction of County Agent, J. W. Fant, and Home Agent, Miss Ruth Pardue. Elsewhere on this page is a copy of the program as arranged, beginning at 9:30 in the morning, and concluding at 2:30 in the afternoon with a baseball game at the high school park.

Some special features on the program will engage the attention of our citizens; for instance the address to be delivered by C. E. Stapp, former county agent of Chilton County; and the address of Mrs. M. L. Batson, president of the Alabama Council of Home Demonstration Clubs.

Two other high lights of the morning program will be addresses by Dr. L. N. Duncan, of Auburn, director of the Alabama Agricultural Extension Service and Hon. W. B. Oliver, our representative in the United States Congress.

The afternoon program will be featured by addresses from Secretary of State Pete B. Jarman, who will discuss the purposes of the American Legion; Mr. J. A. Beaty, general manager of the Alabama Farm Bureau Cotton Association, will make an address that will be of intense interest to the farmers.

All along through the program there will be a variety of most interesting comedy and humorous skits furnished by "Preacher" Salser and Luther Patrick, Alabama's premier entertainers. They were not put on the program in any particular place, because past experience has proven that they are likely to break out any time and any place. When the spirit moves them, they come forth, and it is always fun to see and hear them.

Plenty of good things to eat and drink are on the menu for the day. The women's clubs of the county have charge of that part of the program. All during the day they will have plenty of refreshing cool drinks available. At noon time they will have ready a vast quantity of barbecued meats, sandwiches, and other things of particular interest for that time of the day.

Everything has been arranged by Mr. Fant and Miss Pardue to make this picnic occasion equal to any we have had heretofore. Everybody is urged to make arrangements to attend. It is hoped that every community in the county will be represented by a large delegation. Bring the women and children, and come prepared to get the full spirit of the occasion. The purpose is to give our people from all parts of the county a chance to get together, enjoy each other's fellowship and acquaintance, and have a good time.

Mrs. Wess Danforth and daughters, Misses Mildred and Janice and Mr. Swanson Lynch, from Longview, Texas, visited Mrs. Marion Gore here last week.

Alabama To Get Two Million More

Relief Funds to Be Expended During the Month of August

Formal notice of a grant to Alabama of $2,000,000 of federal funds to be expended for relief in this state during August, was received Monday by Governor Miller in a letter from Aubrey Williams, acting administrator of the FERA, this grant being made in accordance with the Governor's application forwarded to Washington on June 29.

The various relief purposes for which the $2,000,000 allocated to Alabama for the month of August is to be spent and the amount provided for each of these purposes, follows: For general relief $1,371,985; for transient relief $46,000; for obligations incurred during July in connection with relief research projects $9,015; for rural rehabilitation $400,000; for educational programs $38,000; for professional work projects $45,000; for bringing and distributing cattle from drouth areas $90,000.

On July 15 the governor received and turned over to Thad Holt, State relief administrator a check from the FERA for $2,492,450 to cover relief activities during July—this amount including $1,742,000 for general relief; $65,000 for transient relief; $78,000 for relief research projects; $500,000 for rural rehabilitation; $7,650 for financing a social workers training program, and $120,000 for transportation into the state of cattle from the drouth areas of the northwest and distributing them.

Plymouth Comes Out With New 6

Announced only a short time ago—the latest addition to the Plymouth line already has won popularity. The car is the Plymouth Special Six, which is now in full production and is on display at Polk Brothers Motor Co.

The Plymouth Special Six is "designed for motorists who want luxury features at the lowest possible cost, plus the latest in engineering and mechanical advantages."

Prices on the Plymouth Special Six start at $560, f.o.b., Detroit. Models include a four-door sedan, two-door sedan; a town sedan, with built-in trunk; rumble seat coupe and a business coupe.

The Plymouth Special Six not only has unusual performance abilities, but also an array of new "de luxe" features.

These include dual trumpet chromium-plated horn; glove compartment on the instrument panel; dual tail and stop lights; valchrome finish radiator grille; all-steel artillery wheels with 17x5.25 tires; new interior sun visor, and other refinements.

With Plymouth sales thus far this year more than double the same time last year, the introduction of the Special Six now gives Plymouth the most complete line of cars in the low price field. It has been the aim of the Corporation to produce in this addition to the Plymouth line, a motor car that would really be de luxe in every way, and at the same time have all of the mechanical advantages that the public wants. The Plymouth Special Six is not only one of the most unusual performers that Plymouth has ever produced, engineering tests also prove it to be most economical in operation and upkeep.

The Plymouth Special Six brings to its price field many new mechanical and interior luxury features.

In the interior of the car, for instance, the seat cushions have extra padding and upholstery of Bedford cord. The instrument panel has an ash receiver and a glove box. There is a new attractive sun visor, adjustable to any position. In the rear seat are two recessed arm rests, and two ash receivers. There is also a plated rail foot rest.

Overall length of the new car is 181½ inches. With the new all-steel artillery wheels, the new radiator grille and the dual horns, the Special Six has a decidedly big car appearance. The Plymouth Special Six, of couse, has such typical Chrysler Motors features as four-wheel self-equalizing hydraulic brakes and a Safety-Steel body. Mechanical features include T-slot four-ring pistons; four large main bearings; a silent chain-driven camshaft; an oil filter and chankcase ventilator; manifold heat control with seasonal adjustment; independent hand brake; a total of 30 anti-friction bearings and shockless cross steering. Floating Power, first introduced in the Plymouth car and since adopted for all the Chrysler Motors products, is of course retained in this new model, insuring a smoothness of proformance and an absence of vibration that cannot be duplicated without this feature.

The Plymouth Motor Corporation's low-priced line includes the lowest priced car with hydraulic brakes and the lowest-priced four-door six-cylinder sedan in the world. The Plymouth De Luxe Six, with 114 inch wheelbase, is the largest car of its type in the low price field.

ENTERTAINMENT AT VERBENA

There will be music and a vaudeville at the Verbena High School on Friday night, August 3. The program will be put on by local entertainers, featuring Frances Gulledge, Edna Williamson, Helen Rainer, radio entertainers. The program will consist of orchestra numbers, comedy sketches tap dancing, etc. The admission will be 10c and 15c, part of which will go to the school.

MARVIN MARTIN WRITES

To the Republican Voters of Chilton County:

I would like to say a few words in regard to the political situation in this county. It seems there are a few people who are not satisfied with the Republican ticket that the majority of the legal voters want, because they didn't get the man they voted for. I dare say there is at least 90 per cent of us that failed to get all of our choice. On the other hand there are very few who failed to get any they voted for. But you went to the polls and cast your ballot, and by so doing, you pledged yourself to the Republican ticket this coming November. Now think, does your pledge mean anything to you and your honor?

I was watching some children play hide and seek. One boy I thought was nearly the life of the game seemed to be lucky and didn't have to count as they called it. Finally this boy was hte first one spied, which made him the one to count or hunt the others. When he was spied there was a great change come over him. He charged his playmates with telling on him, and declared he would not play any more—that he would just take his little brother and sister and go home. His interest in the game was gone when it didn't go to suit him.

So now, are we going to be like that boy and take our followers and go some place else, or are we going to finish the game? I say let's play. We probably won't have to count next time.—Yours for the success of the Republican party.—Marvin Martin.

MICAIAH SPEAKS THE TRUTH

LESSON TEXT—I Kings 22:1-40.

GOLDEN TEXT—And Micaiah said, As the Lord liveth, what the Lord saith unto me, that will I speak. I Kings 22:14.

PRIMARY TOPIC—A Man Who Told the Truth.

JUNIOR TOPIC—A Man Who Dared to Tell the Truth.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Telling the Truth Under Difficulties.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Courageous Truth-Telling.

I. A League Between Two Kings (vv. 1-4).

1. Who these kings were (v. 2).

a. Jehoshaphat, king of Judah. He was for the most part a good king, having done much to put down idolatry and restore the worship of the true God.

b. Ahab, king of Israel. He was a weak and wicked king.

2. The occasion (v. 2). It was on a visit of Jehoshaphat to Ahab, perhaps for the cultivation of a friendly relationship in case of an attack by the Syrians, or it may have been because of a social relation incident to the marriage of Jehoshaphat's son to Ahab's daughter, the wicked Athaliah.

3. The purpose of (vv. 3, 4). It was a merger for the purpose of conquest. The fortified city of Ramoth-gilead had been ceded to Ahab as the result of a previous war, but it had not been actually turned over. Jehoshaphat pledged unreservedly the support of his people, without seeking the mind of God.

II. Advice From the Lord Sought (vv. 5-28).

Even though the merger had been formed Jehoshaphat was unwilling to go into battle without inquiring of the Lord.

1. Through a group of prophets (v. 6; 9-12). Some four hundred prophets responded to the call of Ahab. Who those prophets were we are not told. Evidently they were not prophets of Baal (I Kings 18:19); neither were they true prophets of the Lord. They knew Ahab's wish and therefore sought to curry favor with him by encouraging him to follow out his desire. Zedekiah, their leader, symbolized the success of the joint campaign by the use of horns of iron. Jehoshaphat sensed the falseness of these prophets.

2. A message from the Lord's prophet desired (v. 7). The king of Judah was unwilling to carry out his contract with Ahab without knowing the mind of God as to the matter. This he should have sought before consenting to the merger.

3. Micaiah speaks the truth (vv. 13-28).

a. He first speaks in irony (v. 15). The king's messenger who brought Micaiah from prison advised him to speak that which would be pleasing to the king, but Micaiah was not a man-server but God's faithful servant. He courageously declared that his message would be what God told him to say (v. 14). Regardless of result he would do only as God directed.

b. Micaiah speaks plainly (vv. 16-28) Ahab detected the prophet's ironic speech and demanded of him the plain truth. To this demand Micaiah responded by making clear the peril which awaited them. He also told Ahab that through lying spirits he would be lured to a place of death. This faithfulness on the part of God's prophet was rewarded by flouting and smiting by the false prophets and with imprisonment from the king. The true prophet will speak God's word regardless of consequences.

From Micaiah's experience we should learn:

(1) The inevitable opposition between God's message and the purposes of evil men. This explains why true preachers of the Word of God are unpopular, and are called narrow and glum.

(2) The folly of the attitude of hatred against those who truly witness against them. Ahab hated Micaiah because Micaiah told him what would come to him for such a course of action. God's prophet did not make the evil but only made it known.

III. The Doom of Ahab (vv. 29-40).

1. He went forth to battle in spite of Micaiah's warning. The issue proved that Micaiah was right.

2. He disguised himself as a common soldier. He thought to escape the predicted fate through disguise, but an arrow from the enemy pierced him in spite of his armor. Ahab died as predicted and his blood was licked by the dogs as Elijah had said (I Kings 21:19). There is a bitter end coming to those who will not heed God's warning. The only way to escape doom is to turn away from sin.

Greatest Happiness

There is only one thing greater than happiness in the world, and that is holiness, and it is not in our keeping; but what God has put in our power is the happiness of those about us, and that is largely to be secured by our being kind to them.

Promise of God

I would sooner walk in the dark, and hold hard to a promise of my God, than trust in the light of the brightest day that ever dawned.—C. H. Spurgeon.
